The West King street opera house was closed and locked up at 6 o'clock Monday evening. Later quite a crowd gathered at the place in anticipation of trouble between the opera house and the city. About seven o'clock Manager Yerance and his company put in an appearance in front of the theatre. They tried the doors but found them locked. For about half hour they remained on the pavement, surrounded by a tremendous crowd of people, and finally quietly started towards their home. On the way they were met by Mr. Halbach on the street, and asked him whether he intended to open the house. He replied that he would not. The actors left and the crowd quietly dispersed. Had the doors been opened there is no doubt that a riot would have broken out. The crowd standing the account of the trouble which had appeared in the newspapers. Many went away disappointed. What will be the result of this trouble remains to be seen. The stories of both sides as given in the INTELLIGENCER last evening were correct. Miss Yerance will not be able to gain anything by them. The manager of the combination has secured Marriott Brosius as counsel, and Halbach will be represented by J. Hay Brown.

While all this fighting is going on at the opera house, Manager Yecker, of the Fulton opera house, is quietly looking it without saying a word. At the same business at his house is being benefited by the trouble. Rose Lisle, her manager, Frank L. Yerance and a male member of the company, called at the INTELLIGENCER office this afternoon. The lady repudiated the assertion that her company was a part of any troupe, and to the following list of names that were in her company, which includes sixteen people: May Nible Drew, Celia Clay, Winnifred Linton, Adie Smith, Phillips Hawley, Paul Scott, Harry Strong, W. E. Howe.

Miss Lisle says the rehearsal on Monday was no fair test, and she had given orders to hurry it through, owing to the crowd present. She says she offered to play Monday night and if Manager Halbach did not apologize after the first act, she would cheerfully cancel the engagement. Her manager says the show is booked until July 1st, and exhibits many contracts to prove his assertion.

HE WAS IN A DEPENDENT MOOD.
Reuben Garber, of Reading, formerly of Columbia, was in a dependent mood when he moved to Reading about two years ago from Salamis, this county, and opened a grocery store there, on Monday evening made a desperate effort to commit suicide. It appears that Garber, who is subject to fits of depression of spirits, recently visited Salamis, and upon his return to Reading became moody and spoke in a desponding way about himself. He made threats in the morning and at noon took his revolver from his place and put it in his pocket. In the evening his wife, who is in bed, called him and he was occupying a bedroom in another part of the house, retired at about 10 o'clock, taking his little daughter Bertha with her. After a short sleep he awoke in the morning at 9 o'clock and, finding her awake, kissed her and the daughter, saying, "Good night, Jennie, to-morrow I may not be here." His wife, who is in bed, is in God's hands, and she says that she would do herself no harm.

Dr. J. S. Kittenhouse, the family physician, was summoned, and after an examination at 10 o'clock this morning that Mr. Garber would probably die. He was in a very bad way, and was suffering from great pain and was having mustard plasters and hot water applied to his abdomen, legs and feet.

Rea Away From A Fall.
A horse couple belonging to William Rosenfeld was left standing at the end of a hill, where a fall was in progress, at an early hour this morning. The animal became frightened and ran away. He was found some time after in front of the residence of H. W. Dillenbaugh, on the old Factory road. Here the carriage struck against a post breaking down the three springs, and the horse and driver were thrown down but he was not hurt and he was placed in the stable of Mr. Dillenbaugh until the owner called for him.

The first coach of the "Gurney" style, which will be put on the streets by the Lancaster Transfer company, has arrived in town, and is now at Bristol on Monday evening. It is a two-wheeled vehicle capable of holding four people and is very pretty.
