SEN. ORO. B. M'CLELLAN'S BOOK. He Lays a Heavy Burden On the Shoulders o

He Lays a Heavy Burden On the Shoulders o Secretary Stanton.

The late Gen. Geo. It. McClellan's own story of his connection with the civil war, edited by his friend, Mr. Wm. C. Prime, is before the public. As for the men engaged in the fight, Gen. McClellan says: "More gallant foes never met on the field of battle than those men of the same race who had so long lived under the ample folds of the same fig; more desperate battles were never fought than those about to occur. The military virtue of patriotism, patience, endurance, self abnegation and heroism about to receive their most striking illustrations."

Considerable space is taken up by Gen. McClellan in detailing his entrance into the struggle from civil life, his campaign in Western Virginia, and his labors in organizing the army of Northern Virginia. He pays warm tributes to the gallantry and capacity of Gens. Hancock, Sedgwick, Reynolds, Meade, Fitz John Porter and others. The following extracts in regard to McClellan's troubtes with party leaders and his arraignment of Secretary Stanton will be read with interest:

"I have already stated in a general way

"I have already stated in a general way what occurred between myself and some of the radical leaders shortly after I reached the radical leaders shortly after I reached Washington. They then saw clearly that it would not be possible to make a party tool of me, and soon concluded that it was their policy to ruin me if possible. * * * * The real object of the radical leaders was not the restoration of the Union, but the permanent secondancy of their party, and to this they were ready to sacrifice the Union, if necessary. They committed a grave error in supposing me to be politically ambitium, and in positic and the positic me to be politically ambitium. posing me to be politically ambitious, and in thinking that I looked forward to military success as a means of reaching the presi-dential chair. At the same time they knew that if I achieved marked success my influence would necessarily be very great throughout the country—an influence which I should certainly have used for the good of the whole country, and not for that of any party at the nation's expense. They there-fore determined to ruin me in any event and by any means; first by endeavoring to force me into premature movements, knowing hat a failure would probably end my mili-fally career; afterwards by withholding the means necessary to achieve success. That they were not honest is proved by the fact that having failed to force me to advance at a time when an advance would have been a time when an advance would have been madness, they withheld the means of success when I was in contact with the enemy, and finally relieved me from command when the game was in my hands. Taking both East and West and continued. and West, and counting the losses also by disease, I do not doubt that more than 500,000 f men were sacrificed unnecessarily for the ake of insuring the success of a political

I do not base my assertions as to the mo tives of the radical leaders upon mere surmises, but upon facts that have frequently come to my knowledge during the war and since. For instance, Major Charles Davies, once professor of mathematics at West Point, told me, and at a different time told General Leach E. Leach Joseph E. Johnston, the following story: During the very early part of the Peninsular campaign he was one of a commission sent from New York to urge more vigorous action in supporting me. They called upon the president, and found Mr. Stanton with him. In reply to their statements of the par-pose of their visit Mr. Stanton stated that the great end and aim of the war was to abolish slavery. To end the war before the nation was ready for that would be a failure. The war must be prolonged and conducted so as to schieve that; that the people of the North were not yet ready to accept the view, and that it would not answer to permit me to succeed until the people had been worked up to the proper pitch on that question; that the war would not be finished till that result was reached, and that therefore it was not their policy to strengthen General McClellan so as to insure his successful. o insure his success.
"From the light that has since been thrown on Stanton's character, I am satisfied that from an early date he was in the treasonable ing himself with me, and pretending to be my friend before he was in office, was only a part of his long system of treachery. I had never seen Mr. Stanton, and probably had not even heard of him before reaching Wash-ington in 1801. Not many weeks after arriv-ing I was introduced to him as a safe advisor on legal points. From that moment he did his best to ingratiate himself with me, and professed the warmest triendship and devo-tion. I had no reason to suspect his sincerity, and therefore believed him to be what he and therefore believed him to be what he professed. The most disagreeable thing about him was the extreme virulence with which he abused the president, the administration and the Republican party. He carried this to such an extent that I was often shocked by it. He never spoke of the president in any way than as the 'Original Gorilla,' and often said that Du Challlu was a fool to wander all the way to Africa in search of what he der all the way to Africa in search of what he could so easily have found at Springfield, II). Nothing could be more bitter than his words and manner always were when speaking on the administration and the Republican party. He never gave them credit for honor patriotism, and very seldom for any

"At some time during the autumn of 1861 Secretary Cameron made quite an abolition speech to some of the newly-arrived regiments. Next day Stanton urged me to arrest him for inciting to insubordination. He often advocated the propriety of my seizing the government and taking the affairs into my own hands.

my own hands.

"As he always expressed himself in favor of putting down the rebellion at any cost, I always regarded these extreme views as the ebulitions of an intense and patriotic nature, and sometimes wasted more or less time in endeavoring to bring him to more moderate views, never dreaming that all the whils his man was in close communication with this man was in close communication with the very men whom he so violently abused. His purpose was to endeavor to climb upon my shoulders and then throw me down."

down."

Mr. Stanton's action at the time of his appointment is thus described: "Before I had finished my tollet Mr. Stanton's card came up, and as soon as possible I went down to see him. He told me that he had been appointed secretary of war and that his name had been sent to the Senate for confirmation, and that he had called to confer with me as to his acceptance. He said that acceptance and that he had called to confer with me as to his acceptance. He said that acceptance would involve very great personal sacrifices on his part. If I wished him to accept he would do so, but only on my account; that he had come to know my wishes and determine accordingly. I told him that I hoped he would accept the position. Before he was in office he constantly ran after me and professed the most ardent friendship; as soon as he became secretary of war his whole manner changed, and I could no longer find the opportunity to transact even the ordinary current business of the office with him. It's now very clear to me that, far from being, as he had always represented himself to me, in direct and violent opposition to the radicals, he was really in secret alliance with them, and that he and they were alike unwilling that I should be successful. No other theory can possibly account for his or their course, and on that theory everything becomes clear and easily explained."

After the seven days' fight McClelian wrote to Stanton: "In addition to what I have already said, I only wish to say to the president that I think he is wrong in regarding me as ungenerous when I said that my force was too weak. I merely intimated a truth which to-day has been too plainly proved. If, at this instant, I could dispose his acceptance. He said that acceptance force was too weak. I merely intimated a truth which to-day has been too plainly proved. If, at this instant, I could dispose of ten thousand (10,000) fresh men I could gain the victory to-morrow. I know that a few thousand more men would have changed this battle from a defeat to a victory. As it is, the government must not and cannot hold me responsible for the result. I feel too carnestly to-night. I have seen too many carnestly to-night. I have seen too many dead and wounded comrades to feel otherwise than that the government has not sustained this army. If you do not do so now the game is lost. If I save this army now I tell you plainly that I owe no thanks to you for to any other person in Washington. You have done your best to sacrifice this army."

Excitement in Tersa, Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds.

JACOB MUSCHLITZ,

What is a Cold in the head? Medical author What is a Cold in the head? Medical authorities say it is due to amospheric germs, unevenciothing of the body, rapid cooling when in a perspiration, &c. The important point is, that a cold in the head is a genuine rhimits, an inflammation of the liming membrane of the nose, which, when unchecked, is certain to produce a catarrhal condition—for catarrh is essentially a "cold" which nature is no longer able to "resolve" or throw off. Eig's Gream Balm has proved its superiority, and sufferers from cold in the head should resort to it before that common
