The assembling of the district and county conventions of the Democracy of the county in this city to-day called together a very large gathering of the active men of the party from every section of the county. In fact it was universally pronounced the most nearly com plete representation of the local Democracy seen here for many years on such an occa-sion. The delegates were representative men. too, veterans and young, but all animated by loyalty to the party and confidence in its power to carry the state this fall.

The proceedings were barmonious through Representative men of intelligence, out. character and independence, were selected to go to the state convention and for place on the county ticket. In accordance with the prevailing practice of the party here for many years, no instructions were given and no attempt was made to forestall the action to attempt was invention by passing resolu-tions or making expressions of Democratic principles. The party in this county is for standing by the faith of the fathers and plowing to their landmarks. Their representa-tives will not tolerate any attempt to reset or remove these ; and they will betray no trust reposed in them. The proceedings in detai of the several conventions were as follows

He quickly informed Captain and the officers ship at once informed the sleeping passen gers. They were told to dress quickly and come on deck. They were informed that there was no actual danger, but it was best to be prepared to leave the ship if neces sary and it was best that they should be fully prepared. The twenty cabin passen gers took the information quietly and in a few moments appeared on deck. In the steerage, however, where 165 Ger-mans, Bohemians and Italians were stowed away, the scene was differ-ent. A pante took place but finally they were quieted and brought on deck. Meanwhile the captain had ordered the fire signal to be displayed and had set all the engines on board at work pouring water on the flames, which originated in and were confined to the linen room and the room adjoining. The smoke became more dense every minute and even the most courageous of the passengers became frightened. As the flames seemed to be gaining headway, every body including officers, crew, cabin and steerage, lont assistance in working the hand pumps and in passing buckets. The steerag and cabins were rapidly flooded ; all the baggage that could be got out in the state rooms and in the hold of the vessel was piled on the deck ready for immediate removal as soon as assistance should come. over the granite pavement like English sparrows after spilled grain. They rolled and carromed among the wheels of the vehicles and the feet of the horses, greatly to the amusement of two newsboys, who rushed in and began to break the eggs and suck the contents. A large boy cracked an egg and helding it up to his expectant mouth, closed his eyes, opened the shell and gave himself up to gastronomic joy. An amber-colored fluid touched his tongue, causing him to make a wry face. "Rotten?" asked a bystander. "Naw," was the reply, "but's a funny tasting egg 'sever I seed. Guess they belimed eggs." Then another boy carefully cracked one of his with the handle of a jackknife and peeped through the crust. After this he smelled of the shell carefully and then touched his tongue to it. His eyes had a gleam of wonderful intelligence as he turned to the waiting crowd and said, "Tain't an egg at all, its nothing but whisky." Of course there was a scramble tor the eggs, and the driver hat hard work to get his box back. When his boxes were all loaded er spilled grain. They rolle eggs, and the driver had hard work to get his box back. When his boxes were all loaded sgain he said he had received six cases of eggs from a North End liquor dealer, who told him to take them to the Providence depot and cautioned him to be careful and "not batch the eggs on the way," as they were for hotel use in Khode Island. Taking up one of the eggs and breaking it in front of the crowd, a ruddy liquid ran out, leaving nothing but a common porcelain shell, such as is sold at agricultural supply stores for "next eggs." Instead of altumen and yolk, every egg was full of
