Beaver and the Constitution.

General Beaver in his Pittsburg speech, sought to handle the freight discrimination issue very tenderly by declaring that the law of the state could not control railroad corporations...

Whether General Beaver is wrongly assumed because of his Pittsburg declaration depends entirely upon whether he intended to say that the provisions of the state constitution concerning common carriers should or should not be respected and enforced.

Unless indeed he can clearly show that it is not enforceable, with proper regard to the interests of the people and railroads of the state, he is not in favor of the regulation by the state of freight charges save within the state.

It is this what General Beaver meant to say his intended saying was all right; while his actual saying was wrong. If he is so inexact at expressing what he means he will not be a safe campaigner for his party.

It is not unusual for candidates to get into tight places, and this state constitution has been cornering the Republican candidates for the state offices and the legislature ever since its adoption.

An English Lord and Husband. An English lord has come amongst us as the manager of an actress, whose husband has come along without an invitation.

the police court, where he testified that he knew of no misconduct of his wife with the lord saved that they went to the theatre together. The husband's violence manifestly was prompted by a desire to be well paid to be amiable, and his price seems to have been so high that the wife and the lord "struck" against it and landed the blackmailer in the Tombs, where he languishes for lack of bail, to answer for his peacefulness.

This husband is essentially a European product. We do not think that this country is yet civilized enough to produce a man who desires to obtain his living by blackmailing his wife. There are plenty of men who will live off the earnings of their wives, and some doubtless who will not care much how the earnings are made; but we do not think that we have yet produced a man who demands tribute from an innocent wife to refrain from posing her as guilty.

The lord and the lady may be innocent as the husband says; but if so their discretion is small. Probably they are not old enough to be very wise. The lord is thirty-one and says that he does not care at all what anybody thinks or says of him; which is a very natural way of talking at that age.

What difference does it make if Jeff Davis has Gen. Sherman by the hair? This country has no room for old men's quarrels.

It is said that a big coal strike is at hand at Hazleton and vicinity, and that October 3 is the date on which it will be inaugurated. The mines ask for a restoration of the 10 per cent. reduction made in January, 1885, and seems reasonable when it is considered that tolls on coal were increased twice in September. With winter coming on and the necessity for money urgent, it would not be surprising if the coal owners should propose to secure an increase of wages.

The overcoat is now in season and so is the payment of voting taxes. The latter cannot be done after to-night.

The death of Mr. Von Schmalensee at Lancaster will be here with great regret. Though only twenty-six years old he occupied the responsible position of superintendent of the Cornwall and Cornwall & Mount Hope railroads and was capable of filling an even more important position.

Unless indeed he can clearly show that it is not enforceable, with proper regard to the interests of the people and railroads of the state, he is not in favor of the regulation by the state of freight charges save within the state.

HERE AND THERE.

I had been looking for a long time for a sketch of Gen. Alexander Ogilvie, which I knew had been printed in one of the old magazines. I found it the other day in Putnam for 1883, and I tore it out for republication in the INTELLIGENCER. It is a character in the Southern tier of Pennsylvania counties. The sketch is full of life and vigor. Its subject was one of the notable men of Pennsylvania. He was the father of the scarcely less famous Charles Ogilvie and Alexander, Jr. The former is memorable in the political history of the country as the author of the famous speech in Congress against Van Buren's administration. The entire diatribe occupied twelve hours of delivery, and fitly many pages of the old Globe. That part of it which gave him his appellation of "Spooky Ogilvie" was an attack upon the extravagance of life at the White House in the table use there of a set of gold spoons; but it is a speech of the highest order, and a memorable effort made in the Somerset court house describing the visit of Gov. Ritner of the committee to notify him of his nomination by the Democracy. It was a large part of that committee, and his account of the event was one of the most picturesque productions of the country's literary history. It is a study of the character of the founder of this famous house.

I ran up the Delaware valley the other day, with the mercury at about 90, and the afternoon sun blustering the west side of the car. When I came down in the morning the early passenger car, the afternoon car, the ride from Trenton up beyond Phillipsburg and to Manunka Chunk is one that Lancaster people seldom take, but it can be commended for variety and picturesque beauty. I took the Delaware a very beautiful stream, and the growth upon the hillside on either bank was tinged with the first tints of autumn. The autumn business of the Delaware and the young maples have begun to turn. I asked Mr. Buckaw the other day, when I have always thought knew all such things, what the word "chunk" meant; he didn't seem to know, but we agreed that it was probably the gap made by the river cutting through the hills, as they seem to be the continuation of the scenery at Manunka Chunk and Manunka Chunk. This latter is the station that marks the junction of the Delaware and the Pennsylvania railroad with the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, as it runs from New York to Scranton. A few miles up the river is the famous Delaware Water Gap, which is a very beautiful stream, and the growth upon the hillside on either bank was tinged with the first tints of autumn.

