Lost on This Subject. moral which most of the news papers find and point out in the recent nasty Messaros case in Philadelphia is that women should be very circumspect in their relations with clergymen, and clergymen should keep themselves above suspicion in relations with women. This particular moral is lost on the subject involved in this particular case. Messaros is used to this kind of scandals; he is the subject of them about once a year and seems to rather enjoy being advertised by some fresh sensation. If he were a man of ordinary delicacy of feeling, or had a congregation with a proper appreciation of his own character and of the sacredness and elevation of the office which he fills, they would either have got rid of him long ago, or compelled him to avoid even that appearance of evil which surrounds him. If he is not an utterly bad and thoroughly unprincipled creature, he is at least a very weak and nasty one who brings the ministry into discredit by his association with it.

It is very plain that in the present case the woman is not a fit subject for sympathy. Her conduct under all the circumstances was far from that of a woman of delieacy or instinctive sense of virtue. It looks as though she tried to trap the pastor; and he was a very willing victim.

This is not the first nor the worst charge ever brought against this Greek preacher. Within less than a year he was specifically accused by a responsible authority of a dozen gross offenses, any one of which if proved ought to have deposed him from the pulpit. He brazened them all through. without any refutation, and fell back upon a vote of renewed confidence passed by his congregation without any sincere investigation of the facts. For their conduct on that occasion his members deserve no commiseration in their present disgrace and no outcome of it is likely to carry much of a moral to them and their paster They rather seem to like the suspicion with which his frequent equivocal positions surrounds him; and moralizing is lost on Wolfe And the Democrats.

Some of the Republican newspapers and politicians who are more apprehensive than they are willing to confess of Wolfe's candidacy, are trying to drive Republicans away from his support by raising the cry that he is a candidate in the interest of the Democracy and that the latter are nursing the Prohibition movement for their own political purposes. There need not be any misunderstanding or misrepresentation on this subject. The Democrats of Pennsylvania are not Prohibitionists nor for prohibition, and Mr. Wolfe's candidacy-if he become the Prohibition candidate-will be clearly and unmistakably his own, upon an issue with which the Democrats have not and will not profess to have any sympathy. There is no double-dealing nor deceit about them; they are for a proper regulation of the liquor traffic by law and an honest enforcement of these laws. With the Republicans of Pennsylvania it is different; many of them profess to be for prohibition and in many sections for years they have kept the promise to the ear and broken it to the hope of the anti-liquor people. Now that they must face the issue they want to dodge it; and they raise the cry that the Prohibition party is a Democratic ally. If the Prohibition people are sincere and honest in their purpose to force their principle as a political issue they will not be deceived by the device of their Republican friends. At the same time the Democrats will not try to deceive them.

Need of Irish Self-Aid.

In sending $1,700 to the Irish Parliamentary fund, $250 of which was his own subscription, Archbishop Croke, of Cashel, Ireland, takes occasion to emphasize the necessity of Irishmen, in the present juncture of affairs, co-operating heartily with their friends in America to supply the funds needed to carry on to victory the Irish cause in the coming elections.

It is a timely call. America has been very generous in Erin's cause, for the reason that her fight represents the same principles for which our forefathers of the Revolution battled. But all aid from without must be co-operative, not initiative. For it is as true now as it was in the days of Byron's trumpet call to Greece: Know ye not, who would be free, Themselves must strike the blow.

Archbishop Croke's words should impress this lesson deep on Irish minds. The future weal or woe of their country will depend upon the measure of their exertions now. And the large aid they are receiving from all quarters of the globe should lend a stimulus to their own efforts that victory, now within sight, may not clude their

Not Sound.

The senators did themselves no credit who secured a reconsideration and expect to achieve the final indefinite postpone ment of Beck's bill to prohibit senators from being attorneys of railroads which get aid from the government. The natural inference of the public mind is against the improved and stocked, near Atlanta.

more damaging suspicion is created against the Senate by virtually refusing to pass this measure.

If a majority of senators are paid attorneys for railroads whose grants from the government come before them for determination by their votes, it is fair to pre sume they will be influenced in the senatorial action by their professional employment; and if their own sense of propriety does not withhold them from this the law ought to restrain them.

It wed to be said that some of the judges of our supreme court took and used free railroad passes, which are a violation of the constitution, because they held that to refuse them was a sort of acknowledgment of the correctness of the popular suspicion that even a supreme judge could not be entirely fair between parties litigant, if he had a favor of large money value in his pocket from one side to the litigation. This was not, however, a sufficient reason for a judge to take a pass; and we believe they have all quit it. We hope so, anyhow.

