

SAMUEL J. TILDEN DEAD.

The Sage of Greystone Now Sleeps His Last Sleep.

DYING FROM A FAILURE OF THE HEART.

His End Comes With a Shock to the Country. The Extreme Feebleness of His Last Days Now Given to the Public-Review of the Career of One Who Will Ever Be a Memorial Figure in the Annals of American History.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Samuel J. Tilden died at his home at Greystone, N. Y., at 8:45 a. m. today.

Mr. Tilden had been in very feeble health for some time, yet his sudden demise this morning was entirely unexpected. The end was peaceful and quiet. The immediate cause of Mr. Tilden's death was the failure of the heart, following an acute attack of diarrhoea and nausea. There were present at the time Mr. Tilden's niece, Miss Gould, and Doctors Charles E. Simonds and Samuel Swift.

A MERE SCHEMATOR. Paralysis and bodily infirmities incident to old age had reduced Mr. Tilden to a mere skeleton and his last days were marked by extreme feebleness. The routine of daily life for a year past at his beautiful residence on the Hudson was about as follows: He usually awoke in the morning about 11:30 o'clock; an electric bell at the head of his bed summoned him to the bathroom; he then took his medicine which he took as regularly as he did his food. Afterward he would be led about until 5 o'clock, seemingly doing, though when his valet, thinking him asleep, approached the bed, he found his right eyes open and watching him. If he felt well he was assisted down to a breakfast table which usually consisted of milk and rich broths. Owing to paralysis, Mr. Tilden was unable to close his lips and his mouth was constantly open. His right hand from the same cause was entirely useless, and he was unable to hold a pen or pencil. He had not even the power to raise it to his mouth. His left hand was but slightly affected by the stroke of paralysis and he had the partial use of it. In eating he used his left hand to hold up his lower jaw.

His faithful companion, Miss Anna Gould, who is the sister of the wife of Mr. Henry Tilden, placed in his mouth every particle of food that he ate. She generally put it in his mouth with a spoon and he was enabled to swallow it by raising his lower jaw with his left hand and putting his head back. While at breakfast the morning papers were read to him and notes made by his secretaries as to the direction of any important point or move in the political world. After breakfast he usually went into his office, on the right side of the hall, where he sat with different employees of the place and heard their respective reports.

HELD NOT SPEAK ABOVE A WHISPER. His walk was slow and feeble, his paralyzed right leg moving with stiff, uncertain movement. He could not speak above a whisper and his thin and farrowed face and labored movements, especially in comments from the village, were his leaning on the arm of his valet or his companion, Miss Gould, as he stepped to or from the carriage that took him on fine days for a ride about the country. His mental faculties, however, were bright and unimpaired up to the last. He suffered much from indigestion, and twice a week was visited by his physician, who often has spoken lately of Mr. Tilden's still robust intellect.

Dr. Simonds and Dr. Samuel J. Swift were with him when he died. His resignation was unusually retentive and to the last he preserved the most exact method in dealing with the concerns of his house and farm. Each day he talked with his business manager and confidential secretary, Mr. George W. Smith, and signed a complete set of business with the smallest details of his business. His medicine was administered with almost mathematical exactness and it rarely happened that his night doses were missed at the regular time. And it was the same with his food. Every ounce he ate was calculated and weighed before it was prepared and set before him. Rich soups in quite small quantities were supplemented with small draughts of creamy milk, the latter the yield of his famous Alderneys and Guernseys, together with the tenderest part of a chicken, or a mere morsel of meat minced so as to be readily swallowed, made up his diet. These viands temptingly cooked and carried to his lips by his attendant frequently failed to rouse his appetite, and were returned almost untested. It was a matter of comment among his intimates that he should have been able, so little nourishment, to sustain life at all.

The news of the death of Mr. Tilden was received on the stock, petroleum, cotton and other exchanges shortly before 10 o'clock and placed upon the official bulletins. It caused expressions of sorrow on all sides. The flags on the City hall and other public buildings, hotels and business houses generally were flown at half-mast on the receipt of the news of his death.

Sketch of the Dead. Samuel Jones Tilden was born in New Lebanon, Columbia county, New York, on the 9th day of February 1814.

