LANCASTER, JUNE 22, 1886.

Cleveland and Pensions.
Mr. Cleveland is not afraid to run counter to that mawkish sentimentalism which would allow legislation pertaining to pensions, whether intrinsically right or not, to receive official approval.

The president boldly declares that most of the pension bills that have passed the Senate and House never get before Congress in their proper form, but are hurried through at nominal sessions called specially for their consideration.

The president takes a very proper view of the situation in considering that he is the trustee of the money that a generous government laid aside for the maintenance of those who had really fought and become disabled in its behalf.

The president by thus taking the people into his confidence and giving to them conscientiously his reasons for refusing to approve apparently meritorious bills, attains each day a larger degree of personal strength.

Religion in Education.
In these days of college commencements when the Unknowable and the Unthinkable are contending for the mastery of the mind of the average young collegian, and to believe in God and a future state is unprogressive, it is refreshing to listen to these sentiments of Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, of New York.

Coast Defenses.
A bill has been introduced in the House appropriating $11,000,000 for the building of revolving steel turrets for the defense of important harbors, and contemplating the annual appropriation of $8,000,000 until the system of defense is completed.

PERSONAL.
STATE SENATOR LEWIS EMERY, JR., an ambitious candidate for Congress from the Sixteenth district of the Republican ticket.

Germany has built a line of these revolving forts, mounting heavy guns along her coasts and they are necessary to make the use of torpedoes practicable.

The New Cardinal.
It was a memorable occasion in Baltimore on Monday when Monsignor Straniero, the Papal legate, and his companions were formally presented to Cardinal Gibbons, to whom they had been delegated by the Pope to convey the official announcement of the Baltimore prelate's elevation to his new dignity.

Cardinal Gibbons eminently deserves the high rank to which he has been elevated. For, though the junior of many prelates in wearing the Episcopal robes, he has shown that they were wisely bestowed. He is a man of great learning and eloquence, and promises to have a long career of usefulness before him.

REASON FOR THE FUTURE.
The Reasons Given by the President Why Some Pension Bills Cannot Be Signed.
The president in his veto messages refers to the bill granting a pension to Elizabeth S. DeKraft and his objection is that it is not possible to advantage to the beneficiaries.

Why They All Decline.
From the Cecil Co., Md., Democrat.
The refusal of Mr. Kinloch Nelson to accept the vacant Episcopal chair of the diocese of Eastern, brings to the attention of the members and friends of his church, a very grave and embarrassing, if not mortifying, question.