LOGAN and Blaine talk of antagonizing the president. They should recall the fate of Slaymaker's bull.

LORD BEACONSFIRED, in "Coningsby," called attention to the precocity of great men, and now James Sully, in the Nineteeeth Cen tury, after showing that exceptional capacity s almost always precocious, proceeds to explain that the man of genius possesses from birth a finer brain than his fellows, just as another man may possess a finer constitution or a higher capacity for seeing or hearing at a distance. Men are certainly born not only with a special vitality which keeps them alive beyond the average duration of life, but with a special freedom from weak places which gives them an otherwise inexplicable capacity for endurance. A fine brain is as natural a circumstance as a fine physique, and it is quite possible that such a possession may be condition of precocity.

The commonly received theory is that precocity arises from disease, or from abnormal development of brain at the expense of the physical powers or of some one part of the brain at the expense of the rest. That some of our most able men narrowly escape being cranks appears a self-evident fact.

MR. QUAY says the action of the Beaver county Republican convention instructing him to support Beaver, Davis and Norris will leave his hands tied at the state conven Uson. Matthew is, however, capable of cutting the Gordian knot.

AT last the walking craze has been turned to practical account and the New York National Guard is learning how to march. Eight of them in fatigue uniform, carrying rifle and accoutrements, are competing for valuable prizes on the Glenwood Island track. They carry knapsacks weighing 401 pounds and no doubt bless the cool weather. There is also a prize offered for the competitor making the most soldierly appearance during the week. The course is eight laps to the mile, or 660 feet. The contestants will travel sixty-six hours go-as-you-please, and must make at least sixty-six miles in that time. The contest will last for nine weeks, with a different set of men for each week.

It appears probable that the French government will sanction the Panama Canal company's proposed lottery loan of $120,000,000. The company's obligations thus far amount to $167,988,000, and the annual interest charge is about $6,000,000.

CONSIDERABLE feeling has been caused among those who had the sale of Gen. Grant's memoirs by the discovery that in some mysterious fashion books have been placed upon the market at a figure lower than the price agreed upon by the syndicate that controlled the work. Detectives were employed to lerret out the mystery, but to no purpose. It was suggested that perhaps those agents who were making phenomenal sales in a circumscribed locality were in reality in league with rate-cutting booksellers. However it the public will be glad to learn that break has been made in the price of the book, for it was fixed at a figure out of all proportion to its real worth. A suffering reading public, long accustomed to being swindled, will be pleased at the novelty of seeing a publishing monopoly smashed to

considered this act not only an ecclesiastical misdemeanor, but a violation of the comity that should obtain between bishops. Acri-monious letters have been exchanged, in monious letters have been exchanged, in which the good prelates courteously call each other rather bad names, but always in parliamentary language.

Hon. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW is of the opinion that we have had enough foreigners such as were now flocking to our shores. He thinks the emigrant of to-day is not the emithinks the emigrant of to-day is not the emi-grant of twenty years ago. He is no longer fleeing from mjustice and oppression to en-lightened liberty, but is coming with doc-trines which, if allowed to prevail, would make our country a wilderness, inhabited by savage human beasts. But then Mr. Depew may not be a good ludge.

savage human beasts. But then Mr. Depew may not be a good judge.

Most Rev. Thomas W. Croke, D. D., Archbishop of Cashel, has just sent to the treasurer of the Irish Parliamentary fund the sum of $1,700, which, he says, is an instalment of the sum his people will contribute to the cause of home rule. The archbishop subscribed $250 of this amount himself, and in his letter bearing this remittance he says: "It is time Irishmen cooperated with their friends in America to supply the funds which the National party needs to successfully carry on its patriotic work in the impending elections."

A Business Woman.

A few years ago Mrs, Rachel Francis, of Atlanta, Ga., concluded that she could make money by going into the dairy business, and managing to get a few dollars together, she bought a cow and began business. It was on a small scale but she prospered, and after a time she had bought a dozen or more cows. The work was done by her. She was upearly and late. After milking the cows she would prepare the milk for market and deliver it to her customers. In two years after Mrs. Francis engaged in the dairy business she was known by nearly every citizen. She was strictly business and went wherever her business called her, no matter where that was. Mrs. Francis invested her money as fast as she made it, and her investment always proved good ones. Mrs. Francis ded a few days ago leaving an estate valued at $40,000, including a dairy farm of 75 acres well improved and stocked, near Atlanta. Atlanta, Ga., concluded that she could make