He was a member of the Little band of Puritan pilgrims who settled Massachusetts. They had been farmers in Kent, England, and the American head of the family, Nathaniel Tilden, came to this country in 1634 and became one of the founders of the town of Scituate, Massachusetts. In 1790 Mr. Tilden's grandfather, John Tilden, removed to the state of New York and made his home in New Lebanon. Mr. Tilden's ancestors on his mother's side trace their family line direct to William Jones, who was lieutenant governor of the colony of New Haven. From his mother's family his middle name is derived.

Young Samuel was not counted a precocious boy. He was small for his years and his health was uncertain, seeking for a cure with the most eminent physicians, but he learned to listen to his elders, and would sit with wondering eyes while they enlarged on the evils of the times. It was when Jackson was running for president a second time with Van Buren as his vice presidential colleague in 1835 that Samuel J. Tilden first made himself known. He was then the eighteen years old. One who knew him describes him as a tall, tall his slender form giving him the appearance of a greater height than he possessed, with a pale face, firm lips, and full, blue eyes. He wrote an "Address to the People" at that time, reviewing the political situation, and in which he was strikingly original in his style and in the Democratic ticket. It was shown to Van Buren who at once adopted it as the Democratic platform and largely through its advocacy was defeated by 10,000 majority.

In 1834 young Tilden entered Yale college, having secured the second highest honors. He was elected to the Phi Kappa Phi honor society. He was elected to the Phi Kappa Phi honor society. He was elected to the Phi Kappa Phi honor society. He was elected to the Phi Kappa Phi honor society.

After completing his academic career, Mr. Tilden marked out for himself a comprehensive course of study preparatory to his admission to the bar. He held a place as a student in Judge John W. Edwards' office, and also became a pupil at the law school of the New York university. He was a vigorous supporter of Mr. Van Buren's second important issue, that of the currency, then one of the burning questions of the day.

Mr. Tilden opened an office for the practice of his profession in New York city. He at once built up a large and successful practice, and was extensively to the law. His office was visited more frequently by thinkers than by clients. Frequently came to him in his private residence, and free traders, politicians and statesmen. William Cullen Bryant, Silas Wright and Martin Van Buren frequently called on him. Mr. Tilden desired to establish a morning newspaper in the city of New York, and Mr. Tilden consented to assume the management of the paper, which was called, "The Standard." It was successful from the beginning not only as a business enterprise, but as a literary power. After the death of Mr. Tilden returned to the practice of the law.

In the spring of 1850, Mr. Tilden was in Washington in the interest of a bill to amend the New York laws, one of the most important in the history of the Polk administration, was introduced to him. It was a temperance bill, and he had to be present. He did not hesitate for a moment. He said: "I won't take the place. I came here to help others and not to push myself into the limelight." He was admitted to the bar, but I would never hold an office on account of its pecuniary reward. All I take any interest in is the interest of my profession, or a post of honor, but at present I will take nothing." To this resolution he adhered until the death of Governor Wright. In the autumn of 1851, at the urgent desire of Governor Wright, Mr. Tilden accepted a nomination for the New York assembly and was elected a member of the New York constitutional convention. In the last of the year he was elected a distinguished part.

After the defeat of Governor Wright in 1856, Mr. Tilden resumed the practice of his profession, but in 1858 he was nominated for attorney general of the state of New York. He was elected a member of the New York constitutional convention. In the last of the year he was elected a distinguished part.

Mr. Tilden's reputation as a lawyer reached its apex in 1858, when he was elected to the New York assembly. He was elected a member of the New York constitutional convention. In the last of the year he was elected a distinguished part.

Mr. Tilden's reputation as a lawyer reached its apex in 1858, when he was elected to the New York assembly. He was elected a member of the New York constitutional convention. In the last of the year he was elected a distinguished part.

Mr. Tilden's reputation as a lawyer reached its apex in 1858, when he was elected to the New York assembly. He was elected a member of the New York constitutional convention. In the last of the year he was elected a distinguished part.

Mr. Tilden's reputation as a lawyer reached its apex in 1858, when he was elected to the New York assembly. He was elected a member of the New York constitutional convention. In the last of the year he was elected a distinguished part.

