The President.

The St. Louis Republican, upon the auof a senator—aparently Senator Vest sted a few days ago that the president ald not accept a renomination. Senator a refuses to be responsible for any such tensent, which is undoubtedly incorrect; blication has served to make ar just what the president's post. is on the matter, if this was not clear a as it should have been to all who served his course and formed a ect estimate of his character. He is a ind, however, of so rare a plumage in the world, that it is not strange that should not be generally understood. The ne of his character is his conscien-He does what he thinks to be is duty and lets the consequences to himhis work with any eye to its securing for a re-election to his office, save in the that he does what he thinks the ened opinion of his fellow-countrymen ill approve. He is undoubtedly seeking ty the intelligence of the country nd to secure its commendation.

This is certainly the way in which to make himself strong and to secure a re-slection, if that should be his primary But it is not a way the verage statesman readily takes; someow or other he has an uncontrollable ency to slip off the straight track, on the temptation of a seeming expediency.

It is a notorious fact that the statesman who deliberately seeks and works to gain sidency, does not get it, but the les-ms wholly lost on the spirants, who ole for it as botly as ever. Cleveland notable exception ; or rather he is not an n, because he is not a presidential soirant after the aspiration of the ordinary indidate, who wants the place to gratify his ambition and with a wholly selfish view to his own aggrandizement, without thought as to whether he is the best man for his party or the country. Cleveland is not a man of this stamp. It comes naturally to him to think of his party and his country first ; either this, or else he is that very wise man ; who deliberately thinks first of his duty, knowing that thus, in official place, he thinks first of himself.

There is no chance to question that he has pursued a very wise course as president. The fact of his strength before the country shows this; with two years of his ministration passed, he has so firmly esshlished himself that there remains no doubt of his renomination by his party, and very little doubt of his re-election. There is no man in the Democratic party who ald take his place as the standard bearer and poll his vote. He has become necessary to his party, and it has become his duty to secept its nomination, whatever his inclina-tions may be.

That he would otherwise accept the nation is not probable. It is known that he regards the position as one of exme labor and responsibility, from which a wise man would naturally seek to be releved. As he discharges the duties, it is undeniably not a bed of roses or of rest. He has had the honor of holding it and may reasonably desire to escape a further term of the labor. Mr. Dorsheimer says that he once had a letter written declining a renomination; which is possible. Senator Vest says that the president has expressed to him a wish for retirement and declared his desire to be to so conduct his administration as to win the public approval and to make it possible for another Democratic candidate to take his place. The president has a high repute for sincerity, and there is no reason to question that this is a real expression of his preference; but in so administering the government as to win public approval, he finds himself, rather than his party, the object of it, owing to the intensely unwise policy of many prominent Democratic leaders, who have not had the sagacity to follow his lead, but have been disposed to kick and to curvet around, and who will settle into the running too late, doubtless, to make anything but followers in the race. The Demoratic leader is not now at hand to take Dieveland's mantle, and he does not yet apar on the horizon. There are a number dead and wounded ones lying around, he will have to be shoveled into their prayes and be buried too deep for kicking refere the next election comes around; but there is not one but Cleveland of the statre to bear the standard.

Spare the Hawks and Owls. will be seen from the Washington ter to the New York Sun, elsewhere d, that Pennsylvania, in paying bounty for the destruction of 0,000 bounty for the destruction of 0,000 hawks and owls, has in reality lost arly $4,000,000. These figures are reached imate of the damage to the crops by an estimate of the damage to the crops that would have been prevented had these exvengers been allowed to live. Of ninew of these birds killed near Washington stely, but two were found whose stomachs thowed any partiality for poultry.

