thieves on the sight of March 25, 1885, and 125 pounds of flour were stolen.

The principal witness for the prosecution lived in one part of a house in Earl township and the scoused in the other. On the evening of the robbery he overheard a conversation between Patton, his own son and Calvin Davis, in which it was agreed to rob Brubaker's mill. He concluded to watch and he was rewarded by seeing those three men leave Patton's house, go to the mill and return to Patton's house, with the floor stolen there, which was divided between them.

The accused went on the witness stand and denied all of Marshall's allegations. The case was submitted without argument to the jury and they rendered a verdict of guilty, after a brief deliberation.

Lewis Felser was indicted for forging the the name of William Dyer to a judgment note for $24. The note was dated March 12, 1886 and was payable in sixty days. Execution was issued on the note, Dyer's personal property was levied upon by the sheriff, and Dyer then paid the note, but on the same date entered suit against Felser for forging his name to the note. The note for $24 was submitted to Dyer on the witness stand, and he pronounced it a forgery, his name not mitted to Dver on the witness stand, and submitted to Dyer on the witness stand, and he pronounced it a forgery, his name not even being spelled correctly. The defense was that Felser and Dyer had a horse transaction in which Dyer was to give $20 and his horse for Felser's horse. In addition Dyer owed him $4 balance due on a sewing machine and in payment of this indebtedness Dyer gave him this indement note for $24. in Dyer gave him this judgment note for $24, in the presence of witnesses. Some days afterwards Dyer gave Felser another note with his mother as surety, and told him that he could get the money out of the Mt. Joy bank and when he got the money he was to return the judgment note. Felser went to the bank. but they refused to give him any money on the note. He waited some time for Dyer to pay him the judgment note and finally issued execution on it, and after Dyer's property was levied upon, the note was paid. Jury out.

Henry Seiverling was put on trial on a charge of embezziement. From the testimony on the part of the commonwealth it appeared that James Ream, a cigar dealer of Vogansville, employed the defendant in the summer of 1885 to sell cigars for him. All summer of 1885 to sell cigars for him. All moneys above $12 per thousand received by Seiverling was to be his. The defendant was furnished with 10,400 cigars which he sold. He returned to Ream $49.14 and ap-sold. He returned to Ream $49.14 and appropriated the balance to his own use.

The defense claimed that Selverling sold only 4,400 clgars on commission and the balance of the clgars were purchased direct from Ream and he was unable to pay for the same by reason of losses in business. It was difficult to get the defendant to give an intelligent account of the transaction between the parties and the the transaction between the parties and the impression from his testimony was that he was not of sound mind. Witness and some friends did not get out of the road as quick as Kauffman thought they should and that made him angry, and after he put his horse away he walked to where prosec truck him.

The defense was that after the horse of Kauffman was put away, Kauffman walked towards the hotel and Randall approached him with an uplifted cane in his hand and Kauffman believing Randail was going to strike him knocked him down. A dozen witnesses who knew Kauffman for many years gave him a good character for peace.
The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty,