Mr. Tilden's reputation as a lawyer reached its apex in 1858, when he was elected to the New York assembly. He was elected a member of the New York constitutional convention. In the last of the year he was elected a distinguished part.

Mr. Tilden's reputation as a lawyer reached its apex in 1858, when he was elected to the New York assembly. He was elected a member of the New York constitutional convention. In the last of the year he was elected a distinguished part.

A GLANCE AT CHICAGO.

THE WICKEDEST CITY OF THE GREAT AND BOUNDLESS WEST.

What a Lancaster Man Found in Chicago in That Metropolis—Sudden and Phenomenal Growth—Eight Hundred and Fifty Thous. Rushing Daily In and out of Its Streets.

Chicago, formerly a small Indian trading station, is now the acknowledged metropolis of the West. It boasts a city of a population of 200,000 inhabitants. The city of 1871, its inhabitants numbered not more than 30,000. To the old residents who survived that terrible holocaust, which rendered them homeless and penniless, the city which has risen, Phoenix-like, from its ashes is a source of great pride and satisfaction. Others who witnessed the conflagration and afterward gazed on the vastness of devastation and chaos everywhere around them, look now upon the lowering steeples, extensive warehouses, court houses, the grand city hall, with bewildering surprise and wonder. The beautiful laid-out parks, the quiet boulevards and the inviting drives by the lake, the fine hotels, the magnificent streets which form the business part of the city. Chicago covers an area of about fifty square miles, and extends from Lake Michigan to the Gulf of Mexico. It is divided into three distinct divisions, known as the North side, South side and West side, by the Chicago river and its two branches. These at a short distance from the city center, extend northwardly the other in a southerly direction. The city possesses several parks worthy of notice.

SOME HANDSOME PARKS. The two South parks are the largest; the Douglas and the Garfield parks are small, yet very attractive, but the Lincoln park is the favorite resort. It has a frontage of two and a quarter miles on the lake shore, is tastefully laid out, and artificially adorned with flowers, lawns, and walks. The drives and boulevards pass entirely round the city and through the whole system of parks, forming a continuous drive of over 30 miles, south to DuSable street, north to the finest residences are in the north and south sections of the city. The houses are mostly of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

THE BUSINESS PART. Chicago, however, has also its business quarters. The business centre of wholesale and retail trade is in the South division, and is almost completely confined within a radius of a mile. State street is seven miles long. The refreshing breezes which in summer months blow from the lake, the Michigan are very welcome to the inhabitant. Many of the houses are of the Italian style, and are of massive and costly architecture. On the North side, also, from the river towards the lake, are very many fine mansions, and the mansions of the wealthy are being detached. On the West side, Washington avenue presents the best view of fine residences and the mansions of the wealthy. The principal drive to the West side parks, Ashland avenue is also one of the attractive parts of the city. It is a wide, straight, and has a fine view of the city and the lake. The Jockey club driving park is the favorite resort for sporting men and the city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy. The city is a favorite resort for the wealthy.

REMARKS MADE BY THE SENATOR.

He Says the Next Session Will Be Democratic and Public Sentiment is for Tariff Reform.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—A special from Washington to the N. Y. Herald, says: Speaker Carlisle said in an interview yesterday that he thought the time not far off when public sentiment would compel Congress to reduce the tariff. If the Morrison resolution should pass, even with the Senate amendment increasing the revenue to $130,000,000, he said, "we will reach a point on a comparatively short time when a change of policy in relation to the revenue will be absolutely necessary. The operation of the Morrison resolution in a year or so would mean that the bonds now matured will be paid and a large surplus revenue will continue to be annually collected from the people. In such a contingency, it is evident that there will be but three lines of policy open for consideration. First, the government must purchase its own obligations at a high premium; or, secondly, Congress must by extravagant and wasteful appropriations prevent the hoarding of immense sums in the treasury; or, thirdly, it must reduce the revenue." The speaker said he had no doubt that the next House of Representatives would be Democratic. The tariff would be the leading issue in the campaign.

