Standing by the Indian.
The President has very properly vetoed the bill granting to railroads the right of way through the Indian reservation of Northern Montana.

When this time comes, the Indian must stand out of the way of the locomotive, but he will have the right to demand that the people who take the land, from which he has drawn a miserable subsistence, shall give him some equivalent.

The bill gives no reason for its existence in the contemplated building of a railroad or the necessity for one, and makes no provision for securing the consent of the Indians.

We are accustomed to speak slightly of the Chinese, yet there is a custom in building with the Celestials in their treatment of suicides that has a practical side worth a thought or two.

The Chinese and Suicide.
We are accustomed to speak slightly of the Chinese, yet there is a custom in building with the Celestials in their treatment of suicides that has a practical side worth a thought or two.

A Lamp Committee Usurpation.
Select Councilman Remley placed himself in an unenviable position last evening in his attempted explanation of the removal of the electric light from Ann and Rockland streets in the Seventh ward to Water and Chestnut streets in the First ward.

Never Will Be Missed.
John Cozma has rolled up his pants high enough to find time to say that "we would have had much easier sailing had we nominated Montooth and Grimes."

The Chamberlain's Family Spirit.
The venerable boatman might also have remarked that the Republican craft would be in far less danger, if it did not have timid General Beaver as the figure-head at the helm.

to get away from its effects, is still fresh in the memories of the people. Neither have they forgotten the bold and brave look of a soldier standing in favor of the enforcement of the constitution against railroad tyranny, which he was compelled to recede from at the demands of his political masters.

Then the Bedford statesman would probably find his vessel in less danger from the rocks if Colonel Norris had not been allowed a place therein. The latter has effectively cooked his own goose by his Gettysburg speech.

There are others on the Republican ticket whose absence would be a decided gain to the party, but of what use to discuss them? They will all be sunk deeper than plummet can sound in the melancholy days of next November.

It is given out that Mrs. Cleveland hates poeils; which will confirm the general impression that she is a woman of sound sense.

There are some interesting features in the first part's report of Collector Geyer, of the Philadelphia revenue district. Nearly 625,000 gallons of beer were brewed and 330,000 gallons of whisky manufactured during the fiscal year ending June 30.

This death of Paul H. Hayne, the poet, at Groveton, Ga., on Tuesday night, removes from life's stage one of its most interesting characters.

THE young man still persists in treating his best girl to ice cream, though seventy persons were poisoned at Coulterville, Ill., by eating this seductive compound.

Mr. McAdoo is a member of the naval committee and has been trying to raise a breeze in the daily press over the refusal of a Democratic House to listen to his proposal to appropriate $10,000 for the repair of the stone docks of the Brooklyn navy yard.

When these docks were built they were equal to the standard then set by naval architects and stone docks were everywhere considered the best; but a prolonged study has demonstrated their many weak points.

THE Texas papers commencing with much self-satisfaction on the relative size of Great Britain and their great state, think that the islands are making more noise in the world over their political issues than is consistent with their position.

PERSONALS.
Mrs. Cleveland is said to have given special permission to a photographer to print and sell his likeness of herself.

EVANSELL MURPHY opens today at Mount Hermon in a summer school for the study of the Bible. The Philadelphia Times is carrying the theory that the bookkeeper in the shop need not sell to his own cashier who sells by subscription only.

JOHN W. MACKAY, known to fame as the Bonanza king, is understood to be the financial power behind Mr. Edward S. Stokes in his telegraph work as well as in some of his other enterprises. At all events, Mr. Stokes is carrying things in a large and lofty manner, and there seems to be no result to be expected.

POPE LEO'S new portrait is by Harry Thaddeus, a young Irish artist. His work is as well executed as the most of the admirable Latin engravings which have won him the reputation of one of the greatest classical scholars of his time.

A specimen lion Saloon-keeper—One Sinner with a Conscience.
From an Ottawa (Kan.) letter.
Perhaps no saloon-keeper in the state is more widely known than "Stormy" Jordan, and probably none of them have sought less to disguise their hatred for the Prohibition law.

THE thirty mortal who dared to run the gauntlet after being confronted with such a warning, and found himself before the judge, mirror-broking "Stormy's" bar would find further cause for curdling up his blood by reading such notices here and there as the following:

None paid address.
As this was not sufficiently startling, something like the following would loudly obtrude itself upon the eye, just as one had raised a glass to his lips:

Wanted to get your stomach in five years if you stick to it.
In other ways than this "Stormy" sought to impress on the fabulously infamed that the Apostle Paul was way off when he made the assertion that he would make a right bristler if you'll try it long enough.

There, there, you if you are really men, that's the best drink for you in the shop; but if you're beasts, I can give you something that will make you a right bristler if you'll try it long enough.

A YOUNG GIRL DISAPPEARS.
She Leaves a Touching Note for Her Mother.
Hunting at Suicide.

The police officer Fitzgerald has been notified to be on the lookout for Leahie Umbill, aged seventeen years, who left her home mysteriously Tuesday morning, after leaving the following note:

Mamma - If you can please forgive me my sins and ask papa if he will, for I now see how good you were and I am very sorry for it. If you can forgive me then please pray for me, and don't forget to say for me, for I am going to commit a big sin. Now, mamma and papa, I want you to live as happy as you can, and think no more of me, and don't worry about me. Good-bye to you all, for you will never see me more.

A postscript to the note said: "I give these to Maggie," which evidently referred to her younger sister Maggie. Leahie is described as a pretty, fair-haired, rosy-cheeked girl and obedient child. Her father, a wealthy German, gave his daughter a fair education.

It is one of the most fatal scourges which afflict mankind. It is often inherited, but may be the result of improper vaccination, mercurial poison, or the use of other drugs.
