LANCASTER, SEPTEMBER 7, 1888.

Smith's Extremity—A Comparison.
 The coils are tightening around Mayor William B. Smith, of Philadelphia, and the termination of his official existence is not far off. On Monday at the council's investigation of the charges against him, it was shown that a pawnbroker's five checks that had been made payable to the city treasurer had been altered without the knowledge of the drawer, so as to read "pay to William B. Smith." It was further shown that Smith was allowed two per cent interest on his deposits by the Fidelity Safe Deposit and Trust company. This would account for these startling facts which Mayor Smith does not attempt to deny: In January he collected $5,000 and paid nothing to the city treasury; in February $812.50 was collected and $250 paid; in March $505 was collected and nothing paid; in April the receipts were $501.38 and the payments nothing; in May the receipts were $591.95 and payments nothing; June receipts $500 and payments nothing; July receipts $120 and payments nothing. After the exposure the mayor at intervals up to August 27, paid to the city treasurer for license fees, etc., $9,618.55.

The alteration of checks and using city funds for personal uses are serious charges to make against a city's chief magistrate, and it behooves all honest citizens to join in the movement to wipe out this stain on Philadelphia's fair escutcheon. This is the reason why Mayor Smith should not stand upon the order of his going, but go at once out of office.
 But Smith has turned over the money due the city of Philadelphia, J. W. Johnson, ex-city solicitor of this town, quietly deposes councils and keeps in his possession city funds under the pretended right that the city owes him the same. This is Johnson more than Smith. He has thrown down the gauntlet to the people of Lancaster and declares his intention to keep their money until his alleged right to it is determined. It will be funny if the citizens of this town do not take up the impudent challenge. Johnson must disgorge.

Prince Alexander's Display.
 It is given as a point to the discredit of Prince Alexander that he is too fond of display, and squandered large sums of money in the building of a showy palace. His recent entry of Sofia and review of the troops was accomplished on a magnificent charger covered with gold trappings.
 We must not forget that all this display is unnecessary in Eastern countries; that there is an element of childishness about Eastern people that leads them to attach undue importance to the outward symbols of royalty. The spirit of enthusiastic loyalty is more readily aroused for a man who looks every inch a king, as it is said that Alexander does, and if by display he could add to the pride of the people in their king, and so to their devotion to him, the money would be well spent; at least, from a royalist point of view.

To us all this only emphasizes the folly of the theories of believers in the divine sight of kings, and it is feared that Alexander, like Rieni of old, is going too far in his effort to please the eyes rather than the brains of the populace.

A Blessing in Disguise.
 On every hand we hear expressions of sympathy for Charleston that would contrast strongly with the sulphurous wishes expressed with regard to that unfortunate city in the days of the war.
 Here and there men who had been most violent and sincere in their denunciations of the Charleston that fired on the flag have been heard to observe, with a smile that showed they did not mean it, that it was a pity the earth had not swallowed that city before the war. Then these same men would dive into their pockets to contribute their compassionate dollar for the relief of suffering Charleston. A man naturally feels well disposed towards those whom he has favored, and nothing can better close the cracks of the chasm than the interchange of charities between the North and South. The yellow fever and earthquake disasters are blessings sent in disguise, for the strengthening of the love of country; and we may be sure that whenever similar calamities overtake the North, the famous Southern hospitality will be found to have survived the war.

Labor's Great Display.
 Monday was a memorable day in the history of the labor organizations of the large cities. Monster parades were held, followed by large picnics and speech making, and all was done quietly and in good order. The red flag of the anarchist headed none of the ranks of the paraders and no socialistic music and sentiments filled the air. It was the dignified outpouring of the masses of horny-handed toilers of the land, who were distinguished by the fact that they were organized labor.
 There are few who will find fault with this display. Labor has the right to organize and to show the strength of its organization. Monday's marchers were under the American flag and their feet kept to American music. This is as it should be. While labor makes this quiet assertion of its strength and dignity and studiously avoids the pitfalls of anarchy and socialism, it is bound to win to itself many, who under erroneous impressions of its purposes, are now found arrayed against it.

A Step in the Right Direction.
 The United States Naval War college is the name of the institution that was opened yesterday with an address by Admiral Luce. The object of the college is to afford facilities to the officers of the navy to study the science of modern naval warfare. In the course of his address Admiral Luce dwelt upon the necessity of applying the principles of strategy on land to the maneuvers of steam war vessels, and said that they propose to build up a new science of naval warfare. Concluding his address: "Practically the United States is without a navy, but that is no reason why the naval officer of to-day should not take up the study of the theory of the profession, so as to be prepared when, in the fullness of time and the wisdom of Congress, a modern fleet shall be built up."

