LANCASTER, NOVEMBER 22, 1886.

The Archbishop's Pastoral.

The utterances of Archbishop Corrigan. in his pastoral letter, upon the Henry idea of the lack of the right of property in land are as convincing in their logic as they will be effective in their influence. The promised combination of the Socialistic element of the population with the laboring element will receive a severe check in the repulse which this high Catholic church authority thus gives to the doctrine that there should be no property in land. This idea of Mr. George was so captivating to the landless that Pow derly threw himself with his Knights of Labor into the arms of this new apostle of progress; to find, when the embrace was made, that he was clasping a whole armful of false doctrines; that he was embracing an ardent believer in the right of man to the free enjoyment of light and air and earth, also the use of all that the earth produced, free from the tax laid by the sel-fish government of any country to protect its labor from the competition of that of other countries. Mr. Powderly's Knights of Labor are supposed generally to believe in the doctrine of protection, which is defended chiefly as the means whereby the wage of labor may be made greater.

But Mr. George's doctrine about the lack of property in land is more damaging to the laboring interest than his free trade doctrine would be, since it would stop the mprovement of land and the works of labor engaged in it. As Archbishop Corrigan pointedly says, man has the use of air. and light and land, but of land be cannot have the full enjoyment unless he has the right of ownership, because it must be improved to be enjoyed. Who would toil to cultivate a farm if every other person had a like right with himself to use that farm after its improvement, or what sculptor would cut a marble who did not own the stone. The experience of all the past ages has taught, the need to our civilization of the right of property. and it is not likely that we will have a new revelation at this late day, and a revolution in the conditions which give to man his bread at the cost of his sweat, and to those who have labored the right to the enjoyment of its fruit.

It is a strange thing that the laboring class, which is particularly interested in preserving the right of property that it may have the employment that it seeks, should be the one that is always expected to strike down this right, which gives them their bread. It is the old story of grasping for the hen that lays the golden eggs; it will doubtless be repeated in every age while time lasts. Georges will be always springing up to teach a doctrine that a fresh experience of the generation will again prove to be false. But while there is such sound doc'rine taught by the teachers as that in Archbishop Corrigan's letter, it would seem that the Georges would make slow headway in their false leadership. We take from it this elo-quently expressed thought:

"To strive to base an argument against ownership in lands by reasoning on the universal distribution of air and light is only a freak of the imagination. Human industry cannot scatter a cloud from before the face of the sun, not lift a fog that may be freighted with damaging vapors; we take the air and the light as God gives them, and we owe him thanks for his bounty. It was only the earth which fell under the primeval curse when men had sinned, and only the earth, not the air or light, which man's industrious toli can coax back to something like its original fruitfulness. When he has done so his just reward is to enjoy the results without hindrance from others.

Once deny the right of ownership and you now the seed of stagnation in human enterprise. Who would burrow the earth to draw ot scatter a cloud from before the face once deny the right of ownership and you sow the seed of stagnation in human enterprise. Who would burrow the earth to draw forth its buried treasures if the very mine he was working was at the mercy of the passerby whom its riches might attract? Who would watch with eagerness the season when to sow and to reap and to gather the harvest which is the very fruit of the leave if the season. which is the very fruit of his labors, if he is told that those who stand by the wayside idls are equally entitled to its enjoyment?"

The Postal Report.

The report of the postmaster general is an able and interesting summary of statistics and that portion of it devoted to comparison of our postal service with that of foreign countries will afford great satisfaction. The country will cheerfully spend the amount of the annual deficit in the postal revenues as long as it feels assured that it is getting the moneys worth, and when all facts are considered there can be no doubt of this.

Great Britain brags of her penny post, but the distances are insignificant, while in America there are settlements in the far West that are largely dependent on the mails for articles people in the East would never think of getting from the postoflice. Wherever the postal routes go there is a strong connecting link with civilization, which enables the people to secure articles om distant points for a few cents, alhough the actual cost to the government of their transportation may be treble their reight in gold. Overcoats and other artiles of clothing are made in Eastern cities and sent by mail in sections to some point the wilderness where they are put toher. Seeds and other light articles are nt in enormous quantities in the same y, while books, newspapers and periodire required in large numbers by peofar from society, who must find an

of for the other in literature. So money that is made on short routes is tal department has become an invaluable factor in the work of development west-

Mr. Vilas refers to the recent action of the British government in subsidizing steamship companies to carry the mails under the British flag, and endorses the petitions that have been presented, urging America to follow a similar policy. On this one point the postmaster general will find many to oppose him vigorously, for the protection now enjoyed by our shipbuild-ers, having failed to establish an American merchant fleet in foreign waters, the proposal to supplement it by subsidy will look very much like paying too dearly for the whistle. Subsidies have been tried by France most persistently, but with very unsatisfactory results, and are only kept up with a view to the use of the vessels as an auxiliary naval force in case of war.

Two Mum Senators.

It is now inevitable that Matthew Stanley Quay will be elected to succeed Senator Mitchell in the United States Senate when the legislature meets in January. Philadelphia, Allegheny, Lancaster, Erie, and the northwestern counties have declared for him, the party organs are practically a unit for him and he will slip in as easily as a toboggan slide rolls down a hill.

With Quay in the Senate Pennsylvania will be provided with two mum senators. men, that is, whose concentrated energies will be sufficient to enable them to vote, and nothing more in the way of publicly observed work. It had been hoped that this great state, in the coming forensic strifes in the first legislative tribunal of the country, would have at least one senator who would size up to the requirements of the place, but those who thus hoped were building a house of sand.

