LANCASTER, AUGUST 6, 1886.

It Will Not Do.

In the absence of Gen. Beaver his friend Col. D. H. Hastings and that veteran campaigner and explainer, Galusha A. Grow. have been down to Philadelphia working out a vindication of the Republican candidate for governor from the damaging charge of the Times, that his nail company pays its men in store orders instead of cash, contrary to the statutes of the commonwealth in such cases made and provided.

The gist of several columns of defense printed by the Quay-Cooper organ to-day is that some of the nail company are Democrats; the employes are paid in cash; they are not required to deal at the store ; it was established at their request and for their convenience; and these coupons are issued for cash to save the trouble of keeping books; although bearing on their face evidence that they are good for trade only. the explanation says, "unsold coupons can be returned to the office at any time and be redermed in cash. Although the coupons have printed on their face that they are not transferable this is a mere safeguard in case the book should be lost by the owner to prevent the purchaser from loss, as by notice he can at once stop the finder or wrongful possessor from appropriating it to hisown use and negotiating it: and finally the explanation explains that the same system is in operation by the coal company at Peale, of which Mr. W. A. Wallace is a director and legal adviser.

Furthermore, the employes of the company have been procured to sign an address to Chairman Cooper, testifying to their cordial relations with the corporation hiring them and issuing the shin-plaster store

"Methinks he doth protest too much." People of experience know exactly what a " company store " means ; it is generally the device of contractors and corporations to make a double profit off their labor. In remote regions, unsettled and unprovided with mercantile facilities, such as are frequently traversed by new railroad lines, it may be necessary for the convenience of workingmen that their employers establish such concerns; but "within a mile of Bellefonte," a business centre for a century, it seems reasonable that the supply of merchandise might be left to individual enterprise rather than that it be controlled by the same firm as gives employment to the workingmen and regulates their wages. The explanation furnished might possibly acquit Gen. Beaver were he indicted in a quarter sessions court ; it seems to indicate that his firm has resorted to a Yankee patent to evade the letter of the statutory penalties, while violating the spirit and intent of all such legislation. It will not answer for a candidate for governor.

Moreover, it is a question whether the admitted practices of Beaver's company are not a violation of the act of June 3, 1885, which forbids the issue, sale or gift by any retail tradesman of any "ticket or tickets, check or checks, or other token or memoranda entitling such purchaser or customer " to money, trade or gifts. This is a statute for which we have no respect : but, being on the books, a gubernatorial candidate ought to respect it.

The Record of the House.

The Republican general complaints about the remissness of Congress, and the attempt to put the responsibility therefor upon the Democratic House, are not borne out by their specifications. Chief among these is the lament that South Dakota has not been admitted as a state, and that the Edmunds anti-Mormon bill was not passed. These were offensive measures, and the failure of them will be easily tolerated by a sound public judgment. By killing them with neglect the House atoned for some of its faults of omission.

The failure to pass the Blair bounty bill is another thing to be set down to the credit of the House; and for the defeat of legislation on inter-state commerce, the Senate is chiefly responsible, having insisted upon a weak and emasculated measure of not doing it. The passage of the antioleomargarine bill, and the failure to provide for trade dollar redemption, are discreditable to the Democratic branch of Congress. The good work of the House was admirably summed up by Mr. Randall in a forceful speech in answer to the blackguardism of a New York member. Mr. Randall said :

Mr. Randall said:

We all are about to return to the people who sent us here, and the record of this House will be weighed and measured by them, and the election will show whether the party in control of this House is not well entitled to the respect and approval of the American people. We have returned to the public domain millions of acres of the public lands taken by insatiste corporations. We have entered upon the bailding of a new navy. We have passed every act that we have been asked to pass having for its purpose the bettering of the condition of the laboring people. We have not in a single instance passed any bill in favor of monopolies. We have given the Senate an opportunity to pass an inter-state commerce bill, which only forty men on that side dared to vote against. The appropriation bills as they have passed this House, are freer from unnecessary and suspicious propositions than any appropriation bills passed by any Congress since the war. We have will, receive the confidence of the American people. When we came here there were locusmeds and thousands of people idie in the United States, but to day there is not, in my judgment, a laboring man who wants to work who cannot secure work (applause), and that comes in a large degree from the guardence which this House and a Demo-ratic executive have given to the American people. [Applause.] Nobody attempted to reply to this. They knew they gnawed a file.