This seems to be a step in the right direction, for theory is at least a cheap, and when our officers have a navy they will find it useful in practice. The college class consists of eighteen officers from the top-peg class just graduated, so that they are already well trained in advanced naval warfare, and by graduation from Annapolis are fully qualified for the practical details of the work.

Mr. Logan has announced that he will make no speeches outside of Illinois with the exception of one in Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh has the earthiest, the most glib, and the most able lawyer in the country, and for a time it luxuriated in the elegance of a Talmage. Why this monopoly of blessings?

From France come wonderful reports of a newly invented projectile that can penetrate eighteen inches of armor, nine feet of oak backing and then a ten-inch plate beyond and is very little hurt by the operation. If this is true, armor is on its last legs, and no vessel now afloat or on the stocks would venture to confront so terrible a weapon. The pneumatic gun which throws large masses of explosive gelatine and the device of using rubber cushions in ordinary cannon for the same purpose have both passed the experimental stage in America successfully, and may be regarded as formidable rivals of the French invention. Both tend toward the abandonment of heavy armor and indicate that the wars of the near future will be marked by the liberal use of explosives of enormous power, not only in torpedoes and mines, but in shells.

In fact things military seem to be moving on such rapid paths that one hardly cares to think of the frightful loss of life that attend the naval conflicts of years to come. The recent performances of the Peace-maker show that, operating under water, it could place torpedoes and retiring to a safe distance discharge them and explode the most needed fleet. We will doubtless always need the fleet, our cruisers now being built and planned for the navy, but for defense against the most recent engines of destruction, attention should be devoted to similar inventions of our own. An ordinary field piece arranged with rubber cushions three or four feet apart, and a projectile across the Potomac lately, and expended a cavity six feet deep and twenty wide in a solid rock. With this invention, the pneumatic gun, and the Peace-maker, no alarm need be felt at the French projectile.

The fact that the supply of tents available for the people of Charleston was extremely small does not show an encouraging condition of affairs in the war department. We should at least have enough tents on hand to enable the entire city of Charleston to go into camp in case of necessity.

The story of Artemas Martin, now librarian in the office of the United States coast and geodetic survey in Washington, and how he achieved distinction as a mathematician without ever having attended a college, reads like a romance founded upon a heated imagination. He was a poor New York farm boy who had never looked into an arithmetic until his fourteenth year. At the age of eighteen he was contributing to mathematical publications, and when 20 years of age, in September, 1871, was chosen editor of a department of higher mathematics in the Normal Monthly published at Millersville by Prof. Edward Brooks, and held the position until the Monthly was discontinued in August, 1876. He published in the Normal Monthly a series of 16 articles on Diophantine Analysis. From that time his fame began to spread over the country. Yale and Rutgers colleges gave him degrees, and he was elected a member of each of the leading French, English and Scotch mathematical societies. Born in 1855, he still should have a long career of usefulness before him. It is to be regretted that he is now seriously ill in Washington.

PERSONAL.
 SECRETARY BAYARD is the only member of the cabinet now in Washington.
 CONGRESSMAN RANDALL, ill at Berkeley with the gout, is said to be a very sick man.
 DR. WILLIAM R. ATKINSON, of Philadelphia, has been detailed by the state board of health to investigate the causes of the prevalence of typhoid fever at Allentown.
 HON. ARTHUR G. SPOFFORD, the special agent sent by the United States government to inquire into the cutting case, has completed his investigation and reports to the Mexican government to look at all the records in the case.
 GEORGE J. BATH, known in the West as the "Poet of Elm Park," an intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln, and through whose efforts the unmarked and uncarved grave of Thomas Lincoln, father of the great leader, was relieved of woods and brush, and a handsome monument erected over it a few years ago, died on Sunday night in Mattson, Ill., aged 80 years.

Base Ball Briefs.
 The Association games yesterday were: At Philadelphia, Athletics, 6; Brooklyn, 3; at Pittsburgh, Pittsburg, 10; Boston, 4; at Staten Island, Mets, 1; Baltimore, 7.
 The League games of yesterday were: At St. Louis, St. Louis, 4; Philadelphia, 3; at Chicago, Chicago, 7; New York, 4; at Detroit, Detroit, 3; Washington, 2; at Kansas City, Boston, 4.
 When the bases were full yesterday Stovey made home run. Five runs were scored in the inning.
 Mullins gave a terrible pounding in the home run.
 Yesterday the Press had a chance to let itself loose in praise of the Athletics.

