$76,800,000 FOR BERE.

Figures Showing What New York Spends Yearly for This Refreshment. From the N. Y. Sun. It is estimated that there are 6,000,000 barrels of beer consumed annually in this city. The brewers receive $8 a barrel for this er, less a discount to dealers ranging from $16 to 20 per cent. Supposing all to receive the highest discount, which would allow for an occasional bad debt, the receipts of the brewers would argregate $35,400,000. This beer is now substantially all furnished by the members of the Brewer's exchange, the portion supplied by the non-pool brewers scarcely amounting to the odd $400,000.

It is also estimated to at the aggrieved dealers number one-half of all in the city, and fully one-half of the trade. Should they withdraw their custom from the Exchange brewers. ers, as now seriously threatened, they would thereby leave one-half of the product of the Exchange breweries unsold, or cause those breweries to reduce their product one-half. Thus the movement, it carried out, will inflict a loss in trade upon these breweries of £19,-000,000 a year. These figures will give some idea of the magnitude and importance of the movement now under consideration. It was shown at the conference of the

It was shown at the conference of the dealers and non-pool brewers on Monday that, including the non-pool breweries of the city proper, and others in the vicinity, the aggregate capacity is but 1,165,000 barrels annually. Supposing that the strike, if in-augurated, will withdraw half the custom of the exchange brewers—that is 3,000,000 barrels a year—there remains a deficiency of 1,835,000 barrels to be barrels to be supplied to the trade here by browers of the West or of Boston, Philadei-phia and other neighboring cities. This is not a large amount, but its importation will be an item of some importance to the railroads and other freighters, and to that extent will make them sympathizers with the dealers in the strike.

The figures given above furnish another interesting item. As shown, the wholesale cost of the beer annually consumed in this city is $38,400,000. That is what the dealers pay the manufacturers for it. But the price the consumer is vastly more. The dealer in retailing his keg of beer expects to more than double his money. An expert beer jerker will get from a keg three times its cost, while exceptional cases are found where fourfold the first cost is received. But allowing the sale by the glass to be merely double the cost by the keg or barrel, and it is seen that the beer drinkers of New York pay $76,800,000 annually for this single article of refresh-

Senator Blackburn's Charity Swallowed Up b a Jack Pot. Washington Dispatch to New York World.

This afternoon at the National hotel there were gathered in the rotunda a number of senators and representatives, together with other prominent men. Senator Blackburn was contributing most of the entertainment of the party in his usual free and brilliant style. It was not long until a well-known takir joined the party and exhibited a newly skir joined the party and exhibited a newly invented telescope whisky cup, similar to those sold upon ratiroad trains. It was something new, but was the first of the kind either of the parties had ever seen. Senator Blackburn was particularly well pleased with the device. The fakir made the usual plea—"Slow sales and no profit," impressing upon the mind of the good-natured senator that he had been playing to bard luck and was in a bad way for the necessaries of life. He said the cup was worth $2.50, and to sell it for less he would be losing money. The senator was a ready purchaser, and felt inclined to contribute to charity as money. and felt inclined to contribute to charity as well. Taking from his pocket a five-doilar gold coin he gave it to the seller, cautioning him, as it was a souvenir, not to spend it unless it was absolutely necessary.

Later in the afternoon the itinerant merchant met Gen. Anson McCook, secretary of the Senate, to whom he wanted also to sell a cup, making the same complaint about bad business that he had before.

"What did you do with the money I saw Senator Blackburn give you about two hours." Senator Blackburn give you about two hours ago?" said the general.
"I lost it at poker," replied the young

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Back and Shoulders Are the parts usually attacked by rheumatism; and the joints at the knees, ankies, hips and wrists are also sometimes affected.
