LANCASTER, APRIL 13, 1847.

It Must Be Defeated.

From the report of the proceedings of the Board of Trade it is learned that there s much danger of the passage of House III No. 16, relating to cities of " the fourth class," in which are comprehended those usand and exceeding twelve thousand." It is the worst kind of a patchwork soure in its present shape. Lancaster will have more than 30,000 population at the next census. What will then become of it under this new municipal dispensaion ? As the INTELLIGENCER said of this bill on April 6:

It makes the terms of select councilmen three years, and the members of the com-mon branch two years; the mayor is to be chosen for four years and ineligible to suc-osed himself; the city administration is subbrately divided into departments of pub-lic anlety, public works, water and gas, city treasurer, city controller, isw and educa-tion; with directors, commissioners and other features that are unknown to our It makes the terms of select councilment inicipality. The provisions for irontage for street, sewer and water improve ints that made the Senate bill odious to our tax for le are contained in this House act. * The entire school department is put in charge of six controllers, two elected every year upon a general ticket, instead of our efficient system of thirty-six directors on the emicent system of thirty-six directors on the minority representation plan. Assessments are to be made by three assessors appointed by the court. Many other radical changes, all innovations upon our present system, are proposed by this new law.

It is idle to say that a measure so filled with faults can be successfully amended in the closing days of the legislature. It must be defeated.

Two High License Deliverances. Two important liquor deliverances were made on Tuestay. Governor Hill, of New York, vetoed the Crosby high license bill and the Pennsylvania House passed the Brooks high license measure by the very large vote of 123 for to 62 against it. Governor Hill's veto of the New York measure is so much affected by his view of the local bearing of the measure that the principle of high license is not touched upon. He declares the bill to be special legislation in that it applies to only two cities of the state. New York and Brook lyn. He recites the fact that an amendment was offered in both Houses applying the provisions of the bill to all the cities in state, and another applying them to several of the principal interior cities, but each of these amendments was unhesitat ingly rejected by substantially the same vote that passed the bill. He further declares that the bill was adopted against the protests of nine-tenths of the representatives of New York and Brooklyn and was imposed upon these two cities by representatives who refused to accept its alleged beneficent provisions in behalf of their own localities. The governor in the same line of argu ment presents figures showing that of the twenty-seven cities of the state in twenty of them the number of licenses is greater in proportion to the population than in the city of New York, and in all but one of them the number is greater in proportion to the population than in the city of Brooklyn. Finally the governor says that a clause of the bill is in conflict with the organic law of the state in not recognizing liquor as property, the sale of which may be regulated but which cannot be confiscated. It will be observed that there is no pronunciamento against high license, the inherent defectiveness of the bill weighing it down. In the Pennsylvania instance the big vote by which the Brooks' bill went through, presages its passage in the Senate. The pitfalls in which the New York high license people fell, seem to have been fairly well avoided by their l'ennsylvania brethren. The main hitch has been on the amount of the license fees. It will be interesting to watch if these will be further reduced in the Senate.

e newspapers and with hollow sophistry me of these are building arguments minst the law on the angry exclamations of manufacturers and merchants who are suffering from the outrageous policy of the milroads. But after wrath comes reason. and men are reading this terrible act that the roads have charged with all the trouble. They find that not a word is said in it on which common sense could base the great increase of freights; that as clearly as words can say it the act provides for the retaining of the commutation and mileage tickets; that the most probable effect of the natural operation of this law would be to put an end to the unjust discriminations that have enabled railway monarchs to build barriers of monopolies around their thrones. The people will see this and from it will take an issue. The time of awakening is rapidly approaching ; the doom of monopoly may be confidently foretold ; no bribery of the press can avert it; no power of money can avoid the trial of strength. And ballots are stronger to-day than any power under the sun. ---

OUR local funeral reformers will be inter ested in the information that cremationists will hold an international congress at Milan next September.