she Will Marry Again, This Time to a Spanish

Grandee, Aged Sixty Years As Patti has done, so Nilsson will do, and he old-timed rivalry, which has existed be tween the two great song-birds, will be continued, even to matrimony, for Christine Nilsson is to be married shortly. Christine Nilsson is the daughter of a laboring man, and was born at Wederslot, Sweeden, Aug. 3, 1843. At an early age she evinced great taste for music. She became quite proficient on the violin, learned the flute, and attended fairs and other places of public resort, at fairs and other places of public resort, at which she sang, accompanying herself on the violin. While performing in this manner at a fair at Lyungby, in June, 1857, her extraordinary powers attacted the attention of Mr. F. G. Thornerhjelm, a gentleman of influence, who rescued her from her vagrant life, and placed her at school, first at Halmstad, and afterwards at Stockholm, where she was instructed by M. Franz Berwald. She made her first appearance at Stockholm in 1850, and her first appearance at Stockholm in 1860, and afterwards went to Paris to finish her musical education under Masset and Wurtel. She made her first appearance in London at Her Majesty's theatre in 1867, and proved the great operatic attraction at that establishment during the season. She made her first ap-pearance in this country in 1870, and within less than a year she is said to have cleared less than a year she is said to have cleared £30,000. After a trans-Atlantic trip of two years she returned to Drury Lane theatre, May 28, 1872, and during that year was married to M. Auguste Hougoud, the son of an eminent French merchant. He died at Paris, February 22, 1882. Madame Nilsson made her "farewell appearance" in New York, April 16, 1883, before a crowded audience, thus closing the most successful concert tour ever made in this country. Count Casa Miranda, the gentleman whom Nilsson is going randa, the gentleman whom Nilsson is going to marry, is a high grandee of Spain, and is sixty years of age. Madame Nilsson again visited this country during the season of

YOUNG LOVE IN A CREEK.

Up to Their Armpits in Water Holding an Umbrella Over Their Heads,

Henry Warrington, aged 19 years, the only on of a poor but aristocratic family living near Red Sulphur Springs, Va., and Alice Demarest, the beautiful is year-old daughter of Bouveau Demarest, an immensely rich and-owner, whose residence and park are situated ten miles east of the springs, 'ran off to get married at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning. The flying pair eloped in a buggy. They made good time until Indian creek was reached. The creek was very high, but an attempt was made to ford it, when midway of the stream the vehicle was washed over and the occupants thrown in the water. They lodged against a broken tree in the middle of the creek. The young man caught the young girl as the rushing waters were carrying her down and held her. Fortunately just at the foot of the tree there was sufficient foothold for Warrington to stand, sufficient foothold for Warrington to same, so that the water only came up to the armpits, but on either side of him it was too deep and the current too strong for the venture to reach the shore. He him to venture to reach the shore. He held Alice in his arms for two hours before they were discovered. The position was made more unpleasant by the sun pouring its rays upon them. Fortunately, when the buggy was overturned, an umbrella was thrown in reach of the young man and he managed to open and hold it over the lady. was even more novel. A young man, al-though the risk was great, swam a strong horse to the place and the imperiled yout and maiden hung on to the animal's tail and were brought back safely. The girl's father caught up with the pair at the creek and the wedding did not take place. A Salesman on Preacher Messaros' Trouble.

From the Philadelphia Record. Among the prominent pew-holders in the Northwestern Independent church is the Hon. Samuel Josephs. That gentleman, with his customary farsightedness, has not allied himself with either party in the present trouble. "This thing is bound to injure the woman and cannot help Messaros any," said Mr. Josephs yesterday, while in a philosophical frame of mind; "it will hurt the church, and that is to be seriously regretted. I have not been around the church for four or five months but I still retain my interest in the congregation. I find that the women uptowr are inclined to believe Messaros innocent, and to blame Mrs. Coulston for the trap she set. I could not see how a man could be or would be so foolish as to do all the thing which have been ascribed to him. I never thought Messaros was a fool, but believed him to be a bright man, who had knocked around considerable, and knew the ace from the joker. But, I tell you, the women are all with the preacher. Now, you suppose that you suppose that after a man insuited a woman that she would permit him to visit her at her own house when her husband is at home? Things are not now like they were when I was a boy. Messaros has an elegant church, a fine con-gregation, and the blow which this thing has brought will cause all good people to bow their heads in sorrow,"

An Outery Against Funeral Extravagance.

