THE ROTH AUTOMATIC BRAKE. Its Pallers at Burlington-The Cause and ti

The failure of the Rote automatic car brake The feilure of the Rote automatic car brake at the recent competitive tests made at flurington, lows, has been commented on atsome length in railway and scientific journals. The Railway Review says that the Westinghouse company had the advantage of a long experience and ample capital, while none of experience and surple capital, while none of the others came to the tests properly prepared either as to equipment or experience. Mr. M. D. Harter, president of the Rote company, in a circular just issued to the stockholders, says he looks "for a very early success for the brake."

R. M. Agnew, vice president of the Rote company, speaking of the failure in a letter to Mr. Harter says: "It was not a failure in the ordinary sense of that term—it was not in any sense a failure in principle or in its functional working. On the contrary, so far as concerns its principle of construction and functional operations, its practical working instifies and realizes our fullest expectations." Mr. Agnew gives as the sole and only cause of failure "the weakness of canstruction of the mechanism." The remedy is to "rebuild or reconstruct the brake, making it stronger in all the parts which showed weakness or insufficient strength to withstand severe work."

Mr. Agnew adds: "I feet more confidence

Mr. Agnew adds: "I feet more confidence in the value and substantial intrinsic merit of our brake than before I went to Burlington."

Mr. H. C. Hopkins, general manager, and
Mr. R. E. Linham, engineer, agree with Mr.
Agnew, that the cause of the failure way a want of greater strength in the brake levers and some other parts of the mechanism, and that the remedy is to strengthen them.

MOORE & VIVIAN'S "OUR JONATHAN. How an Actor Was Worried By a Chestnut

Last evening Moore & Vivian's company appeared in the opera house in the comedy ntitled "Our Jonathan." The weather wa very warm, but the audience was of fair size. William Moore, the head of the company, is an ex-song and dance man and was once : member of the firm of Topack & Moore, There is very little in the play of last even-ing, and it can not be said that its presenta-tion was a flattering success. Mr. Moore did some good work in the character; his singing and dancing were clever and made a hit. He does not seem to have the exact conception of the character, however, and some of his efforts to be funny were caland some of his efforts to be funny were cal-culated to make an audience weary. While he was getting off some of his funny business a boy in the gallery pulled a chestnut gong on him. This seemed to raise Moore's ire and, instead of letting it go unnoticed, he de-clared that the man who rang the gong had never heard the gag before, and as for him-self he considered the gong the biggost chestnut on the tree. The instrument was kept quiet after that. Miss Vivian acted the part of Betting well and her singing was was kept quot after that. He does too much of the business of William Hoey (of "Parlor Match" fame) when he steals the articles from the stage one at a time. He is taking too much when he steals another man's business and should stop it. The other characters in the company were passable and the majority of the audience were pleased.

arrest. The parties appeared at the alderman's office about 7 o'clock, when Mrs. Beitzel made complaint of surety of the peace and drunken and disorderly conduct against her husband. This enraged him terribly, and he cursed his wife and heaped upon her every epithet he could think of. In default of bail the alderman committed him for a hearing, and then George emptied the vials of his wrath upon the plump magistrate. Mrs. Beitzel was discharged.

The facts of the trouble appear to have been that Mrs. Beitzel, who is an industrious woman, was at home, making catsup and tomato-butter: George came home drunk, commenced abusing and threatening his wife and finally knocked together two of her glass fruit jars and broke them, and threatened to smash up everything else, and whip her. To defend herself she seized the apple-butter stirrer and belabored her drunken husband with it, skinning his head and arm and back and driving him from the premises.

This morning Mrs. Beitzel called at Alderman Deen's and withdrew the suits against her husband; but the conduct of the latter was so very boisterous and his language so vile when in the alderman's office that that officer feels an inclination to punish him. He is holding the case under advisement.

GEORGE GERLITZKI CAUGHT.

FOUND IN A DRUNKEN BLEEP AT LOCUST STREET HOUSE.

The Companion of Jake Buzzard and Pete Note in the Tolls of the Law-The Numerous Charges for Which a Young Laneaster Criminal is Held.

