LANCASTER AUGUST 30. 1886.

Opening of the Fair. To-day Lancaster's big agricultural fair opens with every indication of a successful It was a peculiarly happy selection by the fair management of this week for the exhibition, inasmuch as it has no other djacent fair in competition with it, as was the case last year. Coming a week in advance of the state fair in Philadelphia, it es exhibitors at the latter place to display their goods at the local fair on their way East. As will be seen by our report elsewhere, the exhibit this year will be notable in the history of similar events in Lancaster in the past. The display of engines is most noteworthy, the newest and best of farm implements are to be seen, and the rathering of well-known horses promises many exciting race events. These and many other reasons equally strong will cause thousands from the city and county to visit the fair during the ng week. They will not culy be benefitted by what is to be seen, but will inspire to renewed efforts those who have given their time and labor to securing this great display of the resources of the county.

To Make Good Running.

The correspondent of the Pittsburg

Dispatch reports John Stewart, who affili-ated with Wolfe once in independent Reblicanism, as declaring that the Prohibition movement this year is very formidable. Mr. Stewart has for some time been rehabilitated as a Republican and does not confess to any personal leaning toward the Prohibition ment; but in his region he declares that it has drawn into it this year men who have never before stepped out of their party lines; and they are good men, he says. Mr. Stewart is consequently of the opinion that the Prohibition movement is one not to be sneered at by the Republican leaders and he does not think that they are indulging in any such amusement.

The same correspondent reports a Reublican congressman, who dropped in to look at the Prohibition convention at Harg out with the feeling the his party was going to be beaten on the coming occasion. And we are further told that Mr. Anthony Drexel, of Philadelphia, contributes the handsome sum of $10,000 to the Prohibition treasury ; which it will certainly make Mr. Cooper sad to hear. This is a good deal of news to get from the state capital by way of Pittsburg, and it may be that it is not all true, especially that part about Tony Drexel's subscription from which we may possibly deduct a couple of ciphers without getting far from the real figure. But whether Brother Drexel has been extravagantly generous to the cause or no, it will not be likely to suffer for lack of funds. If there is running in the creature it will come out. The rider is bold, the political track particularly clear, and the general situation in every way favorable for a good showing for an 'ism stoutly driven ; and Prohibitionism will be sure to make good running.

Bulgaria and Germany.

The North German Gazette has cautioned the German newspapers to curb their enthusiasm for Prince Alexander for the reason that events in Bulgaria do not in any way affect Germany, and that it would be poor policy to sacrifice the friendship of Russia for the sake of the prince, even though he were an angel in human form. The first comment that this reasoning excites is that it is founded on the false premise that Bulgarian affairs do not concern Germany. The world knows that every step of Russia towards the west is a menace to Germany and that the Bulgarian coup, if successful, would have been such a step.

In spite of the cold-blooded sense in the argument of Prince Bismarck's paper, that the friendship of Russia is more valuable than that of an angel, or a Bulgarian prince, the German people can not be ught to see it that way. The expulsion of Germans from Russia is an event of too recent occurrence for that people to appreciate the friendship that survived such an take it, on the avowed principle that the Lord has called them and they obey. action, and the bravery and ability of the German ruler of Bulgaria have aroused all the enthusiasm of his countrymen. The taunts of the London Economist will do more to counteract Bismarck's soothing syrup than anything that is likely to hap-pen in the Balkans, for they can not fail to see the element of truth in the assertion that Germany is summoning England to redress the wrong done by Russia to a dis tinguished German.

Cardboard States.

Bulg ris has her prince back, and has recrowned him, and so ends one of the most absurd incidents in recent politics. It was characteristic, however, as exhibit. ing the frail condition of the states in the East, that the Europeans have set up to erve " the balance of power." A viga push will knock any of them over. in this case nobody of any account dared to father the push, and the movement ended ridiculously. But nevertheless it instilled to the case with which Bulgaria

The Lancaster INTELLIGENCER is entirely correct when it says that the Gazette, which earnestly supported Wallace for the guber-natorial nomination, will as earnestly support natorial nomination, will as carnestly support Black during the coming campaign. Every Democratic leader and every Democratic newspaper with one exception, in the state is enthusiastically for the ticket. The news-paper exception is the Philadelphia Record, which seems to feel that in order to exhibit its independence it must at certain times and seasons oppose the candidates nominated by its party. It does this with the utmost reg-ularity and without the slightest perceptible effect upon the vote. There need be no sur-prise at the Record's course. Its attack of "independence" is only a little more violent than usual.

Appointed a Railroad Treasurer.

Sunday's foreign dispatches announce the appointment of J. E. MacNay, brother of our appointment of J. E. MacNay, brother of our townsman, Charles MacNay, and late secre-tary of the Stockton & Darlington railway, England, to the treasurership of the North-ceastern railway company. This is one of the largest of the English railways, operating 1,600 miles of double line of way, and with traffic receipts ranging as high as $70,000,000 annually.
