LANCASTER. AUGUST 11. 1886.

Rich Men's Estates.

The disposition of their money after death is a source of much tribulation to the millionaires of whom our age is producing so many; especially when they have no children to become its natural inheritors. Mr. Tilden, with his characteristic caution seems to have reached no final conclusion himself as to the best use to be made of the fortune he had to leave behind him, and after liberal provision for his collateral relations, has appointed three executors and trustees to whom he gives a large latitude of discretion as to the disposition of his accumulation.

Perhaps it would be a good thing both for the public and the childless millionaire if the law should step in with the declaration that the public should inherit where there are no children to take : in other words that a heavy tax should be laid upon collateral inheritance. Pennsylvania imposes a tax of five per cent.; and we are bound to say that it does not seem to be a very popular tax. It is laid upon all estates, large and small, and herein perhaps is an error. The state need not take any share of a small estate for any reason of ublic policy. But when the property to be disposed of reaches up into the millions it may advantageously come in to take a big share of it. There would not be a great many people affected by it, and those who are would not have much to growl about, since they would be getting a good deal more anyway than they have any special claim to.

The trouble with the disposition by millionaires of their estate to charitable uses is that there is no system about it, and generally but little wisdom. With all the money dispensed in charity by the daily increasing list of sources of distribution. there ought to be relief for all the deserv. ing sufferers in the land; and still the crowd of help-seekers does not diminish. This state spends millions in charity : other states are as liberal. The United

"At time when reversing tendencies are Mr. Hubert O. Thompson a year or two ago, was the head of the office having the fattest contracts to give out. He was chief of the County Democracy, which was the anti-Tammany Democratic organization. The then mayor wanted to put him out ;

A Tribute to the Dead Jeffersonut At a special meeting of the Jefferson Demcratic association of York, held August 5, 1986, the following minute, offered by Lieutenant Governor Black, was, on motion of tenant Governor Black, was, on motion of Senator Ross, unanimously adopted. We deplore in the doath of Samuel J. Til-den a great public calamity. Not only was he the most illustrious citizen of the United States living during the last ten years, but he was during that period more powerful for good than perhaps any citizen had ever been in private lifts. Notwithstanding the trai-ties of the body, his clear and matchless in tellect maintained its proper ascendency whenever employed—and it was constantly employed—for the best interests of his party and country. His mind was pre-eminently promise to appoint a new commissioner who would suit him. This the mayo would not do, through he was eager to get the old commissioner out that he might put in his important place a man who and country. His mind was pre-eminently and almost confessedly the ruling mind of that great popular party, founded by Jeffer-son, and reorganized by Tilden, for the preservation of home government and the puri ication of the public service.

He was triumphantly elected president in 15%, with the purse and the sword of the nation itself unscrupulously thrown into the parently silly act is not clear. Then he went home and straightway died. Some say struggle against him, with a basely prostistruggie against him, with a basely prosti-tuted civil service employing many thous-ands of undisguised partisans in the same bad cause, and with the power of all the favorest classes nursed into exorbitant wealth and inscience by a long course of he killed himself. Whereupon the virtuous mayor proceeds to try the commissioner and of course will condemn him, and ask the governor to remove him : and the Federalist special legislation in behalf of the few at the expense of the many, ar-rayed on the same side. The evil powers which had failed to defeat Mr. Tilden at the vigorous district attorney is aroused to prosecute Squire and Flynn. This district attorney always is aroused to prosecute colls combined to reverse the decision of the after everyone else is aroused. Only the dishonest can get there ence upon his countrymen of all parties greater than that which attaches to the pres-idential office, except when that office is filled by one like himself. Mr. Tilden's career was fashioned upon by the devious paths pursued. Mayor Grace has not a first-class repute for hon-

He accepted the doctrines of Jefferson, not merely be-cause they were his, or even because they were formulated by him, but because they were, and must forever be, the essential prin-ciples upon which free and pure government can alone be constructed or maintained. Of all Mr. Jefferson's disciples, illustrious as some of them were, Mr. Tilden will inques-tionably occupy in history the place of the demand for Squire's removal, he should look into the apparent need for a fresh mayor also. Squire seems to be a good deal of a donkey ; and Grace is a profounder scamp. He was ardently anxious to get rid of Squire that he might name his successor; and it is hardly decent that not much better success than the departing millionaire in alleviating suffering. But it would seem that if all the millions spent in charity were distributed from one source a great deal better relief would be afforded than is now attained in the multitude of sources. This may be a case, however, where theory and practice would not agree. But if the state should take to itself a half of all childless millionaire's estates, it would at least find a good use for the money in reducing taxation.

"Both Wings Flap Together."

It is interesting to note that whatever differences of opinion prevail among the Pennsylvania Democrats-and they are the necessary differences resulting from proper freedom of thought and individualitythere is substantial agreement upon the general issues which most enter into the state campaign. Mr. Black, Mr. Wallace ment is a good stroke. and other prominent candidates for governor and leading men of the party who have spoken, have been of one mind as to the propriety of subordinating questions of federal policy to the present and supremely important issues of state concern, in a campaign chiefly for the election of state officers. There are honest and intelligent differences of opinion among the Democrats of this state as to what particular duties should be levied on particular articles of import ; there is none upon the general declaration that there ought to be a just and fair revision of the tariff in accordance with "the utterances of the convention which placed Mr. Cleveland as a presidential candidate before the American people." That platform, it is to be remembered asseverated that "many industries have come to rely upon legislation for successful continuance, so that any change of law must be at every step regardful of the labor and capital thus involved. The process of reform must be subject in the execution to this plain dictate of justice," and that "the necessary reduction in taxation can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample to cover any increased cost of production which may exist in consequence of the higher rate of wages pre-vailing in this country."

More than this no Pennsylvania Democrat need ask; and throughout Mr. Randall's recent speech, printed in the Record, it and the utterances of the president himself, are recognized as sufficient consideration for existing industries and interests.

There are and will continue to be differnces of opinion upon the best mode of reforming the public service, and as to the suliar methods by which the fitness nd adaptability of applicants for and incumbents of federal offices are to measured, but there will be no diste as to the honest purposes of the presat executive to supplant inefficiency and sness with an improved order of die officials from the ranks of his own
