LANCASTER, JANUARY 5, 187.

The New Administration.

With the new year comes a new administration of the state affairs of Pennsylvania, which goes back to her account its usually exciting duty of electing a United States senator causing it no trouble or excitement whatever, since the man to fill the place has been selected for it with the ingly unanimous concurrence of the party bosses and the legislature will readily ratify the selection. The significant thing about this matter is not so much that the place of senator is not to be contended for. for that often happens when pre-eminent qualification points him out; but the fact is that Mr. Quay has no pre-eminent qualifications for senator. He is not distinguished as an orator or thinker; he cannot adorn the Sewate. Moreover, he adorns the political councils of his party in Pennsylvania. He is of demonstrated ability as a politician, but that is ability of a sort that will not enable him to shine in the nate. It must be conceded, however, that it is the sort of ability that is accused to be rewarded with the Senate, in the Republican party in Pennsylvania. It is strictly in accord with Republican precedent in the state that Mr. Quay should be chosen to the Senate by his party without contention. Being easily its best politician, he earns its highest prize of honor. After the Camerons, father and son, have so steadily represented the state in the Senate, it is impossible for its Republican house to feel a shock at the thought of choosing to that supreme legislative body men who cannot speak or write or think strongly upon great political questions.

We congratulate the Republican party that it is so easily content, and the legislature that it will have no trouble over its choice of senator. We do not know whether the Republican governor is equally to be congratulated that he has been relieved by the bosses from the trouble of choosing what he calls his cabinet. Re is, we know, reported to wear a nose of wax, and the suspicion is general that he will be but the sture of his masters. It may however be otherwise; and we are anxious to see the light that will be thrown upon his administration by his choice of the state off. cers. We understand that he declares that he will have an attorney general whom he believes to be a better lawyer than himself; which is certainly a very sensible determination. If he persists in it, howeyer, it will be bad for the younger gentlemen who have been named for the place, as General Beaver can hardly be presumed to think that they are better lawyers than he is. His attorney general will not be Ehief Justice Mercur; for we are asday o, on what we deem very good autho-Erastuthat the judge has advised the he recog, that he does not desire the of the Mind would not accept it. His B, t is to remain on the supreme bench, which he proposes seeking a renomination. He desires to spend all his remaining days of usefulness upon it. The idea of selecting him as attorney general is supposed to have come from the friends of Judge Williams who has been spoken of prominently for the place, but who would probably prefer to go on the supreme bench. As Judge Mercur does not take the bait, it seems probable that Governor Beaver, if he permits himself, or is permitted, to carry out his wishes, will make Judge Williams attorney general.

The After-Dinner Speech.

The after-dinner speech has been acquiring unwonted prominence of late, and the great speech of Mr. Grady has given the institution a boom that puts it far in ad. vance of the lecture platform as a means of reaching the popular ear. At a public dinner where the guests are men of note in all walks of life, the public can feel reasonably certain that no speech will be received with favor that has not something in it worth reading. The guests act as an examining board and pass upon the work by their applause or silence, and though the people may modify the verdict, yet the orator can feel sure that if he wins the hearty applause of these judges he is sure of a careful reading by millions of his countrymen.

Mr. Chauncey M. Depew, in an interview published in the New York Herald, shows that another advantage of the after-dinner speech lies in the friction that there takes place, for "nothing keeps the public so wide awake as the clashing of ideas." * 4 Mr. So-and-so is a great believer in a project. It is his hobby-he rises at the table in answer to a toast and ventilates it. His neighbor entertains a different opinion, and he rises to tear it to shreds, believing he will toss it to the winds to be irremediably scattered. Now, without the formality of a debate, a great question may have been cought up and discussed. The press seizes on it and agitates it. Like magic, the te country, in a week's time, is think-early closing movement announce that,

p. m., except on Mondays and Saturdays, during the year and the whole of the month of December. In a movement of this kind it is desirable that there should be all possible unanimity, and it is believed that the few who stood out against the movement last year will enroll themselves in its ranks for the coming twelve months. It has been successfully demonstrated that there is no money in keeping the stores open after 6 o'c'ock, and Lancaster shoppers have easily accommodated themselves to the new regulation. The cost of heat and light and the general wear and tear of business has not been compensated for by the few sales made after sundown.

But that other and larger phase of the question remains to be regarded; the additional time gained by employes for home culture. Time thus spent is bound to make them more cheerful, better informed and more enterprising citizens; and thus the community has a near interest in the early closing movement. So long as employers pay their employes the same wages as under the old regime, it is difficult to see how there can be two opinions on the subject of early closing.