Some months ago Jake Buzzard, Peter Rote, George Gerlitzki and a lew others formed a combination to rob and plunder, and for the short time they have been in the business they have committed a series of robberies which will send them to the penitentiary for a long term of years. The first of the gang captured was Peter Rote. His arrest, after a hot pursuit, participated in by a hundred farmers armed with shotguns nd other weapons was told in the INTELLI-ENCER, on August 15. The second one aptured was George Gerlitzki, and the cause of his downfall—rum, led to his arrest.

Officer Merringer was on duty at the station house on Wednesday afternoon, and he received a telephone message that Gerlitzki was on Locust street and he could be caught if an officer went for him. The policeman left the station house, went to the point designated, found Gerlitzki asleep on a step on Locust street, near Freiberg street, and arrested him. He took him to Alderman A. F. Decomble's office and from there to jail, Ger-Donnelly's office and from there to Jail. Ger Donnelly's office and from there to jail. Ger-litzki was strongly under the influence of liquor when arrested. He had nothing to say yesterday, but during the night and this morning talked freely.

WHAT GERLITZEI SAYS. He claims that he came to this city to give himself up and did not make any effort to conceal himself yesterday. He was tired o seing hounded and chased from place to place, knew he would be captured sooner or later and concluded to come to the city, surrender himself to the police and pay the surrender himself to the police and pay the penalty for his offenses, and if he had not got drunk, he concluded, he would have gone to the station house earlier in the day. He admits being guilty of a large number of the charges against him and will save the county the trouble and expense of trying him.

Gerlitzki is the son of a very respectable citizen of the Seventh ward, but has been a wayward boy for years. He has given his father a great deal of trouble and was helped by him out of a number of scrapes.

The first time he was brought before the court was in August 1885, when he and Peter

The first tille he was court was in August 1885, when he and Peter Rote were indicted for entering the vauit of Lawrence Knapp, and stealing therefrom a keg of beer. His defense when the case was called for trial was that he went to the vauit, where his brother-in-law was employed, to the beer, but as no one was about, he took the beer and intended to pay for it. The defense was too thin, and the jury promptly convicted him. He and Rote were sentenced to undergo an inprisonment of six months. They were released in February last.

MEETS ONE OF THE BUZZARDS. Both he and Rote lived in the eastern sec tion of the city, and their loaning place was in the vicinity of John, East King and Middle streets. Here they made the acquaintance of Jake Buzzard, who lived on John street. Jake, who received his criminal education on the Welsh mountains, cultivated the acquaintance of Gerlitzki and Rote and it was not long before the trio began their thieving. not long before the trio began their thieving. They began close to home, and among their first operations were the burglaries at the Childrens Home and Mrs. Kramph's. It was followed up by thieving at West Willow, Neftsville and other points, and finally the authorities began to suspect Jake Buzzard and had a warrant issued to search his house. That search resulted in the finding of a large lot of goods which were identified as having been stolen at the points above mentioned. Buzzard heard of the search and he

They went direct to the Weish mountain, where they remained quiet for some weeks, without committing any thefts. They tired of this life, however, and when they took to the road robbery any thefts. When near the Weish mountain they aban-doned the team, but were seen to do so and the farmer who saw them gathered a posse and pursued them. After a long and hot chase, in which shots were exchanged, Rote was captured, but Gerlitzki and Buzzard got was Afterwards Gerlitzki again went to away. Afterwards Geriitzki again went to the mountain and for a change he went to Tyrone. He worked for a week in a pipe factory, earned 57 and with this money he says he paid his way to Lancaster.

THE CHARGES AGAINST HIM A light punishment for each of the charges against him would put him behind prison bars for an ordinary lifetime. The followbars for an ordinary lifetime. The following is a list of complaints against him at the office of Alderman A. F. Donnelly: Burglary at the Children's Home, burglary at the bouse of E. M. Bachman, Neilsville; burglary at the house of E. H. Rohrer, in the same village; burglary at the house of Elam Harnish, burglary at the house of George Meck, burglary at Mrs. S. M. Kramph's residence, city; stealing the horse of Isaac B. Espenshade, burglary at the house of Martin Greenburg, stealing the horse and carriage of Ezra Krider, stealing a set of harness from F. D. Heidelbaugh and burglary at the house of Daniel Graver.