ONLY LIGHTING HIS PIPE. This is the innocent way in which the Anarchist keeps his charge. CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—In the anarchist trial this morning Conrad Messer was the first witness called. He testified that he was at the anarchist meeting and recognized Spies and Fielden (where the speakers stood) when the police came in. He said he saw the explosion of the bomb and Spies and Fielden were still on the wagon. He did not see either of them shoot or have a revolver. Witness stated he did not belong to any group of Anarchists or Socialists. On cross-examination he stated that he had known Spies and Fielden for a few months.

August Krumm, stated he was neither a Socialist nor an Anarchist. He was at the Haymarket meeting. He was with a friend and they stood near the alley. They went into the alley to light their pipes just before the bomb was thrown. Krumm has red hair, but his face and head resembles Spies'. This testimony, the defense expect, will offset Gilmer's evidence. They will contend that the former, instead of lighting the bomb, was doing nothing more harmful than lighting his pipe.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION. Two Shots Fired by a Tartar at a Turkish Woman—T. M. Mearns Captured. CONSTITUTION, Aug. 4.—A determined attempt was made on the life of the grand vizier while out driving in the vicinity of the palace on Sunday last. The official was driving in an open carriage, and was at a short distance from the palace grounds the report of a pistol was heard, followed almost instantly by another. Both bullets passed in close proximity to the head of the grand vizier, who glancing hastily around, saw a miscreant with a drawn revolver, one of the latter firing a pistol in the air. In hot pursuit of his carriage. He ordered the coachman to whip up the horses and in a short while was soon out of range of his would-be assassin. The miscreant was subsequently taken in custody and conducted to the police station. The prisoner proved to be a native of Tartary and was very violent. When arraigned he declared that the grand vizier was the enemy of the people, inasmuch as he prevented the equitable administration of justice and demanded that his majesty hang the offending official.

IRELAND'S GOOD TEMPER. The Earl of Aberdeen Testifies in Favor of the Emancipated Irish. DUBLIN, Aug. 4.—In an interview with the Cable News representative, just before his embarkation for Glasgow, last evening, the Earl of Aberdeen said he had been greatly impressed with the good temper and courtesy of the people and orderly conduct which characterized the bearing of the professionalists.

Nothing transparent, continued the Earl, that could be construed as aggressive or annoying by our political opponents. "It was a demonstration in favor of Gladstone, it was not the less one of kindly feeling, while there were also signs of extreme spontaneity of public opinion."

LONDON, August 4.—Mr. J. H. Hastell, who contested the West division of Belfast in the Conservative interest against Mr. Thomas Sexton, Parnellite, has petitioned that the latter be unseated, charging that bribery, undue influence and other unlawful means were used during the poll.

A Cabinet Council of the new Troy ministry is in progress at Lord Salisbury's official residence. Each minister was cheered by the crowd in Downing street as he arrived.

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—A cabinet council of the new Troy ministry is in progress at Lord Salisbury's official residence. Each minister was cheered by the crowd in Downing street as he arrived.

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—A cabinet council of the new Troy ministry is in progress at Lord Salisbury's official residence. Each minister was cheered by the crowd in Downing street as he arrived.

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—A cabinet council of the new Troy ministry is in progress at Lord Salisbury's official residence. Each minister was cheered by the crowd in Downing street as he arrived.

GOVERNOR IRELAND WAITING

FOR THE REPLY FROM BAYARD TO HIS COMMUNICATION.

Some of the People of Texas Protest Against Too Hasty Action on the Part of Their Chief Executive—The Militia of Texas Ready for Orders to Fight.

EL PASO, TEXAS, Aug. 4.—The popular wave of excitement that is sweeping over Texas on account of the bold stand taken by Gov. Ireland toward the state department on the subject of the Rio Grande border troubles has elicited from the most prominent merchants and business men of El Paso the following protest: "We, the undersigned citizens of El Paso, believe that the present course of the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur in so much of the resolutions as relate to the government's measures to vindicate the rights of citizens of the United States in Mexico and to restore to the most just and equitable position in power to this most important matter, and while we pledge ourselves, when necessary, to be heard, we believe that the conservative element, protest against so much of the resolutions adopted by the mass meeting as relating to the present administration, and state that we have confidence in the intention and ability of the government and the present administration to protect American citizens abroad; and while we heartily concur