These results are in the same line as been reached by Dr. Warren, state ornicologist. He made an exhaustive examination in this state and obtained the opinion of specialists elsewhere, and all agreed the view that hawks and owns are of the view that hawks and owns are of the view in devouring field mice and them off indiscriminately, as has been done since the bounty legislation, is about as wise as would be the act of a man saving off the limb of a tree on which he was sitting. The law ought to be promptly re-

To Lessen Cyclone Horrors. The destructive work of the cyclones in Missouri and Kansas, calls for a more thorough and scientific investigation of these phenomena. Engineers have under taken to control the Mississippi river, and have been remarkably successful. In France they have, by scientific forestry, prevented the desolation of fertile valleys by wild mountain torrents. They are planning a change in the climate of the French possessions in Africa by the creation of a small inland sea. Why should they not presume to meet the cyclones of our West with some device that would neutralize their most destructive features

Man cannot, of course, presume to control great climatic changes, for these have from the earliest times controlled the destiny of nations; but it may be possible. by the scientific use of natural forces whose influence on climate has been studied, so to modify the force of occasional storms as to greatly lessen their danger, and even to change them from curses to blessings. At present the question appears to be about as far above us as the earthquake question is below us. But we know that trees and water courses influence the weather, and that men can use those forces; at all events it ought to be possible to establish a system of telegraphic signals giving warning of the approach of cyclones.

These storms do not move with very great velocity, forty miles an hour being their greatest speed, and it would seem to be a sufficient precaution to encourage the construction of telegraph lines, and require the building of storm-proof stations. Of course, the storm would play havoc with the wires, but not until due warning had been given by the operators who would not need to run to cyclone caves to save their

The cyclone has become a feature of Western life, and the great destruction wrought by it in Iowa and Minnesota, in 1882 and 1883, served to call the attention of Eastern people to a phenomenon that the West had long been familiar with.

No Bismarck Need Apply.

The New York Sun thinks that one of the great parties should take up the idea of the peaceable annexation of Canada and make an issue of it. The Sun may want the earth, but there are other wants to be considered, and at present writing it is not evident that we want Canada or that Canada wants us. One of its correspondents also calls for a great statesman of the Bismarck. Beaconsfield variety, but we thank Heaven that there is small danger of the call being answered.

The statesmen named are distinguished above everything else for the brilliant nature of their diplomacy and its close resemblance to the blaze of a brush heap-The iron chancillor has covered himself with glory, but if he should die to-day he would leave Germany groaning under military despotism with an ominous and vengeful spirit lurking in Alsace-Lorraine and France.

Beaconsfield so complicated the Eastern question that England may any day be dragged into war over the territory of the unspeakable Turk.

The impression prevails that for the present this country has about as much real estate as it can easily manage, and though we may cheerfully admit Canada when she knocks at our doors as a supplicant for that otection that Union gives, it would be a bad though brilliant policy that would lead us to seek this territorial extension. It is by no means certain that the French-Canadians would harmonize well with the citizens of this republic.

CLEVELAND's administration is particularly happy in the men it puts in place even when the place is not very big. Erother Childs, of the Ledger, has been named as a West Point visitor, and the president has written him a pleasant letter, asking his acceptance. It was shrewdly and kindly done. We suspect that Col. Lamont is entitled to a share of the credit for the successful way in which these things are done. He is a bower in the White House.

SINCE the defeat of the bill in the legislature to pension supreme and common pleas judges, the friends of Judge Mercur have taken off their coats with a will for his re-elec tion to the supreme bench.

THERE are a number of perspiring gentlemen in both parties in this county who are anxious to be county commissioners. To these, as well as to others, it may be of interest to know that a bill has been introduced in the Senate classifying the counties by a provision that those having over 500,000 inhabitants shall pay their commissioners $5,000 per annum. This, of course, would include no other county than Philadelphia. The second class will have over 300,000 inhabitants, with salaries at $2,500. The third class, of over 100,000 inhabitants, $1,800 salaries. The fourth class shall consist of countles with less than 100,000 inhabitants, whose commissioners shall be paid a per diem of $3 for every day necessarily employed in the per-formance of their official duties. It is proposed to amend this by making the pay $900

PHILADELPHIA Irishmen will ask for the recall of the American minister to England if coercion is enforced in Ireland.