The Cutting Imbroglio. Congress having adjourned without action in the Cutting matter, the responsibility is thrown upon the president. This was doubtless the intention, as the case is one in which the merit of any policy will be tested by its success, and the members of Congress are not anxious to put themselves in a position that would be the focus of popular criticism, and on a matter in which the people feel so strongly. If the president reinforces his previous demands for the release of Cutting by a threat to seize the prisoner, that threat will have to be followed by extensive hostilities if the demand is not complied with : and then there will by a bowl from the enemies of the administration over what will be called its recklessness.

There appears to be little chance that Mexico will permit the matter to drift so far towards war; and a good loud threat will probably be all that is needed to make that government back down; but the incident will give President Cleveland a chance to exhibit his backbone. It may be that the shifting of responsibility by Congress upon his shoulders will only prove how well able those shoulders are to bear it.

THE corpse of the late Mr. Rameses, of Egypt, has been unpacked and examined, We are told that his nose is long and thin, hooked like the noses of the Bourbons. The INTELLIGENCES has a large circulation among intelligent Republicans. They admire its spirit of fairness, and know that no charges are recklessly preferred against Republican leaders, patient investigation being made before the sword of truth is thrust between the plates of their armor. If our heated correspondent wants his Republican idois constantly decked with garands and their faults concealed, let him subscribe for a lide-bound organ of his faith; but if he wants the truth and all the news, he must in self-defense stick to the INTELLIGENCER.

THE House had not time to attend to a great deal of important legislation, but Mr. Baker, of New York, took all the time he wanted for the reading of a resolution arraigning the Democratic party. In the arraignment of the Republican party, which will precede the next election, its methods of hampering legislation will hold a conspicuous place.

In to-morrow's extra illustrated issue of the DAILY INTELLIGENCER the usual number of special contributions will add varied features of excellence to a complete presentation of the news of the day, telegraphic and local, from all parts of the city, state, country and both hemispheres. A feature of the poetry of this number will be ... Veronica, a Roman Legend," told in verse by that great genius who needs only to be known as the author of " John Halifax, Gentleman." In " Drift " the writer of that vivacious department talks of the current popular preaching, basing his discourse on something overheard in Lancaster, of course. There is a taking short story of pedagogic experience. A material correction of an historical error is made by Benson J. Lossing. The columns of an old Boston newspaper have been explored for advertising curlosities of a century ago. A young Lancastrian relates the pleasures of a drive into the country. Our philosophic contributor has the sixth paper of his " Vacation " series, on the nature and influence of art. A "Day in Rome" is a graphic sketch of the Eternal City. A comprehensive article tells of the building associations in Lancaster; and the local biographical sketch has for its subject one of the oldest and most distinguished citizens of Lancaster, the sole survivor here of the constitutional convention of 1838, and one of the few in the state. A continuation of graphic experience in Virginia is another of the good things in to-morrow's literary feast.

Hon, James GAY GORDON has made a very excellent record and a very forcible impression in his brief career on the bench in Philadelphia. He will likely receive the Democratic nomination unanimously, and it will require a very strong appeal to debased party prejudice to defeat his election.

HOLLAND, Belgium, and Denmark are all in a ferment over the inefficiency of their governments, and, although the froth on the surface is Socialism, it is evident that a steady movement of the people towards the over throw of their present corrupt government and the establishment of popular rule, is at the bottom.

Amsterdam and The Hague are the best equipped Socialist centres in the world, and it seems probable that they will ere long find an opportunity to give their wild theories a practical test, for the government of Holland weak in the knees and must soon fall. Dr. Niervenhuis, the Dutch Socialist leader, is a man of wealth and brains, and has for many years devoted both to the spreading of Socialsm. He says that the people of Amsterdam are in such desperate plight that he and the other leaders have all that they can do to restrain them from revolution. When they think the times are ripe we may believe that they will "let loose the dogs of war" and "the Dutch will capture Holland, the Danes Denmark, and Bismarck Belgium.