THERE are some peculiar features in the Rhode Island election, a knowledge of which shows the great difficulty the Democrats abored under in their recent successful struggle. Under the property qualification embodied in the state constitution large numbers of working people of foreign birth, operstives of mills and others, are practically disfranchised ; for, small as the property qualification is, the necessity of moving about in search of work prevents them from fixing their home in any one place. The capitation tax is another bar to a free ballot, while the system of registration is so arranged as to exclude all voters not registered on the first of December of each year, no matter whethe the election takes place a month or a year after that date. The vote on Wednesday was the largest ever cast in Rhode Island, 8,000 more ballots being cast than last year, and out of 35,000 votes for governor only 32 were cattering. It is not well, however, for Democrats to count too much on the late victory. s Republican internecine fights had much o do with it.

Accosping to the last quarterly report of the statistician of the treasury the total consumption of distilled spirits, wines and malt liquors in 1886 was 737,296,554 gallons, or 12.62 gallons for each man, woman and child of the population. Each person's share in this grand "smile " would be mixed as follows : Wines, 38 gallons : distilled spirits. 1.24 gallons ; malt liquors, 11 18 gallons. It now be in order for some industrious statistician to discover the number of drinking people in the country and estimate the per capita of each one. Lancaster share would rank high in a list of cities arranged according to the consumption of beer per capita.

WHAT need is there for a legal holiday for workingmen"? All men who do their part in life are workingmen, and if they have the means and leisure to take a holiday when they see fit, none may object. Therefore seems that a good bit of the spirit of the dem agogue is secreted in the information that Governor Green, of New Jersey, has signed the bill making the first Monday in Stotember a legal holiday for the workingmen.

MRS ALICE STONE BLACKWELL, Writing against the apparently general belief that the work of a woman cannot be worth as much as that of man, and that the best-paid posttions in schools must be reserved for men makes a good point for her cause by this story of a New Jersey farmer : He had alighted from his wagon, in which were his wife, a basket of eggs, and other breakables. His young borse started off. He was lame and could not run after the team. He shouted at the top of his voice : "Stop that horse! Stop that horse ! White man stop him, $5 ; black man stop him, 50 cents

When she was restored to consciousness she stated that while alone that afternoon she was assaulted by an unknown peddier, who over powered her and then forced her to inhale chloroform. Neveral days ago a man called at the house and offered the young lady $10 for her hair, but she refused to part with her beautiful treases. The peddler who assaulted her is believed to be the same party.

---Fire on the Susquehanns Hills. From the Oxford Press.

An engine on the Columbia & Port Deposit railroad set fire to the young timber on Williamson's Point, Fulton township, Monday night. The tire was seen for miles around and numbers of rabbits, foxes, coons and birds left their homes in the blazing and birds left their homes in the biasing woods to avoid cremation. The Point is a very high elevation and the biasing trees and showers of sparks made a spectacle beautiful to behold. It is said that shout 60 acres of timber and underbrush were burned.

The People Awakening.

We are a long suffering and patient peo ple, until an issue arises on which may be fixed our wrath, and then we carry that like a battle flag straight to the very citadel of the enemies that we have suffered from so long in silence.

For many years we have borne with the insolence and tyranny of corporate power ; we have passively and peaceably watched the steady growth of corporate monopoly. the weaving of a spider web of railways under the soulless control of a money power. Wise men and patriots have given frequent warning that this vast accumulation of wealth and power boded no good to the country. With alarm we have watched the growth of a false aristocracy under the control of railway kings, and using its weat wealth to forge the chains of monopoly on our greatest industries. They have taken oil ; they are claiming coal ; they are scheming to enslave each staple of our unerce. But like Gulliver in the toils of the Lilliputians, the nation is beginning to stir and to strain the feeble bonds. The Interest in the struggle over the inter-state ce act is the first symptom of an ning that is inevitable. Here and here are impatient men who exclaim against the act, but the large body of in-talligent citizens see that the railroads which have wilfully and maliciously misinterpreted this law, are alone responsible for the heavy increase of freight charges. and the vexations and outrages put upon er travel.
