The committee reported that the plan was not feasible. A long discussion followed, the general sentiment being that if a canvasser is to be appointed it should be a Lancaster county man. The report of the committee

The resolution was adopted after some dis-Some of the members were opposed to holding a primary election, as the vote was too small in several of the districts. Mr. Black referred to the difficulty the temperance men of the city would have in holding a primary in the rum-ridden city. He felt neourized however at the great work that done by the Prohibitionists of the country. It looked very much as if the movement was marching onward, as is indicated by the secent convention in Ohio which was attended by 2,000 delegates. There are but six states in the Union in which prohibition or local option are not in force. Pennsylvania is one of them. The sentiment is growing in the th and at Fort Worth, Texas, on July there were 30,000 persons at a Prohibitio meeting and the rum-sellers are appealing to their friends in the North and East to aid them with funds to help them to defeat pro-A motion to send an address to the tem-

Mr. Black said that the Republican party in caucus favored aubmitting the prohibition amendment, but that party is not in favor of prohibition. The party voted for submission because a respectable number of people demanded it. The Republican party is now in favor of prohibition and the Democratic party is squarely against it. Mr. Leonard said the history of the Republican party was one of policy at all times and Dr. Martin also favored a vigorous address being sent to every temperance man. It would stir them up and do good. He also referred to the course of the local papers on the prohibition question, and firmly believed that the New Era would soon be a fullfledged Prohibition paper. Mr. Buchman said he wrote to the Neu

Era and asked the question whether high license lessening the number of licensed places was an advantage to prohibition and the swer he received was that any one knew that with a smaller number of licensed places there would be less crime and drunkenness. His own view was statistics did not bear our that answer. He also made the statement that if it paid either of the daily papers in this city to be Prohibition papers they would change front at once and endorse the Prohibition platform. The member from Drumore East said that some of the Prohibitionists in his township had been induced to go back on their party by the promise of township office. The chairman was directed to prepare an

THE PROPOSED SOUTHERN MARKET.

Location Not Yet Determined-Sub-Commit tees Named to Obtain Prices of Properties. The committee to select a site for the proposed new Southern market and report the same to the parties interested held a meeting Friday and discussed the matter at some length, but arrived at no result. The three sites spoken of were the Lamb and Fourth Ward hotel properties, South Queen below Vine street, Mr. Wacker's property on the opposite side of South Queen and the Ethinger property, northeast cor-ner South Queen and Vine. All the members of the committee except Wm. D. Sprecher were in favor of locating the market north of German street. Mr. Sprecher said is the market were located three squares or more down South Queen street he would furnish two thirds of the capital to build it : if it was to be built north of German street h would have nothing more to do with it and he might be "counted out." The committee was then divided into sub-committees to visit the owners of the proposed sites and get from them the terms upon which they will seil and report to a meeting of those interested on the call of the chairman.

This they did at once and began packing up their goods preparatory to leaving town. The tea men owed the newspapers several bills for advertising and there was a balance due the Examiner and INTELLIGENCER of $12 each. When the business managers of these offices found that the tea men were about to leave town they tried to collect the bills but payment was refusomy, where they filed a bond and bad an attechment issued. A NEW BASS BALT. What an Old Fisherman Uses to Catch Baskets Full of Fuh.

" I have discovered a sure balt for basa." said an old fisherman to a Reading Herald reporter yesterday, "but mind you, don't put this in the paper. It is snakes' talls. Everybody has observed that the tail of a snake don't die until sundown, but keeps wriggling all day after the rest of the snake has climbed the golden stairs. Now bass, above all fish, want a lively bait. The idea above all fish, want a lively bait. The idea struck me one day when I was fishing along Limerick dam. A freshly killed snake was lying in the weeds along the tow path, while its tail was keeping up a lively agitation. I took my knife, cut the tail off, put it on the hook and threw out about 30 feet from the shore. I no sooner tightened up my line than I had a vigorous bite, and in five seconds I was pulling away on a three-pounder. In half an hour I had landed eight base, averaging two pounds each. The ninth one got away with the bait and my fun ceased. I tried other bait, but only got one fish in the next four hours. I then started out to hunt snakes. I found one after an hour's search, cut off his tail, and it lasted me for five base, which I pulled in inside of twenty minutes; but I had a fine basket full and was ready to quit. Since then I have a couple of country boys in my employ who catch alive and bring to me all the snakes they see, and I now have no trouble in getting all the bass I want every time I go fishing. At first I killed the snakes and then cut off their tails, but then I made an important discovery which will enable me to fish all summer with a dozen snakes. I found that by cutting off the tail while the snake was living and putting a little coemoline on the wound it not only healed, but that in about three weeks' time the snake would grow an entirely new tail just as lively as the old one. But, mind, don't put this in the struck me one day when I was fishing along grow an entirely new tail just as lively as the old one. But, mind, don't put this in the paper. If you do, snakes will soon be as scarce around here as they are in Ireland, and by the time the season is over there wil