THE British government has just tested its first invoice of the new chrome steel projectiles. "Two selected projectiles were fired at 16 inch compound armor plates, manufactured by Sir John Brown & Co., limited, and these passed through the targets, being found entire at the back. The plates were exceedingly good, being some of the hardest made by Messrs. Brown & Co., but the shells completely shattered them." The heaviest ironclad atloat or on the stocks would not be able to resist these terrible pro-jectiles, and this trial, confirming previous ests, places the guns again shead of the ar-

CONSUL BISSINGER reports to the department of state on the petroleum wells of Egypt. He says that a well driven to a lepth of 380 feet has reached several voins of cerite" or "oil wax." Ozocerite, as may not be generally known, is a substance like ous wax in consistency and translusency, having a weak bituminous odor, and is ordinarily found in connection with rocksalt and coal; it is largely used in the manulacture of candles, and is of much more value than petroleum. Though the yield of petroleum has not so far been very large from any of the wells the government is pushing its investigation vigorously and with strong hopes of success.

Ir costs this state $150,000 a year for public printing and binding. Is the game worth the candle ?

Sketch of His Life. The retirement of Professor Tyndall int privacy, on account of ill health, from the position in which he has held in the Royal Institution since 1853, and to which no one has as yet been nominated, is noted with regret. John Tyndall, Ll. D., F. R. S. was born about 1820, in the village of Leighlin bridge, near Carlow, in Ireland. His parents were in very humble circumstances, but they gave him the best education in their power and sent him to a school where he acquired a sound knowledge of mathematics. At the age of nineteen he joined in the capacity of 'civil assistant' a division of the ordnance survey which was stationed in his native town. In 1844 he was engaged by a firm in Manchester, and for ab ut three years he was employed in engineering operations in connection with railways. In 1847 he accepted an appointment as teacher in Queenwood college in Hampshire, a new institution devoted partiy to the preliminary technical education of agriculturists and engineers. Here he became acquainted with Mr. (now Dr.) he became acquainted with Mr. (now Dr.) Frankland, who was resident chemist to the college, and here he commenced those orig-inal investigations which have placed him in the foremost rank among the explorers of cience. In 1848 the two friends quitter England and went to the university of Marburg, in Hosse Cassel, where they studied under Bunsen. Afterwards Mr. Tyndall prosecuted his researches in the laboratory of Magnus, at Berlin. He conducted invest of Magnus, at Berlin. He conducted investigations on the phenomena of diamagnetism, etc., and produced a volume on this subject. In 1883, having been previously elected a Fellow of the Boyal Society, he was chosen professor of natural philosophy in the Royal Institution of Great Britain, and succeeded as superintendent. In 1866 he joined Prof. Huxley to the glaciers of Switzerland, returning the state of Huxley to the glaciers of Switzerland, returning there again and pursuing his investigations during 1857-8-9, reaching Chamouni on Christmas night in 1859, and two days afterward reaching Montanvert where he remained three days, determining the winter motion of Mer de Glace. In 1859 he commenced his researches on radiant heat. In 1872 Prof. Tyndail lectured in the United States, the proceeds of his lecture being given to an interest to aid students. Prof. Tyndail to an interest to aid students. Prof. Tyndall presided at the annual meeting of the British association held at Belfast in August, 1874. He accepted the presidency of the Birming-ham and Midland institution for the year 1877. Prof. Tyndali has written numbers of books Prof. Tyndali has written numbers of books and pamphlets. Among these may be found "The Glaciers of the Alps," 1860, "Mountaineering," 1861, "A Vacation Tour," 1862, "Heat Considered as a Mode of Motion," 1863, "On Radiation," the "Rede Lecture," 1865, a volume on "Sound" 1883, "Faraday as a Discoverer," "Notes on Electricity," 1870, "Notes on Light," 1879, "Hours of Exercise in the Alps," 1871 "The Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, ice and Glaciers," 1872, "Address Delivered Before the valer in Colous and Rivers, ice and Gia-ciers," 1872, "Address Delivered Before the British Association Assembled at Belfast, with Additions and a Pretace," 1874, "Frag-ments of Science," 1876, and "Essays on the Floating Matter of the Air in Relation to Putrefaction and Infection." Tyndali married February 29, 1878, Louisa Ciaude Hamilton, eldest daughter of Lord and Lady Hamilton.

A TRAGEDY IN BECOKLYN.

