

IN all circles of society, wherever you may go, you will find you can't judge people simply by their outward appearance.

There are minds and manners suitable in every time and place, and smiles oft times to parody their origin can't.

The half-mad poet makes his line show either joy or sadness. According to the people's will, there's method in his madness.

The statesman, grand as he is, is reserved, so dignified and grand, surprises his poor neighbor as he grasps him by the hand.

And while, him good day and asks in sympathetic mood. How business is, and if his own and family's health is good.

He seems mean; but then election time, which grief or gladness will bring to him, is close at hand; there's method in his madness.

When your wife employs a cross-eyed girl, whose tales are told, who takes four afternoons a week and never loses her work.

Who looks back constantly, and her dire chatter will not cease; who wears an apron spotted o'er with stains of dirt and grease.

Who grammar is distinguished by its most surprising blunders, who may think your wife is crazy, but there's method in her madness.
