THE HAT MY PATRER WORE.

You are looking at my daddy's old bat. Which for twenty years he wore: His father before him sported it For twenty years or more. It was intended to hand it down Straight on from sire to hand it down Straight on from sire to son, 'Twas mentioned so in my father's will, But I guess its day is done. You'll notice its shape han little odd, But it was once in style, And its furry mapand color of gray Would be sure to make you smile. Twas strongly built, and there isn't adent To be seen in the rim or crown, Which shows the former proprietors had No habit of paint tog the town. It was never mashed o'er election news, Nor kicked in in an opera ball, Twas gullantly doffed to the dames of

Coal Monopoly

From the N. Y. Herald. The coal companies are still engaged in their conspiracy to control the production of fuel. Their endeavor to mee the indictment of Governor Pattison by plausible and specious plans will probably be term to shreds by Attorney General Cassidy, while the whole American public may be safely trusted to reach a just conclusion as to the rights of a syndicate of this kind to enrich themselves at the expense of every preside in the land.

The man who corners a necessary of life is the enemy of every laborer in the country, and should receive the execration which he richly deserves. By limiting the production of the coal mines for speculative purposes he deliberately brings his employes to the verge of ruin. Able bodied men are thrown out of work whenever it suits his convenience. They and their entire families have the means of livelihood according to his caprice, and according to his caprice they suffer for want of food. That is despotism intolerable. And again, by putting up the price of coal he robs every home in the country of some of its simple luxuries if not of many of its comforts. He oppresses the wage earners from Maine to California, draws from their scanty pittance the tribute which aggregates wealth for himself. The man who corners a necessary of life which aggregates wealth for himself.

There should be no mercy in the law as there is none in the hearts of the people for these conspirators, who make the poor shiver with cold that they may themselves enjoy whatever ill-gotten wealth can buy. ---

Havor Among the Grizzlies. From the Detroit Free Press A Detroiter who lately returned from a trip to the far West was asked if he saw any grizzly bears while rambling about. "Grizzlies! Oh, certainly; I killed five of them myself."

On another occasion he gave the number at seven, and again at nine, and yesterday some of his friends went to him and said: "Of course we don't want to seem captious but we want to ask about those grizzlies. The different statements made are working to our injury, and we'd..."
"Well, what would be a fair number?" be interrupted.

Why we want the truth of course "Ob, if that's the case put it down at ten, and I'll make a memorandum so as to stick to it! Yes, gentlemen, I killed ten grizzlies and several get away to die in their dens."

How President Cleveland Spends His Evenings From the New York Herald.

All of the members of the president's offi cial family are once again at home in Wash ington. When he was a bachelor the cabine officers were dearer to him than now. They supplied him with plenty of material for his plodding and methodical habits. With a good gar and a bottle or two of lager he would sit up until after midnight familiarizing himself with the details of every department. The same habit which he had when mayor of Buffalo and governor of New York clung to him until very early last summer, when other habits unlike any he had ever known before had to be cultivated for Mrs. Cleveland's sake. The necessity for so much piodding has greatly disappeared. The members of the cabinet do not sit up so late in the White House as last year at this time, and and for these concomitants of his single days, they ar e still provided, but used at another time Evenings in the parior with the household company take the place of lonely work in the library, and sometimes the president ven-tures to accompany the ladies in their songs, though he is not much of a vocalist, according to his own statement.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzied and buffied the medical profession more than massicatarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing, nanseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very lew or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of Ely's Cream Ralm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.
