The New York Life is rated as one of the largest companies, it not the largest in the world. It has the reputation of being one of the most prosperous and, financially, with a surplus of many millions more than any other life company, the safest in the United States. Vanuxem, Haynes, Sendberg & Co., all young men, bright, sharp, full of energy and vian, trained from boyhood almost to the life insurance beamess, about five years ago purchased from the New York Life company the exclusive right to transact business for that company in Pennsylvania. They insugrated new methods, pieced life insurance upon a high plane, presented it as a legitimate business, as a profitable and safe means of investment: called to their aid on their staff, as agents and managers, some of the best known and most successful business of investment: called to their aid on their staff, as agents and managers, some of the best known and most successful business men in the East, and putting braiks, money, energy, new life and perfect system into their business, they produced results in that one state which were phenomenal, yielding last year alone, in the state of Pennsylvania, a business of over $13,000,000.

They have elevated the business, and given an impetus to life insurance all over the country such as has never been known before. Believing that there is a still more prolific field for the business in the great state of Ohio, the first of this year they successfully negotiated with the officers of the company in New York and secured the exclusive right to carry on their business in the Buckeye state. Mr. Vanuxem, the senior member of the firm, visited Uncinnati about a month ago, prospected, took the preliminary steps toward the establishment of headquarters here and, returning to the home office in Philadelphia, Mr. Mulford, the actuary of the company, also a member of the firm, came to our city and is now here completing all arrangements. NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

REPLY TO "The Question of Assurance."

An open letter, in the Intelligencer, March 4th, being an anonymous attack on a great financial institution of world wide repute, and of unblemished reputation, headed "A Critic's Drastic Examination of the Condition of an Insurance Company," on the authority of "More Anon," demands an immediate answer.

The AUTHOR of this vile screed and his motive are easily placed. "More Anon" is one Robert Holmes, of Reading, Pa., who represents the interests of the Mutual Life, of New York, and misrepresents the interests of every honorable competitor in his business.

The MOTIVE is to bring discredit on the standing of the Equitable Life As-able competitor in his business.

The MOTIVE is to bring discredit on the standing of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, because, quite recently, these two great life companies being debtors to the estate of an esteemed member of the Lancaster Bar, recently deceased, (each in the amount of $5,000), the Equitable, as usual, vairing all technicalities, promptly made payment in full, by sight draft, drawn the same day that the proofs of death were received. The consequent public comments on these comparative methods was unpalatable to the representative of the Mutual, hence his animus and ungenerous attack. A willful perversion of facts, by inuendo or mal-inference is not creditable, nor does such conduct strengthen an anonymous "Critic's" credibility.

It is not governace that prompts Robert Holmes, an insurance man of some experience in distorting the sworn statements, of reputable companies, (acceptable to and verified by the Insurance Commissioners of this and other State Departments). It is a malicious desire to myslead the insuring public who are not informed as to the ethics and valuations of that exact science—Life Insurance.

All life insurance policies are script obligations, the total of which are computed by their future values reduced to present liabilities, by the Company's Standard of 4 per cent, interest for future investments, and according to the form of policy contract and the expectancy of the individual lives at risk. On the standard of 4½ per cent; for interest on investments the surplus of the Equitable is $20,495,175,76. Concerning the $100,000 of the Capital Stock of the Equitable is $20,495,175,76. Concerning the $100,000 of the Capital Stock of the Equitable is $20,495,175,76. Concerning the $100,000 of the Capital Stock of the Equitable is experted without depositing $100,000 of the Capital Stock of the Equitable is $20,495,175,76. Concerning $100,000 of the Capital Stock of the Equitable is experted without depositing $100,000 of the Capital Stock of the Equitable is experted withou tive management of every mutual company so organized, and a weapon in the hand of every disloyal agent, with which to menace the executive officials.

"False in one, false in everything," is a legal axiom that destroys the credibility of a statement, and an anonymous slander has no weight in evidence, but is a fit tool for a trickster. Mr. H. B. Hyde, the President of the Equitable, requires no defense by the subordinate agents. A gentleman of high standing for honor and humanity, the status of the Equitable is a fit monument to his executive ability, and a fair answer to all irresponsible defamers who spit their spite at reputations that tower above their own standard or comprehension.

An anonymous sneer is made at Mr. Register, the General Manager of the Equitable, at Philadelphia, which requires no answer but contempt. Robert Holmes, of Reading, well knows that any agent of any company can give away any amount of insurance to "influential men," provided the agent pays the required premium to the company. This is an expensive method of advertising for the agent, but it is done in Reading. Mr. Register, in the past 21 years, has transacted over $50,000,000 of business, good Equitable insurance, without a single law suit. Can the General Agents of the Mutual Life prove the same?

A slur, as wicked as it is silly, that the Equitable "despises the hand of honest toil," is a fit terminal to a malicious article from Robert Holmes, who knows better, and should act with some sense of honor, if only for the respect due to the great company he represents; otherwise, my sole reply to future distribes, from "More Anon," will be the publication of a scathing rebuke to this same Robert Holmes, by The Chronicle, New York City, August $7, 1385, for similar bad practices. "Manufacturing and disseminating literature of the anonymous and malicious order."

THE QUESTION OF ASSURANCE

as between the Equitable and the Mutual is simply one of a selection, both are great mutual companies of recognized work. The measure (by finance) is reliable, and from the sworn reports as accepted and verified by the Insurance Com-The Equitable Life Assurance Society is to-day the greatest and richest life assurance company in the World.

The attention acceptance of proofs of death, on the other hand the Equitable contracts that incontestible policies are absolutely indisputable and payable immediately on receipt of proofs of death. Acceptance may and often does in the case of the Mutual, come a long time after the receipt of the papers.

Honorable competition is fair and commendable in every business; at this the Equitable fears no comparison, and its representatives are ever ready to main tain its honor by honest methods. Agency controversies are to be deprecated. They are disapproved of by the officers of all reputable companies, and cost time and money. The cost of this unnecessary expense, by this card, is borne by the subscriber, not by the policy-holders of the Equitable, who are respectfully invited to seek any information they may desire concerning these statements made, of the officers of this Society; or of the Insurance Department which con-

J. L. BUTLER, Special Agent,

The Equitable Life Assurance Company, of the U.S., Stevens House, Lancaster, Pa.

There is probably no other financial institution in the world whose annual statement is looked for with more eagerness than that of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. It is not common to speak of life insurance societies as "financial institutions," as we have done above; but the Equitable is, without doubt, not only the largest life insurance society, but necessarily one of the largest financial institutions in the world. When it takes into account that its net leaders research to the first of January 1887, were over $75,000,000. financial institutions in the world. When it takes into account that its net ledger assets on the first of January, 1887, were over $75,000,000, and that this almost inconceivable amount represents money in one shape or another, it will be quickly seen that it is, indeed, a financial institution. The elegendent has been trying to teach the people of the United States for the last thirty-five years, not only the absolute value, but the necessity of life insurance, and we have reason to feel proud of the success of our efforts, receiving as we do almost daily assurances from all parts of the country that we have induced thousands of people to become members of good life insurance societies, and have prevented other thousands from becoming members of the cheap assessment societies. The Equitable offers a very great variety of different forms of policies to meet the wants of all insurers. Some men are so situated that they can pay their premium in one payment; others wish to pay it in five, ten or twenty payments: mium in one payment; others wish to pay it in five, ten or twenty payments; others wish to pay annually during life; some wish a tentine policy, and the Equitable meets the wants of all.—From the Independent of March 10.
