Stopped Seiling Coupon Tickets.

The Penasylvania railroad discontinued esterday the sale of thousand-mile coupon tekst books, which for some time have been issued at a price of $20, or two cents per mile, to all desiring them. Previously they had only been issued to the large customers of the road. Mr. Carpanter, ticket agent here, says the issue has been discontinued because of the inter-state commerce bill, and that the company is "going to make the public sick of it." It is not clear how the inter-state commerce bill interferes with the leasue of tickets at two cents a mile to every issue of tickets at two cents a mile to every one who wants them. It might do so, if they were only issued to a preferred class of customers. This bill can only be a pretext for abandoning two cent rates; it certainly ose not command it.

11. Fairick's day opened clear with a rather being wind which sent clouds of dust whiring through the streets and into the stores and dwellings and occasionally into the eyes of unwarp pedestrians. Later on there was a slight fail of snow from very thin fleety clouds—just enough to keep up the reputation of the ancient prophets that St. Patrick always brings stormy weather.

The admirers of the good old saint who bantahed snakes from Ireland are "wearing of the green" to-day in honor of his memory. What a blessed thing it would be if some good modern saint were to visit Harrisburg and banish all the snakes that now infest the iegislative halls, the roosters and pinchers and boodlers and bribers, and the great rail-road and pipe line anacondas and the veno-mous traction viper! Where is the saint that will undertake to drive the snakes from Harrisburg? We fear St. Beaver is not up to the mark for such a mission.

BOWE AV ARTES An Engineer Cut in Two, and His Firem

A horrible accident happened twelve miles from Parkersburg Wednesday morning on the Marietta Mineral railroad. A heavy from Parkersburg Wednesday morning on the Marietta Mineral railroad. A beavy mixed train had just passed Vincent station, when the train was divided in order to cross more safely a trestle ninety feet high. The first section passed over all right, when the engine bearing the engineer, H. S. Vincent, Fireman Albert Bushley, Brakeman Stewart, Conductor Jack McCoy and a passenger named Early, returned for section two. When at the highest point of the trestle the engine gave a sudden jerk and plunged straight down to the abyse below, carrying all on board with it. Vincent and Bushley were instantly killed. Their bodies were scarcely recognizable. Bushley had his head severed from his tody and one leg cut off, while Vincent was cut in two. Conductor McCoy was under the wreck, planed down by the heavy engine. It was nearly halt an hour before he was taken out. In the meantime the escaping steam scalded his head, face and body. His recovery is doubtful. Brakeman Stewart was terribly scalded, and there are but faint hopes of his recovery. Early, the passenger, had both legs broken and was injured internally. He is said to be dying. The place into which the engine plunged is a yawning abyse, at the bottom of which is a rocky stream. The section which the engine was returning for had the passenger coaches loaded, and the loss of life would have been frightful had the accident happened while returning with them.

A collision occurred on the Auburn branch of the New York Central railroad Wednesday evening, at Geneva, N. Y., between an express train and a freight train. A dozen men received severe injuries and much damage was done to the engine and much damage was done to the engine and falling out with her sweetheart, Mr. Palmer Benedict Wells, jr., of Port Richmond. Each threatens to prosecute the other for mail-dous persecution. He is a slight, boyish youth of 25, and she a pushing, impulsive maiden three years younger. Minnie Irving, as she is known to fame, has already won for herself considerable reputation by her simple, as she is known to fame, has already won for herself considerable reputation by her simple, songlike poems, usually on the theme of love. One of her best known is the "Haunted Hearth," which was published in the Century Magazine, and for which she is said to have received $90. Up to a few months ago Miss O'Dell was the happiest girl along the Hudson. She was talking about her coming wedding with a bright young business man of New York city. Now she is counseling with lawyers and breathing out vengeance. When a correspondent saw the young lady at her home, Wednesday, her face was very pale. The effect was heightened by a black silk dress of Lady Macbeth cut. Three bracelets encircled each wrist, and seven rings glistened on her tapered fingers. "I am about to inform you of a dastardly attempt on an innocent young girl's life!" exclaimed the postese dramatically. "I shall also make bare a conspiracy to ruin my character and, what is worse, my literary reputation." The young lady then declared that Wells drew a revolver and threatened to kill her if she did not marry him. She retired to the kitchen and claimed protection of her father. After that she said Wells made charges against her character and tried to injure her literary reputation. Young Wells was in the employ of the publishers of Wallace's Monthly, No. 212 Broadway, New York. He was a friend of H. E. Clifford Camp, the book-keeper for Stout & Meadowcraft, who is now confined in the Tombs awaiting trial for forgery and embezzlement, These two book-keepers ahe alleged forged her name on several occasions, and thus endeavored to injure her. Wells has since been discharged by the firm.