There is no good reason why Quay should go to the Senate. He is a most skillful political wire-puller, but that element of statesmanship is sufficiently represented in Senator Cameron. Something more than this is needed to sustain the high dignity of the place. Broad-guage statesmanship and the ability to express it in forceful style is requisite and these Quay does not possess. The Philadelphia Press, on this point, sadly says: "We should not treat the subject with entire frankness if we did not express the regret we feel that with his other qualifications Colonel Quay does not unite more of forensic talent."

In other states than Pennsylvania the thought of two mum senators would be too much for the stomachs of the people. But Pennsylvania Republicans have proved themselves capable of swallowing whatever is placed before them.

MR. CHILDS says he does not wish to be mayor of Philadelphia, but the people are likely to shut their ears to his declination.

AMONG all the schemes for the advance-ment of the colored race, that of Rev. J. Milton Turner, of St. Louis, is most novel. He wants to redistribute the negroes throughout the country and is already prepared to form a colony in Butler county, Missouri. Purchasers of homes will be pali 65 cents per 1,000 for cutting logs on their own lands, 1% cents per foot for cutting and peeling piles, and in cents each for making railroad ties. The lands are to be sold for from $3 to $6 per acre, all timber except what is needed for fencing and building being reserved, onethird of the purchase money to be paid in cash, when a deed will be given, and the purchaser to give notes bearing 8 per cent. interest for the balance. When the purchaser cannot pay one-third down he may pay what he likes and immediately occupy the land, but no deed will be given until the third shall have been paid.

GEORGE W. CABLE was asked to talk ten minutes at a Northampton, Mass., temperance meeting. He stroke for an hoor an when the chairman told him he was taking too much time. Cable says he will never speak again in Northampton.

THE march of the London Socialists on Trafalgar square was another step towards the crisis that appears to be inevitable. Movements of this kind never rest, they continually pass from one stage of development to another until they are suddenly found to be beyond control, and must be suppressed by violence, or they will suppress the power that claims control. The Socialists of London are a poor and despised set, but they have the wealth of numbers and are rapidly gaining boldness and influence. These processions and meetings serve to give them exaggerated ideas of their strength, for vast numbers of curious spectators are mixed with the throng who would not side with them in an emergency but the next stage of their proceedings must place them in direct opposition to the government and then their true strength or weakness will be evident.

They will soon get tired of mere marching and meeting and the orderly people and police will as soon tire of the constant menace of violence; so that matters are bound to draw rapidly to a climax the outcome of which cannot be foreseen.

A NEW process of making gas has been invented by J. J. Johnson, of Columbiana, Ohio. His machine embraces a system of syphons, and air is forced alternately through water and through oil, resulting in gas. The tests made by Mr. Johnson on the machine first finished by him resulted in getting 450,-000 cubbs feet of gas from a barrel of oil. After this immense quantity of gas had been made, the residue of oil as a lubricator is said to have been worth as much as the barrel of oil cost originally. This gas as cheaper than daylight, for after getting the light and fuel you can have the original value of the materlal you get it from. Johnson is said to have received $1,000,000 for the right in the United States, with the exception of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES will shed few tears over the death of Charles Francis Adams. The latter, in his letter to Tilden March 5, 1877, said of the man from Ohio that he " must forever carry upon his brow the stamp of fraud first triumph in American history. No subsequent action, however meritorious, can wash away the letters of that Former Gov. C. K. Davis, prominently nominated for United States senator from Minnesota before the next legislature, has temporarily lost the sight of his left eye, and the other is in danger. His physician is very reticent as to the outcome, and it is feared that total blindness may ensue. The cause attributed is overwork.

JEFFERSON DAVIS On Sunday was present at the dedication in Fairview, Kentucky, of a Baptist church, on the site of the building where he was born. After the sermon Mr. Davis was invited to the pulpit. He made a few remarks, closing as follows: "May He who rules in heaven bloss individually and collectively this whole community, and may His benediction rest on this house forever. More than this it would be improper for me to say." Mr. Davis then presented the church with a service of solid silver.

Knocked Down by an Exploding Egg. At New Haven, Conn., Dr. Rarker, assistant to Professor Marsh in the Peabody museum, was knocked down by the explosion of a huge ostrich egg. A number of eggs were sent to the doctor from Cape Town, Africa, in November, 1885, and they arrived. Dr. Barker, in order to observe the embryo, with a small like cut a hole in the shell of one of the eggs. Immediately there was a hise and an explosion which shock was a biss and an explosion which shock the building and knocked Mr. Barker sense-less. He recovered consciousness in a few moments, and it was found that his inju-ries were trifling. The egg was eighteen inches in circumference and weighed about four pounds. Scientists in the college had never heard of such an accident.

---Closing the Reading Saloons

For years past all but three of the two hundred saloons of Reading were open all of Sunday, the front doors of many being open to all drinkers. Sunday they were nearly all closed. This change was due to anonymous circulars received by every saloon-keeper that he would be prose-cuted it he did a Sunday business. For the past month fights and stabbing affrays marked every Sunday, which caused arrays marked every Sunday, which caused a revulsion of public feeling in favor of closing the saloons. Several saloon-keepers are now under bail for violation of the liquor laws, and the Berks Liquor League has given notice that they will not uphold offenders any lenger. Those who kept open will be prosecuted.

Nothing to Say. "Clara was telling ms about your singing at Mrs. Hobson's party, Mr. Featherly," remarked Bobby.

"Yes?" said Featherly complacently, "and what did she say?"
"Oh, she didn't say anything. She just laughed.