Therefore, let the early closing movement in this town for 1887 be a unanimous

MRS. LOGAN is said to be potential in naming her husband's successor in the Senate : which is proper enough, for she did much to establish her husband. FRENCHMEN have a genius for celebrations and have just finished a most imposing demonstration in memory of the great statesman, Gambetta, whose voice first proclaimed the establishment of the republic. One of the orators referred as follows to his visit to America on the occasion of the unveiling of Bartholdi's statute of Liberty : "I have seen those French people across the sea, he said, ' for whom France remains an object of infinite love. Everywhere, from the Atlantie to the Pacific, I found among them the re, membrance of our illustrious, honored and respected tribune. Let us, then, pay our homage to those good citizens, to those of our race abroad whom Gambetta was desirous of visiting just before he was struck down by

We are in the habit of regarding the French element of our population as so very small that its influence on the formation of the national character is hardly worth considering except in Louisiana and along the Canada line, but this French traveler appears to have formed a very different impression. French emigrants preserve their interest and pride in their mother country with great persistency; Louisiana and Canada have kept the flame burning for a century after they were abandoned to their fate, and no doub the crowds of French people who flocked to welcome their compatriots on their visit to unveil Liberty gave the travelers the impres sion that the Americans were largely of French extraction. The French are extremely narrow in some matters and care to know very little about any other lands than France. so that there is no telling what vague notions of our country may be in the French mind.

Two young ladies were killed and seven seriously injured at a grade railway crossing near Fort Wayne, Ind. Some equally terrible human sacrifice will probably be necessary in this city before the railroad companies can be induced to place gates and watchmen at all the crossings, though in other cities they have these safeguards, and visitors to Lancaster almost invariably comment upon the danger and the number of the crossings. In a hilly city where it is often difficult to stop a team at a railway track, it is a matter for wonder that accidents are so Rats by The Million. The interesting assertion comes from Paris that in the past year the dogs there killed 1,700,000 rats. Merely from a sporting point of view this would not be so bad, for I know a noble lord who loves his terrier like a brother because the terrier can kill a rat with one shake. It is an undoubted fact that severai militions of rats inhabit Paris. If these figures are correct, they lend honor to the crime of a man in Nice who was sentenced to three months in prison for training a terrier. But the Frenchman had sordid motives, and his occupation was not unconnected with lapin sante.

Now, the Baptists were about to build a chapel, and Mrs. Barnes was interested in proand Mrs. Barnes was interested in pro-curing subscriptions to that end. She spoke to Mr. Barnes about it, and, as he intimated a willingness to subscribe, she sent a collector to urge him further. The collector said he had understood that Mr. Barnes was willing to subscribe. Mr. Barnes said he was. The collector drew out a subscription book and offered it for Mr. Barnes' signature. "No," said Barnes, "I won't sign that break because that in it necessary. Mr.

This fairly took the collector's breath away, for it was almost the whole of the amount they were trying to raise. "That is a splendid gift," he managed to say after while; "we shall be very deeply obliged."
"Not at all," said Barnes: "but," he added,
"there is a condition to the glt." "Oh,"
said the collector, "I'm sure any condition

A Berks Boy's Strange Disappearance. Eugene B. Archer, aged 14 years, disappeared from his mother's home in Muhlen berg township, Berks county, on December 22 and diligent search by detectives and others ever since has failed to discover his whereabouts. The case is similar to that of Willie Arnold, a month ago. Archer is the son of a well-to-do widow and attended the Carroll institute, where the Arnold boy was also astudent. On the 21st Mrs. Archer reprimanded her son for playing truant and next day he fled. Inquiry far and wide has brought no tidings of the boy.

MEDI ATHLOPHOROS,

General Logan's Sudden Death

is a great shock to the nation. Few knew that he was even indisposed when the news of his death flashed over the wires and thousands of people stood aghast at the sudden change from people stood aghast at the sudden change from health and vigor to cold and silent death. For the past twenty five years there has been no man more constantly before the public than deneral John A. Logan. Through all his career be has been noted for his fearlessness and purity of character, both in public and private life. Leved by friends and respected by enemies he will be mourned by all.

His death adds another to the long list ims to sudden and acute theumatism. Probably no disease is so common as rheumatism, none is more sudden or dangerous, and there is ertainly none which so completely baffles med which is a sure and safe cure for theumatism and its twin disease, neuralgia, and that is Ath-lophoros. In thousands of cases Athlophoros has proved a quick and certain cure for these seases. In connection with Athlophores Pills thas never yet failed to speedily effect a cure In all probability many deaths attributed to heart disease are caused by these terrible dis-cases, which are far more dangerous than is generally considered.

Rheumatism, even though in a very mild form, is extremely dangerous, for it is liable at any moment to go to the heart and cause instant death. Why tride with a disease so fatal when certain cure can be obtained of any druggist

FURNITURE

We want you one and all to feel perfectly free to come every day if you desire, and look at what is being put on the floors new and attractive, and you will not be urged to buy.

You would be surprised to learn how many are doing this each week.

We have already set aside a great many presents for DECEMBER 24, but we can still keep a great many more secrets.
