A URILD'S MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

The Corener's Jury Say It Was Due to Suffo-Warwick township has been excited for the past few weeks, the occasion being the ous death of an infant. Coroner an was notified of the death a few nd be made an examination. He ago and he made an examination. He atlasfied that there was some mystery seted with the death of the child and on ay he empanelled a jury to hold an bt. Dr. Brobst was the coroner's phydecian, he failed to make a post-mortem examination and the coroner's jury refused to sign a verdict. Yesterday the coroner again went to Warwick township and took with him as his physician Dr. William Compton.
The jury consisting of Julius F. Sturgis, A.
K. Reidenbach, Haydn H. Tshudy, H.
K. Helman, Albert F. Christ and Hiram holtzhouse accompanied the physician
and coroner to the graveyard at Kissel Hill,
he remains of the infant were disinterred, and Dr. Compton made a post-mortem exammation. The doctor found that the face and arms of the child were discolored and that the ower part of the body and limbs were naaminal in color. There were no marks of riolence on the body. In the throat of the child there was considerable mucous which may have strangled it, or it may have been strangled by some one.

The testimony taken showed the following facts: Mra. Susan Young, who had been a widow for several years, gave birth to achild on Sundey afternoon, May 30. It lived two hours and then died. Dr. Brobst attended Mra. Young and delivered the child. After the death of the child a raisin box was procured and the man suspected of being the father gave a party $6 to bury the child. The burial was done secretly that same night in the cemetery at Kasel Hill. It was evidently done in a hurry, for the box was placed only aix inches under the ground. The jury rendered a verdict that death resulted from mysterious sufficient in the cemetery at the probable that the authorities will take hold of the matter and the mother and father of the child arrested.

THE PIEC PUBLIC BALLWAY.

in a New York "World" Article.
To the Editor of the New York World.
In to-day's edition of the World I notice the following paragraph referring to a historical fact of too great importance and significance for of too great importance and significance to go unobserved:

It is an interesting fact that the first locomotive engine ever placed on a road on this continent was imported from England by the Delaware and Hudson Canal company, and made its first trip on their road in 1829.

It was constructed by Foster Roswick & Co., of Stourbridge, England, and called the "Stourbridge Lion," because of the fierce lion's head painted in red on the front of the boller. It was first run on the Delaware and Hudson line from Honesdale to Scelyville and return on August 8th, 1828. It was more than a year later (Sept. 18, 1830) when the first railway on which steam losomotives were used in England was opened for business—the Liverpool & Manchester railway. When Horstio Ailen set the "Stourbridge Lion" in motion in Honesdale, Aug. 8, 1829, there were but twenty-three miles of railroad in the United States.

While I can corroborate the former portion miles of railroad in the United States.

While I can corroborate the former portion of the above quotation, I feel that you, as well as all your intelligent readers, will agree as to the advisability and necessity of correcting an error relative to the first railway upon which steam locomotives were used, which arises, doubtless, through some anachronism in record. The Stockton & Darlington railiway was the first public railway in the world, and, as some of your readers may know, was built by George Stephenson during 1823-4 and opened for public traffic on the 27th of September, 1825, when No. 1 engine, "Locomotive," not long ago on view with the "Stourbridge Lion" in the National Exposition of Unitway Appliances in Chicago, hauled the train. The cost of this engine was £500. The Liverpool & Manchester line was opened five years later, Sept. 15, 1830. Stephenson's assistant in setting out the first public railway, the late Mr. John Dixon (to whom many years later, I was apprenticed to learn my profession) afterward assisted to stake out the Liverpool & Manchester line and had charge of that section embracing the tamous and treacherous Chat Moss, which formed one of the most prominent and interesting engineering difficulties encountered during its construction. The fact is that during the construction of the Liverpool & Manchester road the directors were very undecided as to whether that line should be worked with locomotive or stationary engines, and three of them visited Darlington for the purpose of conferring with Edward Pease "the latter of railways." and seeing how the pose of conferring with Edward Pease "the father of railways," and seeing how the locomotives worked on the railway in operation there. The result of this visit was the tion there. The result of this visit was the memorable contest which took place in 1829 in which the engines of Stephenson, Hackworth, Murdock, and Trevethick took part, when Stephenson's "Rocket" led the way and won the premium which had been oflered. I have had the pleasure of discussing this subject with Horatio Allen, when he agreed with me that many a throttle-valve had grown wheezy with work ere he saw the "Stourbridge Liou." The celebration of the jubilee of the opening of the Stockton & Darlington railway took place in the quiet Quaker town of Darlington on the

the quiet Quaker fown of Darlington on the 27th and 28th of September, 1875, and was on a scale of grandeur and magnificence which became the greatness of the occasion. Representatives of all the principal railways in the world, including many American ones, were present. No. 1 engine, the first that ever pulled a passenger train, is mounted on a pedestal in front of the railway station at Darlington, and may at any time be seen by those of your readers who, when visiting Europe, are curious snough to spend a lew hours in the birth-place of railways. In the quiet burial grounds at Darlington there lies more of the dust of the railway pioneers than in any other place on the face of the globe. Yours truly, CHARLES MACNAY. Lancaster, Pa., June 13.

Committed and Released Bert Williams, Jos. Daily, Geo. Breen, Jas. Donnelly, Andrew Shay, Grant Dorwart and Donnelly, Andrew Shay, Grant Dorwart and Harry McAleer were heard by Alderman McConomy on Wednesday afternoon, on charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct preferred by Albon Ingram, whose disorderly house was raided a few nights ago. The alderman gave the parties a chance to pay the costs or be committed, and the alderman committed them for 29 days each. Officers Pyle and Welsh took them to the station house and while there the officers were served with a writ of habeas corpus, at lowed by Judge Patterson. The men were taken to the judge's office and after hearing taken to the judge's office and after hearing the testimony of the officers the judge dis-charged them from custody on the ground that no case had been made out against them. The alderman did not appear at the hearing before the judge, and the prosecutor could not as he had been committed on the pre-vious day for a term of 30 days.

Rev. Dr. J. s. Kieffer on Dr. Nevin.
From the Reformed Church Messenger.
Perhaps none of the great teachers of modern times has approached more nearly to the realization of the ideal relation of a master to his pupils. In thinking of him, one cannot belp thinking of those ancient phile-sophers, whose names are for all time and whose teachings are "everlasting posses-sions." As a thinker, his name is worthy to sions." As a thinker, his name is worthy to be enrolled with those of Plato and Aristotle, "the masters of those who know." Like them, he was a centre and source of intellectual forces whose limit no man can fix. But he was more than this. He was not only a philosopher, but also a prophet; he was not merely an intellectual prince, but likewise a spiritual seer. Combined with intellectual powers of the loftiest character, his was the gift also of profound and far-reaching spiritual insight; and in this, to a large extent, lay the secret of his influence and power. In this pure and exalted spirit there was much that was akin to the spirit of him of whom the eagle is the appropriate symbol, and of whom it is written:
