WHAT SUPERINTENDENT AMES SAYS. The following communication from Supt.

mes was read :

Ames was read:

GENTLEMEN—As my present term of office and professional labor in Columbia will close with the present scholastic year upon which we have just now entered, I am anxious that the year may be distinguished by unusual progress in the work of the scholars; and for this reason I beg leave to offer the following recommendations:

For ten consecutive terms prior to the last, we had established a local institute which proved of great advantage to our scholars. For a large part of the term, on every alternate Saturday, and never lessfrequently than once in each month, teachers were called together to review their work, and to study the frinciples of pedagogics and methods of instruction and discipline. At these meetings the minds of the teachers were freed from the cares of the school room, and they were at liberty to devote their best thought to the subject in hand. They gave to the superintendent a far better opportunity to correct the faults that had come under his observation, than it was possible for him to have in the school room, and in the midst of its cares an it was possible for him to have in the

and distractions.

Again, the combined wisdom of all was made available to each. The younger teachers had the advantage of all the order teachers, had learned from their larger experience, and in this way were greatly aided in correcting their faults and overcoming their difficulties. These frequent meetings, affording as they did an opportunity for a friendly interchange of views on subjects of mutual interest, did much to preserve harmony and cultivate. much to preserve harmony and cultivate kindly feelings among teachers. Indeed, I do not believe it possible to secure the best results, the largest percentage of returns for the money expended in support of our public schools without the local institute. Your good sense will enable you to see many of its benefits which I cannot stop here to specify. You will see that they must of necessity be

You will see that they must of necessity be very great.

Under the present law the board cannot pay teachers for institute week, without making a special appropriation, and, I therefore recommend that baving fixed the length of the term the school shall be kept open, the board provide for paying teachers for four days' institute week, and direct that there shall be eight half day sessions, one to be held each month, for the first eight months of the term. You cannot, gentlemen, in my judgment, by a disbursement of an equal amount of money in any other direction, do so much to increase the efficiency of your scholars. Respectfully submitted, lars. Respectfully submitted, B. G. AMES, Supt.

TARRED AND FEATHERED.

THE DEEADFUL PUNISHMENT GIVEN TO A BERKS COUNTY PUDDLER.

He Is Found Occuping the Place of an Insan Pather in the Latter's Vacated Home. and His Neighbors Determine to Show Their Disapproval of It.

For the past few days the citizens of Naomi Berks county, have been in a state of excitement over a series of occurrences the like of which the village has never witnessed before. Michael Naylor was formerly tess repairsman on the Pennsylvania railroad, and lived in one of the company's houses near the station. He has been drinking rather heavily for the past month, and this so affected his mind that he became uncontrollable. The company a few weeks ago dispensed with his services. Tuesday night while a party of fishermen were returning home at about 11 o'clock they heard screams from the direc-tion of Naylor's house. Mrs. Naylor and her 11-year-old daughter were found hiding in the garden, while the three smaller chu-dren were concealed in some bushes a square away. The husband was engaged in smashing furniture in the house and several men secured him. They took him to the hotel near by and tied his limbs with ropes to pre-vent him from doing any further damage. While there he tore loose and ran to the rollstreet have too much slant, and it is difficult ing mill. He climbed up the supports until he nearly reached the roof. Here, on a narrow boardwalk he divested himself all his elothing and proceeded to climb out of a small window. He said that he was going to bed. In the meantime several of the mill hands followed him, and after a great deal of trouble brought him down. It was impossible to hold him, and he escaped and ran around the mill. He made a tour of the place, and finally danced on the red-hot iron just as it came from the rolls. He only had on a pair of shoes. The greatest excitement prevailed. He was pursued, and again recaptured. Persons who saw him say that they never witnessed the antics of anyone more sadiy afflicted than Naylor.

He was taken to the county almshouse. where his ravings continued until he became exhausted. Mrs. Naylor, after her husband was secured, spent the remainder of the night in their house. Subsequently, it is alleged, she found a pint bottle of whisky in

Wednesday morning affairs had again quited down somewhat. George McNery until recently had been employed as a pud-dler's helper at the mill. Since he has been out of work he has spent the greater por-tion of his time in Naomi. After her hus-bend was taken away he went over to Mrs. Naylor's and said that he would protect her. He went into the house and that was the last seen of the couple for the entire day. This occasioned considerable gos-ip about the mill and village and Wednesday evening there were rumors that something would be done. At half-past@o'clock fully 125 men were gathered in the vicinity of the mill. The wonder was where they had all come from. There were in the party boatmen, farmers and mill hands, and they went over to the home of the Naylors, and found the door locked. The leaders of the party had handkerchiefs tied over their faces, holes cut into them for the eyes and nose. They knocked at the door, but there was no response. Then one of the windows was shoved up and several men jumped inside. They soon appeared, having their man be-tween them. He was shoved out of the window head foremost. In making such a rapid egress his face was knocked against the sill, and his mouth bled prefusely. When gotten out he was taken in hand and led to the com-mons near the mill. Here under a large ash tree mons near the mil. Here under a large ash tree he was told that he would be hanged, and he got down on his knees and plead and begged piteously for his life, saying he had done nothing wrong. This was only done to frighten him. The party then took him to the mill, where two strong, muscular men laid him on a wheelbarrow and held him down while he struggled and kneed furiously. Sayeral grating them rolled out a furiously. Several parties then rolled out a barrel of coal tar. A large swab, used in cleaning machinery, was next brought out. This was dipped into the barrel and the tar smeared all over the man's head and face Some of it ran down his back and under his clothing. He were a new suit and it was literally covered with it. The man were a mustache, and this and his hair were so covered with it, that their removal will proba-bly be necessary. He was then told that he could go, but warned that if he was found at the place in the morning he would surely be