Which did very poorly yesterday for New York, and he had no less than ten errors. Yesterday Washington had but four hits off Baldwin, but gained the game for the Wolverines by his timely hitting. Jim Knowles had a home run.
 Up in Bradford there is a club which is composed largely of ex-Southern League players. Of late they have been doing up every team that comes their way. Yesterday the Altoona visited the place and won easily by 15 to 4.

WANTED BY THE LAW.

 Seeking a job.
 Twenty good fellows,
 Looking for a job.
 Twenty sharp dealers,

 Things done in a hurry,
 When we want a quartail,
 We only get a cup.

DISCUSSING THE CROPS.
THE LOCAL YIELD OF CORN WILL NOT BE A VERY GOOD ONE.

Apples and Grapes Reported Short—Hay the Best for Years—When to Cut Clover.
 —James Black, Eq., to Lecture on Farming at the October Meeting.

The Lancaster County Agricultural and Horticultural association held a stated meeting in the Young Men's Christian association hall Monday afternoon, president Landis in the chair.
 In the absence of John C. Linville, secretary, M. D. Kending served as secretary, pro tem.
 The following named members were present:
 John H. Landis, president, Millersville; M. D. Kending, Crossville; H. M. Engle, Marietta; Levi S. Reist, Oregon; J. M. Swartz, city; W. C. Fyler, city; F. H. Dittendorfer, city; Wm. E. J. Rogers, city; H. H. Hershey, Landisville; Amos Stauffer, Marietta; Levi Cross, East Hempstead; J. H. B. Rudy, city; Calvin Cooper, Berd-Spring; J. M. Johnson, city; Harry J. Johnson, Millersville; Warren Miller, Warwick; Casper Miller, Conestoga; Israel L. Landis, Marietta; Daniel Smyth, Union, Ephraim; M. H. Miller, Millersville; J. A. J. Hartman; Henry J. Rush, West Willow; Jacob L. Brutsaert, East Hempstead; A. H. Worth, Colerain; and Dr. S. E. Weber, city.

CROP REPORTS.
 Casper Miller said the corn crop would be tolerably good, but there would be failures where the wheat fields had been plowed down and planted in corn; the fruit is falling off very fast; there will be a poor crop of winter apples; the grapes are a very poor crop; nine out of ten varieties are failures; the Concord is almost always the best. Mr. Miller showed three varieties that he thought would be better than all Concord, namely: the Worcester, the Pockinging and the Premier. H. M. Engle said he agreed with Mr. Miller as to the conditions of the corn; he thought the apple crop was better than reported by Mr. Miller, but there would not be enough winter apples to supply the home demand. To James Miller, Warwick, he named a number of other varieties that were worth growing along with Concord. The Bartlett pears are doing well; some of the varieties are cracked and are falling off. The pasture is short. Rainfall about three inches during August.

Mr. Reist said the clover crop last harvest was very large, and the second crop if cut, would yield from one to two tons per acre, and would save a fine crop of hay. To James Miller, Warwick, he named the wheat that he had planted and the result. The ground was very dry and hard to prepare for seeding fall crops.

James Collins said the corn in Colerain and Little Britain is better than in some cases in Conestoga. The clover crop is good; some clover has been cut that will yield a bushel or more of seed per acre; potatoes are generally ordinary; vegetables are generally good; apples medium, a good many falling off; there was a good crop of hay, the best for years.

Mr. A. B. Worth, of Colerain, said his early planted potatoes did not come up well, and he don't know the result.
 Johnson Miller reported on progress of mowing of clover fields and stubbles had been suggested by Mr. Engle and others. He believed it would injure the roots.
 Mr. Engle reported he would show that the finest fields were those that had been mowed off; they look better, and make pasture better, and by mowing the winter wheat is almost entirely kept down. The clover should be cut off in August. It is too late to cut now.

J. Hoffman Hershey did not believe in cutting off the second growth of clover. Let it remain on the field and it will keep green all winter, and give a great growth of hay in the following summer.
 H. J. Rush, Piquette, thought the character of the soil had a good deal to do when we consider the propriety of cutting off the clover. It might be good in one case and not in another. He thought the protection afforded to the roots of the clover in winter by allowing the grass to remain on the ground was a matter worthy of careful consideration.

