The Local Labor Vote.

elections show in their results, as by now appear, no great change in the clifical condition. Pennsylvania clings ber Republican idols; the Prohibition which was expected to be largely ind, remaining insignificant and the abor vote, which was expected to reintoe the Democratic side, not being apat in the ballot.

So far as our local experience of the of the labor element goes, it cannot a held to be the important political facthat it is naturally thought to be. The ity Democratic candidate for the legislare was especially adapted to secure his vote but comes out of the t without showing that he resived its support. He was considered to be a good and strong candidate, and ertainly should have attracted, as a laborng man himself, the votes of his fellow rers, if the labor issue was the one that liveoled their ballots. It evidently did ot to any great extent : though it is not ible to say to what degree it was et. ctive, owing to two things which worked way votes from the Democratic candihe was understood to be the labor candite; and there were a number of Demorate who would not support a labor can. lidate for the office of legislator after seeing that the grand master workman of the had thrown its vote in New York to George, whose views are thought to run dangerously close socialism. We are well advised that this was the cause of the loss of Democratic votes to Drachbar in this city. But the great drain from him was in the vote that was bought. There never has been such undisguised traffic in votes here. Reblican money seems to have been thrown great masses into doubtful legislative districts, of which this was considered to be one, owing to the supposed strength of the Democratic nomines among the work ingmen. Votes were purchased in any quan-

It is the custom, you know, and I think our people are noted for their large proportion of virtuous women. Virkie is as much respected in the mountains as anywhere eise in the world, It is true both parties may be guilty of this election infamy, but the Democratic party have always struggled against it, and have been compelled to it, as a necessary evil, owing to lack of Republican cooperation in reform. When I was in Washington the first winter When I was in Washington the first winter of my congressional life I found myxelf sating alongside a man I didn't know. I turned to him and said : "What's your name?" Said he: "My name's Allen, and I'm from Mississippi. I know who you are well enough : you are Governor Curtin, of Peun-sylvania, the great tariff state.", "Well," said Mr. Curtin, "Allen, as we are going to sit together I guess we might as well be friends, and," said the speaker, "we are trends to this day." THE trustees of Dickinson college have decided to admit the colored boy whose application caused such a sensation in the college a short time since. It is difficult to see how they could do anything else under the circumstances, though it may be confidently predicted that the colored student will afford pretext for disorder to that turbulent element that is always to be found in college

" Speaking of the tariff, though," said Mr. Allen, "down in Mississippi, governor, we don't know anything about it, and the more halls.