An odd book picked up on a book stall the other day, is "The Life of Martin Van Buren, His Appointment to the Government, and the Appointment Successor of Gen. Andrew Jackson," written by Davy Crockett. It makes no pretensions to great literary merit, but is as rough and ready as his famous author. It was not of the usual order of campaign biography by "someon" friends, but a very interesting arrangement of his subject. It was printed in 1835, in Philadelphia, and copies of it are considered quite scarce. I saw a book hunter who makes collections in his line.

This was the frontier statesman's view of politicians in his day: "The Statesmen [of] the present age, and the people are the cards they play with. And it is curious to see how good the comparison holds as to all the games, the shuffling and the tricks performed with the cards of politics, as they are sometimes called. From 'three up' to 'whist,' from a 'constable' to a 'president,' the hands are always dealing out; and in both cases the way to win and shuffle is a surprise to all beginners."

Davy was something careless as to orthography and grammar and such signs of frankness as these shine through the pages: "I have gone far enough on this book to show what I mean." "My father's parents were humble, plain and not much troubled with book knowledge; and so were mine. His father hung out his sign on a post, with a dash on it intended for a hawk, and with the words 'Hawk and Horse' for man and horse, and so did mine; for both kept little village taverns. He has become a great man, without any good reason for it, and so has he. He is a very good man for president, without the least pretensions; and so have I. But here the similarity stops; from the end of the one line to the end of the other, I never had a word to say to a thing; I never had but one. He was generally half bent; I tried to be as straight as a gun barrel. He could not bear his own mind; mine is never minded mine. He forgot all about his old associates because they were poor folks; I stuck to the people that made me." &c. &c.

One who enjoyed some breakfasts and suppers at Penryn park this summer, and who recently visited it and found it rather inferior, a director in the Chicago & Alton railroad. Our season now is based on the "little iron" route. The hotel does not seem to be the grade. Chickens cross with soon, before it is the moon. The autumn leaves are rustling where we ate.

As one travels through this vale of tears, hunting campaign subscriptions and dispensing with political wisdom, he justifies a variety of people, but really I think the worst is the one who is a very good man for president, without the least pretensions; and so have I. But here the similarity stops; from the end of the one line to the end of the other, I never had a word to say to a thing; I never had but one. He was generally half bent; I tried to be as straight as a gun barrel. He could not bear his own mind; mine is never minded mine. He forgot all about his old associates because they were poor folks; I stuck to the people that made me." &c. &c.

A Cruel Operation. From the Baltimore Sun. At a street corner in Naples will be found a subject for Mr. Bergh. There is a bird shop there with nightingales, goldfinches and robins. Sometimes a crowd of gamins is collected to witness a little surgical operation. Some charmed birds in a brasser, and the operator thrusts into it a needle with a wooden handle. He then takes from a cage a recently caught black bird, with a red net around its neck, and puts it into the cage. It needs much skill to do this successfully. An unsteady hand would prematurely kill the bird, and the operation is a cruel one. The birds die, but that is only after a couple of days of agony. You still see the signs of the hanging round the shop, with the sight of eyes swollen to the size of a pea, but in the rare cases of recovery the bird sings briskly through the twilight hours, day and night being the same to it.

Physicians recommend Dr. Hall's Cough Syrup for bronchitis, sore throats, and colds of long standing. For sale by all druggists.

Overthrow. Old Updates-Red Star Cough Cure. It never fails. -Ready-Red-Red-Red.

ERUPTION OF THE SKIN CURED. BUCKLE, ONTARIO, CANADA, September 2, 1886. I have used Hall's Cough Cure for the past fifteen years, and think them the best cathartic and anti-bilious remedy known. For some five years I suffered with an eruption of the skin that gave me great pain and was cured by different blood remedies, but, although gaining strength, the itching was unrelieved. I finally concluded to try Dr. J. C. Mitchell's Blood Purifier. I took six each night for four nights, then five, four, three, two, lessening each time by one, and then for one month took one every night; with the happy result that now my skin is perfectly clear and has been so ever since. ED. VENNEY.