LORD HARTINGTON and Mr. Chamberlain have declared their intention to unite the Liberal party, separated on the issue of home rule. The leaders of the opposition have tried by every means in their power to widen the breach, but apparently without avail, as the followers of Hartington have small sympathy with coercion in spite of their opposition to the granting of a separate Parliamant to Ireland. It is probable that the union of the Liberal factions will grow more and more firm until Giadstone, Hartington and Parnell frame a home rule bill that will be acceptable to all factions; and they will all disappear in the triumph of Liberalism that will follow. This consummation seems far enough away at present, but the Liberal-Unionists cannot fail to realize that there can be no real strength in the government until the just demands of the Irish for the right to rule Ireland be satisfied. They will eventually accept the situation, insisting only that proper care be taken to insure the unity of Great Britain. In Great Britain we think we see the first glow of the sunrise when, with home rule and foreign harmony, the Saxon and the Celt shall lead the world.

THE SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT. Dr. Buehrle Addresses Himself to Some Popular Complaints

The following is the report of the city LANDASTER, Pa., Aug. 5, 1885. To the Board of School Directors.

Gentlemen, your city superintendent sub-mits the following report of the public schools for the month of June: The whole number of pupils enrolled was 275 in the high schools, [22] in the grammar, 332 in the secondary, 17 in the ungraded, 682 in intermediate and 1, 205 in the primary. making a total of 3.0%. The average attend-ance was 5% in the high schools, 205 in the genmar, 481 in the secondary, 30 in the ungraded, 586 in the intermediate and 1,032 in the primary, making a total of 2,696. the primary, making a total of 2,0%. The average percentage was 5%. The number of visits made by the city superin-tendent was 4%. The number of visits made by directors was 8%, as follows: Hon, J. P. Wickersham 57, Dr. M. L. Herr 2, T. F. McElligott 6, Hon, J. B. Warfel 9, J. I. Hartman 7, Dr. J. Levergood, W. O. Marshall and J. W. Byrne each one.

The stastistical table appended will show the enrolment and the average attendance in each school both for the month of June and for the year ending June 30. The annual examinations for promotion were conducted by the superintendent as far as possible. In the primary and intermediate grades he examined all the pupils in the were conducted by the superinter nighest class in reading and in the subjects taught orally, including physiology and hygiene; he also prepared all the questions for the written examinations in these grades, neluding drawing, writing, arithmetic and the map of Pennsylvania, and gave full directions to the teachers conducting these examinations. In the secondary and gram-mar grades he examined all the pupils in the highest class in all the branches taught in these schools, marking all the books and papers except grammar grade papers in arithmetic and grammar, and the boys' books in book-keeping and their papers in drawing.

The condition of the schools, as far as it revealed in these examinations, is with few exceptions very good. In the grammar grade the greatest improvement is noticeable in the degree of grammatical accuracy with which the papers are prepared and in the skill shown in designing from any elements submitted at the time of the examination. The skill shown in drawing, from memory, forms illustrative of subjects studied in the sciences was such as to encourage us to preserve and extend this kind of work as a valuable auxiliary in the understanding and the teaching of subjects in geography, physi-ology and history.

This being the time designated for the annual report, I desire to call attention to the steady increase in the number of pupils en-rolled in our public schools which, making no deductions for duplicate enrolments due to removals from one part of the city to another and to occasional promotions, has reached 4,330 exclusive of the pupils attending the night schools. The statistical stable will show that these pupils are with few excep-tions very evenly distributed among the schools of the same grade. The few over-crowded schools will be relieved when the additional rooms in the Lemon street building, and the prospective new building at the corner of Wainut and Mary are occupied. So, too, the disproportion between the number of pupils assigned to teachers of different grades purils assigned to teachers of different grades is rapidly disappearing. Using the average monthly enrolment as our standard of comparison, we find that there were 43 pupils to a teacher in the high schools, 42 in the grammar, 41 in the secondary, 51 in the intermediate, and 49 in the primary. It may be interesting to know that the average cost of tuition per pupil per month, exclusive of the German and English schools, is as follows: High schools, $1.68; grammar, $1.05; secondary, $0.77; intermediate, $0.54; primary, $0.44.

