Earthquake Speculations.

The earthquake is the most interesting wagreat deal more about it than we Scientists cannot satisfy our greed, for they know but little themselves that is certain. They speculate, and when there is no attainable fact to distrust their spection, they get credit for knowing where y are but guessing; and guessing badly, as we often find when unexpectedly ts turns up to confound them. And are are no scientists more often or readily ped up than geologists, since there are who are more ready to form concluns upon the insufficient data, which so atly content them. They cannot see into the bowels of the earth ; and it is only in practical men, in search of the dolgo down deep into the earth for it, that its secrets are exposed ; and so often to the confounding of the theorist. The oil and gas product of Pennsylvania has on particularly trying to geological sci-, and it is not yet that it has drawn it-If together to meet the phenomena with mtinfactory explanation of cause and a infactory prophecy as to location, extent and durability. Generally we are told with ence that the oil and gas supply is bound to fail within a generation at farthest; but it does not pay to be a bull on phecy, since daily the yield becomes the pro ger and the price falls lower.

Probably we know as much about the bquake as science will ever tell us, ut some new discovery of practical Perchance if these disturbances ne often and severely, our energy and uity will suffice to find some remedy lleviation that has not been discovered among the barbarous and stupid e that heretofore have been the ake's usual victims. We will hardly stand the overthrowing of our cities out a determined effort to find out how this thing comes and how it is to be made to go. We have had a genius-Captain Ward, was it not ?- who maintained that there was a hole through the world from pole to pole; and if there is not, we may need to make one. We have done great things in the canal digging line, and Muhlenberg, the maker of it. If the utterer of that paper feels aggrieved at the statement that he swore to what was not true in that case, and which he must have known was utterly false and without foundation, the courts of our commonwealth are open to him to seek vindication." It would be better for Mr. Johnson to produce the proof, which he now admits necessary to demonstrate his innocence ; and at all events the courts have stood open to himself to seek vindication by bringing a perjury prosecution against

The INTELLIGENCER has no desire to norme Mr. Johnson. It has treated him with great consideration and toleration. He has just been guilty of an offense for which he could be sent to jail and his name stricken from the toll of attorneys if any one lifted his finger to prosecute. The most that he can ask for himself is the charity of silence ; and the best thing he can do for himself and his party is to take himself out of politics and public sight.

that a hole down to the earth's internal fire, to be a safety valve to it, is beyond our power? Probably it would be an ineffective remedy for the trouble ; but if not we are not without confidence that the trick would be done.

They tell us that the earth was once a nolten sun, whose crust has cooled in the course of an imaginable number of years, so as to be inhabitable ; and that the cooling process created our rocks and hills and is still going on down towards the earth's centre, which is yet molten. The volges are vents for these fires, and when they are active, earthquakes are not. The naturally suggested remedy for the earthquake would therefore be to keep the volcano moving. But on the other hand, if the earth is made to vomit forth constantly her contents will not its equilibrium be affected; and where shall we put the lava in the countless coming ages ? If we let the future take care of itself, we sy perhaps control the present; and that is all that man cares for, the generations to come taking little of his thought. It is an obvious reflection, however, that if the earth's centre is molten and its crust filled with gas and fluids that are let out freely upon its surface, there is going to be in the course of years such a danger in the earth's my as will play hob with it after some fashion that we will not be there to

A Few Words to J. W. Johnson. J. W. Johnson, esq., does himself no credit and his cause no good by the card he blishes in the Philadelphia Times, in atpted vindication of himself from the historical charge that "several years ago he was charged with forging naturalization papers, but was acquitted by pleading the statute of limitation."

Mr. Johnson cites the record and mistates the facts of the case to disprove the accusation. We cheerfully print an ount of what took place on that occaon to show whether or not any injustice has been done him. It must be plain to anyone that, whether or not Mr. Johnson technically pleaded the statute, he escaped y its operation; and when his counsel and the court insisted upon the country, with trying him under a law against which the statute ran, he so plainly showed is purpose to take advantage of that ratings that the common wealth had nothing bat to throw up its hand.

tains his theory that there has been a vast landslide under the bed of the ocean. Professor Mendenhall believes that the earthquakes are the result of a readjustment of the earth's crust or a conforming of the exterior to the interior and considers the appearance of the geysers a proof that the surface is lowering His theory appears the most plausible and re-ceives additional strength from a fortunate guess that he ventured to make on Sunday that another shock would take place between half past ten and two a. m. The shock came at 11:10 p. m., and doubtless the professor was delighted with the confirmation of his prophecy. It was not merely a wild guess, however, but was founded on the belief that the weight of the flood tide, which there rises to a height of six feet, is the immediate determining cause of earthquakes. Professor McGee thought that the worst had passed and we sincerely hope that he is right, but if there is any truth in the theories of his brother scientist the future of Charleston will forever remain uncertain. The fact that earthquakes are most violent in tropical countries where the tide is heavlest would seem to give strength to the tidal theory, and in case of its establishment earthquakes may be predicted by observations of the moon, the ruler of the tides. The fact that these earthquakes have all occurred at high tide has excited comment among people who make no profession to scientific wisdom, and Professor Mendenhall's ideas fit in so nicely with the facts that they will doubtless become popular. Meanwhile the citizens of Lancaster rejoice that they remain unshaken.