M. D. Kending reported that there was no pleuro-pneumonia in Manor township at present.
 Mr. A. B. Worth asked what was the remedy for him that had the long head of cows in the past eight years, and had left one at home to-day which he expected to find dead when he reached home.
 Elyah S. Hoover never heard of a cure for milk fever, but he had heard of preventives. One of these is to milk the cow a few weeks before calving. Another preventive is to be careful in feeding her cow, especially light, both before and after parturition.

H. M. Engle endorsed Mr. Hoover's treatment; keep the cow in good condition; feed freely until a week or two before calving; then slack off to about half ration and give her lighter food.
FERTILIZERS FOR WHEAT.
 In answer to a question as to what kind of manures were best for wheat, Mr. Hiller said that perhaps the "Complete Fertilizer" was the best and cheapest. It costs from $30 to $40 per ton, and 500 pounds per acre should be used.
 A discussion on the use of fertilizers for wheat and other crops followed. Messrs. Reist, Engle, Kending, Rudy, Miller, Collins and others took part. The drift of the discussion favoring a general use of phosphate fertilizer.

WHAT I KNOW ABOUT FARMING.
 It was announced that James Black, esq., would lecture before the society at the next meeting, the first Monday in October, and he very has never met a better man in the county.
 The following gentlemen were selected to attend the Berks county fair, commencing Friday, at 10 o'clock, and returning on the following day:
 Committee to attend the state fair: M. D. Kending, Johnson Miller, and Israel L. Landis.
 Committee to attend York county fair: Messrs. Brackbill, of Strasburg; Kreider, of Mount Joy; and Marshall, of York.
 Dr. S. E. Weber, having come in, was asked to give his treatment of cows suffering from milk fever. He said that among veterinary surgeons the most successful was to give the cow fever. There were a dozen diseases which breeding cows were subject to, as purpural fever, purpural paralysis, apoplexy of the brain, milk fever, and so on, which were known among farmers as cow fever, but each of which were quite different from the others, and required different treatment. The best thing to do in such cases was to send for a competent surgeon who could properly diagnose the case.
 Casper Miller presented a list of varieties of very nice grapes; namely, the Worcester, the Concord, like Reist in color, but larger and perhaps a little finer in flavor; the Pockinging, a fine white grape; and the Premier, also a white grape of fine flavor and of unusually close cluster.

Levi S. Reist presented a small branch of York Imperial apples on which there were growing the most perfect specimens. The branch was only twenty inches long.
TRIP FOR MALONE'S SONS.
 The Market Street Bridge Bill Almost Unanimously Passed by Philadelphia Council.

The adjourned meeting of Philadelphia Council, which was held Thursday, for the purpose of taking action on the message of the mayor, announcing his veto of the bill approving the contract and sureties of R. A. Malone & Sons, of Lancaster, for the construction of the bridge over the Schuylkill river, at Market street, was held on Monday, both branches passing the bill over the veto of an overwhelming vote.
 It was nearly ten o'clock when the lower branch called to order, and the report of the joint committee of Finance and Surveys was read, recommending the passage of the bill. The report was accompanied by that of the Chief Engineer and Surveyor. Sunday which was read.
 Mr. Ford made a short speech in favor of the veto, to which Mr. Harshbarger responded. The gentleman from the Seventeenth argued that the contractors were merely stung financially and should not have received the contract for iron work.

"When the gentleman has had a little more experience in legislative matters he will see the impropriety of giving him a majority of this kind," said Mr. Harshbarger. "The only portion of the ordinance referred to in the message, is a clause in relation to the change in the specifications, and these changes are left to the discretion of the survey committee and the chief engineer and surveyor."
 It is generally understood that the condition of the foundations of the piers and abutments until they are torn down to low water mark. If it should be found necessary to remove three or four, or even ten feet more, the contractor is bound to perform the work under an estimate made by the chief engineer or surveyor, or by the architect, and the contractor is bound to the lowest bidder. The amount of the contract is $2,100, and the appropriation is $200,000, leaving but $200,000 to be expended by the department under any circumstances without the further action of council.

"The mayor has made a great mistake. He has placed the most respectable people in jeopardy, and the completion of the bridge has been deferred for six or eight months by the loss of the best of the building season this year. Any question raised on this matter is a reflection on ourselves."
 Mr. Ford followed with a few remarks, when the bill was passed by a vote of 12 to 5. Mr. Montgomery and Mr. Roberts voting in the negative. When the bill was presented in the select branch, Mr. Brown moved that it be passed notwithstanding the veto, which was agreed to by a vote of twenty-three yeas to one nay. Mr. Montgomery voting the only one recorded in the negative.