From the Freeman's Journal The "Gates Ajar," the "Broken Pillar," the "Cross and Crown," the "Sheaf of Wheat" and another hideous invention of the funeral florist, the "Vacant Chair," were all there. Enough money had been spent in those useless and ostentations things to keep the dead less and ostentatious things to keep the dead man's family for several months. His coffin was piled high with "floral emblems," and twenty-five carriages watted around the corner to join the regulation six which were permitted to stand before the church door. This was a pleasing way of "getting ahead of the priest," who had wisely torbudden that more carriages than the half dozen should attend any of his parishioners' funeral. The next week the friends of the decayed week the next week the friends of the decased were engaged in arranging a collection for the pro-curing of a sewing machine for—so the printed card of appeal said—"a starving family."

Farmers Should Not Welcome It. from the N. Y. Independent. The House of Representatives has passed a bill taxing oleomargarine in the interests of the butter industry; and this is about as stupid as would be the imposition of a tax on the production of wheat to favor the interests of the producers of rye. Congress has really nothing to do with the subject; and had betnothing to use the control of the co to catch "the farmer." The farmers ought to have more sense than to welcome such a

One of Fittsburg's Totters Comes in For s Snug Fortune in the Old Country. From the Pittsburg Dispatch. Some weeks ago a letter was received at the mayor's office inquiring for the heirs of Philip and John Jacob Weyman, who came to American in 1811. Prior to the departure of the two brothers named they had given ower of attorney to an agent in their native place, which was Gossersweiter, Germany, and had started out for the new world to seek their fortunes, and build up a new life. Following as close as the mails would allow, came another letter asking the police authorities of the city to make particular inquiries to find the heirs. Accordingly Frederick Heil, the ordinance officer of the city, has been making a most thorough search, and as a consequence of his efforts, and the "points" which he has laid about in the city in the way of distributing informa-tion, John N. Weyman, one of the best bar mill rollers in the mill of Wilson, Walker & o, dropped into the mayor's office and pro luced evidence to show that he was a son John Jacob Weyman, and accordingly enti-tled to his share of the estate. Mr. Weyman said:

"From what I have been able to learn "From what I have been able to learn accumuabout the property, which has been accumulating in Germany since 1811, it is worth about $250,000. I saw the first notice of it in a German paper, and since then have been making inquiries. How many heirs are there? Well, there is myself and three brothers and one sister, the latter of whom is married and lives in the city of Baltimore. We have lived in the vicinity of Sharpsburg and Etna for years and we can show who we are. Our tather was what might be called a distant man; he would not talk much about his afairs in Germany. He was a brother of Philip Weyman, and as a result of my inquiries I have found that there are only nine heirs, of whom five are of my direct family. We have written to Germany and established surselves, and now," said the tall, good-na tured, brawny roller, "we are just waiting to see what the fates of fortune will do for us in the land beyond the sea."

Matthew Arnold in America

rom Kate Foote's Washington Letter. Mr. Matthew Arnold spent a few days last week at the Arlington with his wife, and his second daughter. The older one, it will e remembered, married a young American, Mr. Whittredge, about a year ago, Mr. Arnold likes this country very much, though it was his fate, when he was here two years ago, to be entertained largely by the "Philistines," namely, Mr. P. T. by the "Philistines," namely, Mr. P. T. Barnum, of Bridgeport, Mr. David Cark, of Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. Leiter in this city, and Mr. Andrew Carnegle, who is an English or Scotchman, but who has, like the others, made his own fortune by his own hands or head, Mr. Arnold has all a philosophic Englishman's interest in the varied elements of life in this country. He went to Arlington to get an idea of a Southern planter's home, and flattered himself on his return that he had seen it; but he was mistaken. The ideal spot is Mount self on his return that he had seen it: but he was mistaken. The ideal spot is Mount Vernon. The Southern farmer owning vernon. The Southern farmer owning slaves, kept them around him, and built, besides the houses which were the quarters, a house for every separate thing that was to be done on his farm. At Mt Vernon these buildings are numerous, because General Washington loved his farm. And at the back of the house, skirting the lawn and its noble trees, are the two kitchens, the well-house, the spring-house, the butter's house, the gardener's house, the meat-house, the wash-house, an ice-house, and the great barn with a lean-to roof, and the poultryyard, with buildings appertaining to it. Ar-lington never had the perfection of appoint ments which distinguish Mount Vernon, and it is saddened now by the long lines of white head-stones which mark the graves of the who died to save the Union.
