

The Important Question Was
How to Save the Nation
Washington, Cor. of N. Y. Road.
There is one room in the White House on the upper floor, in the private part of the mansion, to which Mrs. Cleveland came on an occasional visit. It is the "State bedroom," which is next to the library on the south side of the building, directly above the red parlor. It is one of the most expensively furnished of any of the bedrooms, and used to be called "the President's room," in honor of the President of the presidents since the war have slept in it. It has usually been kept as a bedroom of state and it is asserted by those who should know that the President W. A. Hayes slept there when he visited President Buchanan. It is there that the ladies used to receive with Mrs. Cleveland at formal receptions, to remove their wraps. On one such occasion during the past winter when the wife of a member of the cabinet was being shown into that room, Mrs. Cleveland, who went with her, drew back and said: "Oh, I don't like this room; I never come here when I can help it, because it has had associations for me. It was here that the President said his good-bye when I was going to Europe." This was when Mrs. and Miss Polson were in the White House in the autumn of 1885, just before they sailed for Europe. But the blue parlor, where she was married, and the east room, where she was located from her education to the President himself at a dinner party a few weeks ago, the question was asked which brought about the wedding, can have only one association for the President's loving wife. It was in a conversation in which he had said: "I often say to my wife, 'Poor girl, you never had any courting like other girls.' It was the President who said: 'It is true I did say something to her one night, when we were walking together in the east room while she was visiting my sister.' This is believed to have occurred in the spring of 1885, when Miss Polson made her first visit to the executive mansion. That the President's wife was a woman of much earlier time who knew the present lady of the White House while she was at school in the West, and who was a friend of the President's, and intimate with Miss Polson's roommate there, she recalls hearing the latter after she left school, when the news of the nomination of Cleveland for President of the United States was published, say reflectively, "I never knew Cleveland, why that was the name of the man Frank Polson used to talk so much about that I used to tell her I believed she was in love with him." Others who knew Mrs. Cleveland as a child say she was always devoted to her father's friend, Mr. Cleveland, who petted and indulged her almost from her infancy, and would always defend him when any one attacked him, and she was a girl when the unkind things were said of him in her presence. He was and is her hero.

The Western Sufferer's Chosen Specific.
With every advance of civilization into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly populated regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which arises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to floods. The agricultural and mineral resources soon learn, when they do not already know, that the bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria and the other disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climatic changes, exposure, and unaccustomed to unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently he places an estimate on this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its value to health, and the bitters are used as a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need. Malaria.

Physicians, Lawyers and Business Men are enthusiastic in their endorsement of salvation. It cures the worst cases of rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, headache, toothache, and all other pains of the head, face, neck, and back. It is a powerful purgative, and its use is recommended by all the best medical authorities. It is a powerful purgative, and its use is recommended by all the best medical authorities. How Much Will It Cost?
How much Thomas' Electric Oil is required to cure? Only a very little. A few drops will water or oil of an ache and the trouble more is needed for sprains and lameness. Abundantly it is not readily afforded an ounce and sometimes two ounces are required. However, it is never, is so affixed to cure with the same number of applications. For sale by H. B. Cochran, druggist, 137 and 139 North Queen street, Lancaster.

Don't Hurry, Gentlemen.

I'll be some remedy of doubtful merit, certain of relief, when you can get at the drug store for one dollar. For sale by H. B. Cochran, druggist, 137 and 139 North Queen street, Lancaster.