Daniel Graver.

At Alderman Spurrier's are the following charges: stealing a horse of J. H. Myers, of New Danville; stealing a set of harness and rockaway from Abraham Miller, of the same village; the felonious entry of Myers' outhouse; stealing a team from H. McCallister, the felonious entry of the premises of Jacob Harnish, and the robbery of J. L. Wetzeli's, Wrightsville.

At Justice Harpel's he is charged with stealing a horse from G. E. Erb, and a buggy and harness from N. S. Fisher. SAY HE WILL BE CONVICTED say he will be convicted of all the above charges and a number of others. The evi charges and a number of others. The evidence in the cases before Aiderman Spurrier, it is said, will be very strong. Rote and Gerlitzki can be traced from Wrightsville, where Mr. Wetzell's store was robbed, to Safe Harbor, where they crossed the river and paid the party who lerried them over with jewelry, which Mr. Wetzell identifies as having been stolen from his place. They can be followed to New Danville, and will be identified as the parties who abandoned the teams stolen in and near that village.

The policemen who were put on the case timed as the parties who arandoned the teams stolen in and near that viliage.

The policemen who were put on the case have devoted a great deal of time and expense in endeavoring to capture these thieves. Whenever they heard of their being any place they went to that point designated only to meet disappointment after disappointment. They are confident that before long they will be able to report the capture of Jake Buzzard, the chief of the gang. That celebrated outlaw, according to Gerlitzki's statement, is also getting tired of being chased all over the county and is also considering the propriety of imitating his brother Abe by walking to the city and presenting himself at the prison doors. He might as well, for he will be caught. The hearings in all the above named cases have been fixed for Saturday.

The police have corroborative testimony that Gerlitzki intended to surrender himself. Chief Smith received a tolegram from a that Gerlitzki intended to surrender minselt. Chief Smith received a tolegram from a friend yesterday morning that Gerlitzki was then on the road to this city and that he intended calling on his sisters, after which he would deliver himself to the authorities. He did not get to his sisters, however, for the reason above stated—he drank too much and was unable to travel that far.

A CATTLE TRANSACTION.

In Which Levi Sensenig and J. G. Rush are the Parties Interested. The suit of Levi Sensenig against J. G. Rush, of New Danville, occupied the attention of Judge Livingston's court on Wednesday afternoon and this morning. According to plaintiff's testimony on April 1, 1881, he contracted with Rush for his fat cattle. Rush agreed to deliver them about June 15, 1883, and was to receive 6% cents per pound Plaintiff advanced him $200 on account of the cattle on the day the contract was made. When the cattle were delivered plaintiff refused to receive them on the ground that they were not in the condition bargained for and he brings this suit to recover the $200

dvanced.

The defense was that the cattle were in as good condition as Mr. Rush could put them, and when Sensenig refused to accept them be sold them for the best price he could get, 514 cents, and in consequence of the difference in price for which he sold them and the price according to the contract the $300 was absorbed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The street rallway troubles were renewed to-day, the aspect of affairs being very threatening. The Broadway and Seventh Avenue company began to run out more cars this morning and the police reserves and the force of Captain Killilea's precinct were on hand in incressed numbers at the railway depot at Seventh avenue and 50th street. A roundsman and five patrolmen were detailed for each car fered with it. The driver of a wagon ob-structed the first car at the crossing at 44th street and the mob attacked the car and threw t off the track-a wild scene for a few minutes and thousands of persons were attracted to the spot. Squads of police came down and began some promiscuous clubbing. Several arrests were made, and the triangular square was cleared with the exception of the crowds hat lined the sidewalks on Seventh avenue side. Captain Killilea came down from the depot and took charge of the police and soon down and passed along, while the desperate and angry mob watched for an opportunity to obstruct them. Stones and bricks were hurled at several of the cars at intervals, but to serious injury was done to person and property. The car which was upset was too nuch damaged to make the trip and was sent back to the depot. The policemen on board fought for all they were worth, but they were getting the worst of the encounter when the reinforcements arrived. The driver and conductor ran for their lives, At noon the company had about a dozen cars running. Inspector Steers has taken charge of the depot.