Special efforts having been put forth to se-Special efforts having been put forth to secure regularity of attendance, it affords me great pleasure to submit the following fifty-one names of pupils attending primary, secondary and grammar schools and deserving special mention for not having been absent from school a single session during the term: Maggie Arnold, John Fritchie, Frank Thurlow, Henry Wetzler, Katie Selvert, Samuel Albright, Katie Metzgar, Bertha Goeke, Ida Landau, Estella Kiefer, Beni, McComsey, Myrtie Green, Ada Kiefer, Bertha Goeke, Ida Landau, Estella Kiefer, Benj. McComsey, Myrtie Green, Ada Kiefer, Benj. McComsey, Myrtie Green, Ada Kiefer, Lizzie Brecht, Ellie McKlroy, Lizzie Metzgar, Carrie Koehier. Annie Shenk, Gertrude Heck, Emma Wiley, Claude Shumaker, Clarence Bausman, Mary Edwards, Otto Bohn, Lottie Free, Ida E. Groff, Lulu Getz, Alice Spindler, Mary Smaling, Emma Engroff, John Hartman, Annie McEiroy, Miriam Herr, Carrie Herr, Annie Wilhelm, Sallie Hill, Katie McComsey, Bertha Skeen, Ella Widmyer, Harry Koehler, Clara Bauer, Harry Decker, Ida Lyons, May Axer, Waiter Kilne, Leon Dodge, Irene Rudistil, Stella Skeen, Laura Widmyer, Theodore McDonnell, Laura Pyfer.

In obedience to the directions of your superintending committee and with a view to raising the standard of the grammar schools and thus obviating the necessity of providing an additional high school building, a greater degree of excellence was required to obtain an average of sevenity-five percent, and as a consequence fewer pupils will be promoted to the high schools this year. The whole number of boys who reached the average is 22, and that of girls 48, whereas by the standard of previous years there would probably have been 42 of the former and 62 of the latter. The only practicable way of relieving the pressure in the high schools, which are now filled to their utmost capacity, and of raising the standard of the grammar schools, is to keep the pupils in the latter long enough to get a more thorough knowledge of the branches taught.

CHARGES OF OVERWOUS. The ear of your superintendent is attentive to all complaints against the system of public instruction now pursued in this city, and he has therefore to report that there are exasional charges of overwork required of the pupils in some of the schools. As far as these are well founded they refer to teachers who do not carry out the instructions of your superintendent, or are due to the auxious desires of parents to have their pupils rapidly advanced from grade to grade. To remove any causes of complaint due to the system, every child in our schools is supplied with a report which must be signed by its with a report which must be signed by its parents every month, and which contains the following note on its face: Parents will please EXAMINE and sign this report every month, and then return it immediately to the teacher. Should any child be overtaxed, or not have sufficient to do, or should there be any other cause of complaint, they will please communicate at once, with the teacher, the principal, or the city superintendent.

Here is a way of relief pointed out to every parent and yet I do not believe that more than six or seven have called on me for this purpose during the six years that I have now been connected with your schools. The truth is that study is essential to progress, and that the pupils most likely to be injured by overstudy are often the children of parents who goad them on to efforts beyond their strength and when harm is done en-deavor to east the blame on the schools. We have the children but six hours of the day, three of which are given to recitation and but three are left for study; the remaining eighteen hours they belong to their parents. and if then properly cared for, the amount of study required at school will not injure them

Another class of complaints is directed against the number of studies introduced into the schools. Now, the truth of this matter is that no more studies are pursued now by the pupils in the schools below the high schools, than the rules called for at least seven years ago. Additional subjects are taught in the primary and intermediate schools, but no books are required by the pupils, as these subjects are taught orally. As to the high schools, it is notorious that the pupils there boast of their having less studying to do than they had in the schools that lead up to it. No doubt, the most com-plete refutation of all these charges is the in-creasing popularity of our schools, and the large number now attending them, together with the intense desire to be admitted to the high schools. A system of public instruction to properly meet the wants of a community. must change with it-must look to the future rather than to the past-must ask not what children do to fit them for the life into which they shall enter ? It was undoubtedly from a conviction of this kind that the board appointed a committee to report on the intro-duction of industrial education, with special reference to sewing in the girls' schools. It has seemed to me for some years that instruction in drawing could be made more di-rectly useful to the boys, if the system were changed so far as they are concerned to mechanical and geometrical drawing, thus lay ing the foundation for skilled labor, not in one or two, but in all trades. I would, there-fore, most respectfully recommend that this change be made as soon as possible as the first step towards industrial education. Very respectfully. Your obedient servant.