A Beautiful Young Lady Accidentally Killed by a Pistol's Discharge, Profound sorrow was excited on Sunday in Philadelphia by the melancholy intelligence that one of the most popular young ladies of Philadelphia society, had met her death suddenly while visiting at the residence of a friend. The deceased was Miss Annie C. Lesley, residing at No. 315 South Fifteeenth street, Philadelphia. Miss Lesiey was not in that city at the time of the accident. She was visiting the family of Mr. William H. Nichols, on Pierpont street, Brooklyn. Mr. Nichols is a well-known member of the New Nichols is a well-known member of the New York Stock Exchange, and was president of the Young Republican club at the time of the election of Mayor Low. His son, Mr. George Nichols, was a great friend of Miss Lesley's, and during a summer at Saratoga had assisted her in practice with firearms, an amusement of which the unfortunate young lady was very fond, as she was of such other out-door sports and pastimes as a lady could with propriety take part in. She was noted as a brilliant and successful lawn tennis player, having won many prizes at the game in Philadelphia, and white sojourning in the Adiron-dacks had engaged in deer hunting, and by bringing down a noble stag had rendered herself lamous throughout the mountains as a modern Di Vernon, whom she resembled in beauty and loveliness of character as in other traits that have made that heroine celebrated. On her visit some days since to Brooklyn the traits that have made that heroine celebrated. On her visit some days since to Brooklyn the subject of firearms was again brought up, and Miss Lesley declaring hersell as much in favor of the amusement of markmanship as ever a match was agreed upon and the engagement was fixed for Saturday afternoon. Miss Lesley on that occasion was examining a loaded pistol, when in handling the weapon it went off, sending a bullet through her brain. Her suffering must have been brief, for death was almost instantaneous. Ere any one could reach the prostrate girl to render assistance, she was a corpse, and alrender assistance, she was a corpse, and al-though medical aid was immediately sum-moned, the physician arrived only to confirm by the verdict of science the terrible truth already manifest.

An inquest, under the circumstances, was merely formal in character, and at that which was held the same afternoon the jury rendered a verdict, "That the deceased came to dered a verdict, "That the deceased came to her death from a wound in the brain accidently sustained while handling a pistol."

The remains were brought to Philadelphia and carried at once to the home which the young lady left but a few days before in the full glow of health and hope, and with cheerful anticipations of a delightful visit among her friends in Brooklyn. Miss Lesley, who was about 20 years of age, was greatly admired and beloved in Philadelphia society. Her lively an amiable disposition rendered her much sought after, and, while she enjoyed open air sports and pastimes, her character possessed all the essentially feminine traits which render a young woman attractive. She was the light of her home, as she was the favorite of her social circle. was the favorite of her social circle.

He had been a delegate to several general conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church, and in 1881 was a delegate to the Ecumencial council at Lon-don, England. In 1884 he was Prohibition candidate for governor.

FRANKLIN A. COMLY, for over thirty years president of the North Pennsylvania Railroad company, died at his home at Fort Washington on Baturday atternoon, in the 75th year of his age. The immediate cause of death was the rupture of a blood vessel at the base of the brain, although the deceased had been suffering for the past eight weeks from congestion of the lungs and a complication of diseases.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, who was married to Miss Whitfield on Friday in New York, was born in Dumfernline, Scotland, in 1835, and came to the United States a poor boy. He could not find work in New York, which even then was overcrowded, and so he drifted to Pittsburg, and was running a stationary engine and working as a telegraph operator for some years. He formulated the system of "train dispatching" by telegraph and saw service on the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania railroads. Before the age of 20 he was superintendent of the western division of the Pennsylvania railroad. He fell in with Col. Thomas A. Scott, and they bright some oil lands. The yield was enormous, and Mr. Carnegle began piling up a fortune which to day exceeds ten millions.

Enclosed find postal note for one-half decent bottles of your Athlophoros. It is wonderful how it cures every case where I can persuade them to try. The sales are increasing. My sister-in-law was given up to die by the doctors; they sent for me; I took a bottle of Athlophoros and persuaded her to try it; the second dose gave relief. She had not lain in bed for two weeks; the next night she went to bed and slept all night; it one week she was up and at work around the house. Many thanks.

Listowing to Athlophore that I am align.

have suffered with inflammatory rheumatism for years, most of the time being perfectly help-less. But one bottle of Athlophores has cured me. There is nothing like it for the speedy relief and permanent cure of rheumatism, so I recommend it to all, knowing it will accomplish what it claims to do. Mrs. E.
