Ob, I haven't any objection to swallowng 'em dead, but you know I'd prefer to have 'em alive." This rather creepy remark was made by a This rather creepy remark was made by a short, thick-set man, with a ruddy complexion that betckened a seafaring life; a broad, high forehead surmounted by iron-gray hair, which also fringed his face in thick, mutton-chop whiskers; a mustacne to match, and clear blue eyes that beamed geulally upon one. Just at this moment, however, they were fixed with a semi-disappointed sir upon a glass globe haif filled with water, which stood before him on the floor, and around which several men were gathered, including representatives of the press. In the water floated a number of sprawling objects with long extremities.

"Being as 1 saw these alive when they were caught, I don't mind swallowing 'em," continued the old man as he stooped down and dipped his hand into the water, removing it with a young frog, six or seven inches long, dangling by their "leapers" from his fingers.

"I like 'em better alive." he repeated,

"I like 'em better alive," he repeated, shaking his head like a comoissour at an overdone steak, as he lifted the flatby creature daintily on high. As he made his leisurely preparations for his singular gastronomic feat, two or three of the reporters were seen to hastily place their handkerchiefs at their mouth, but, too well trained to let the "lacts" escape them, none removed their eyes from the man or his projected meal.

Throwing his head back with that sudden and well-known jerk that only an experienced oyster lover can perform with the proper sang froid) excepting, perhaps, the granger when attacking a dish of asparagus, he raised the dainty (") morsel a lew inches above his face, opened wide his mouth, and pausing a moment, as if enjoying the anticipation of the coming pleasure, he dropped the snimal slowly, head foremost, into his throst.

There was the usual closing of the eyes which betokens delectation, a slight gulp, and all was over. No ; the man lived, but all was over with No; the man lived, but all was over with the frog.

The man who has discovered and practises this, to say the least, curious diet, is "En-glish Jack." Thirty-eight years ago he salled as able seaman from Hong Kong, and while in the Indian Ocean was shipwrecked just to the eastward of Madagascar; thirteen seaman besides himself clung to pieces of the vessel and were eventually drifted ashore on a deside island. This place, which they the vessel and were eventually drifted ashore on a desolate island. This place, which they at first halled as a haven of life, proved one of death, for, until rescued by an American ship after eighteen or twenty months' so-journ, they were obliged to subsist upon such diet as snakes and frogs, interspersed with a few herbs, all of which they were forced to eat raw since they had no means of procuring fire. procuring fire.

Facts Worth Knowing.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the masal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been stow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with flouches, snuffs, powders, syringes, astringents or any similar applications, because they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces, and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that ca, tarth can inflict testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by Kly's Cream Balm.

Ayer's Sarasparilla has effected, in our city many most remarkable cures, a number of which battled the efforts of the most experienced physicians. Were it necessary, I could give the names of many individuals who have been cured by taking this medicine. In my own case it has certainly worked wonders, reflections of the statement of the statemen RHEUMATISM