The Same Human Nature. Many vain attempts are made to repeat the remarkable success of Benson's Caprine Plaster. This splendid remedy is known, said and used everywhere, and its prompt action and universal curative powers are well known. It is a plaster, and its use is simple. It is a plaster, and its use is simple. It is a plaster, and its use is simple.

MR. RUSH IS ON DECK.

HE PUT FORTH ONE OF HIS ASTRO-NOMICAL THEORIES. Its Effect is to Demonstrate That Isaac Newton Was all Wrong on His Theory of Planets Moving in Ellipses, Parabolas and Hyperbolas. It must not be supposed that because Henry G. Rush, of New Danville, this county, has been silent for several weeks over his newly discovered astronomical theory that he has abandoned the effort to prove that Newton and Kepler and those who follow them are wrong on the question of the paths of orbits. On the contrary, he has been at work ever since his original announcement gathering his conclusions, and he is more than ever convinced that he is right and he will show it to the world in a short time. Mr. Rush's work, embodying his remarkable views, will include the demonstration of from 30 to 40 theorems. The formulae that he has evolved have given very satisfactory results in their application to cometary orbits. His views do not break down the old established system of astronomy, but establish it on a firmer and more correct basis. In the communication which we present to-day, Mr. Rush establishes a theorem which is number eight of his system. It defends the circular theory of orbits and necessarily demonstrates the falsity of the ellipse theory. But we will let it speak for itself.

THE DEMONSTRATION. Theorem VIII. If a body moves in a circular orbit drawn by a force within that force varies inversely as the square of the distance. Let APP be the given orbit, B the position of the force within, B the centre of the orbit and P the position of the moving body at any time. BP represents the eccentricity of the orbit, BP the radius and S P the radius vector to the point P. Suppose the body to move from A to P in a unit of time, then CA is the measure of attraction in a unit of time. From properties of the circle we have P C : P B :: P C : P B. Then by Trigonometry with BP as a radius of arc, we have: 2 R -versed sine: sin PBA :: sin PBA :versed sine. When the angle PBA is taken infinitely small, versed sine may be omitted from the first term then: 2 R : sin PBA :: sin PBA :versed sine or 2versed sine = Sin^2 R. From principles of mechanics, the effect of attraction in this case versed sine = 1/2 R t^2. The force multiplied by the square of the time. In that case the time is unity, hence: Versed sine = 1/2 R. Whence (2versed sine) = Sin^2 (above). Let r represent the radius vector and H the arc described in a unit of time. When the arc is infinitely small sine arc, hence H = 1/2 r arc = 1/2 r sin arc = 1/2 r sin^2. Substituting this value of sin^2 in the expression, force = Sin^2 / R - we have: Force = 4H^2 / R^2 and since: 4H and R are constants. Force varies as 1/R^2 which is the proposition.

SOME grocers are so short-sighted as to decline to keep the "Ivory Soap," claiming it does not pay as much profit as inferior qualities do, so if your regular grocer refuses to get it for you, there are undoubtedly others who recognize the fact that the increased volume of business done by reason of keeping the best articles more than compensates for the smaller profit, and will take pleasure in getting it for you. A WORD OF WARNING. There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the Ivory," they are NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it. Copyright 1886, by Procter & Gamble.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC COMPANY. Tried in the Crucible S.S.S. Tried in the Crucible. About twenty years ago I discovered a little sore on my cheek, and the doctor pronounced it cancer. I have tried a number of physicians, but without receiving any permanent benefit. Among the number were one of two specialists. The medicine they applied was like fire to the sore, causing intense pain. I saw a statement in the papers telling what S. S. S. had done for others similarly afflicted. I procured some at once. Before I had used the second bottle the neighbors could notice that my cancer was healing up. My general health had been bad for two or three years-I had a hacking cough and spit blood continually. I had a severe pain in my breast. After taking six bottles of S. S. S. my cough left me and I grew stouter than I had been for several years. My cancer has healed over all but a little spot about the size of a half dime, and it is rapidly disappearing. I would advise everyone with cancer to get S. S. S. a safe cure. MRS. NANCY J. McCONAUGHEY, Ash Grove, Tippecanoe Co., Ind. FEBRUARY 16, 1886. SWIFT'S Specific is entirely vegetable, and seems to cure cancers by forcing out the impurities from the blood. Treatise on Blood and its Diseases mailed free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drovers 3, Atlanta, Ga. HATS, CAPS, &c.
