Not only re such dispatches spread broadcast but they es such dispatches spread broadcast but they are also worded so as to present to their re the picture of a bale old man physisaily vigorous and mentally acute who has been suffering a few days' inconvenience from a slight cold and is sufficiently convaent to perform with perfect case and even rity the functions of a man of 40 years of Truly some of these dispatches are

Much has been said recently as to the probility of war between Germany and France mediately after the emperor's death conveging the impression, as it was intended could be conveyed, that the present penceful attitude of Germany is due entirely to the emperor's firmness in guiding the des ies of the fatherland and these stories, too If traced to their origin would be found to iginated in Berlin and very near if not stually within the palace. There is a remote contbility that the representations thus ion of truth, but there are persons, and wel informed persons, too, who believe that for the last twelve months if not for a much longer period the emperor has had as little to do with the conduct of German national, political and diplomatic affairs as the man whose vigorous rubbing restores to his feeble body when he awakes each morning rienced before his blood ceased to circu iste without stimulation, when all of his was taken through its natural channel and when he could arise from his bed and walk about his room without being lifted or propped up. It is noteworthy that the Times, Standard, Daily News and other morning papers contain Berlin dispatche concerning the emperor's health and where abouts, one stating that he left Innespruck ing his arrival at Gastein in the care o three physicians. The latter dispatch sig-nificantly adds that the hotel proprietors were obliged to put their imperial guest on the first floor because he wasn't able to get irs, and intimates that he was afraid he abould fall down if he tried to do so. It is well enough for the Germans to claim the Rock-Officers Chosen by the Fantastics COLUMBIA, July 20.-The hot dry weather by which we have been assailed for some time has affected the river to such an extent that the water has fallen between two and three feet during the past two or three weeks. That portion of the river, on this side, be tween the lock and the bridge is not navigable o canal boats drawing five feet of water. These boats can no longer ply between Co-lumbia and Wrightsville, and the dredg ing machine with a large corps of work-men is employed in making a channel on this side. Yesterday canal boat No. 233, commanded by Captain Beigh, went safely over the first part of the journey between Columbia and Wrightsville, bu while approaching the Wrightsville side the boat struck forcibly against a rock and sunk. The boat, up this morning, had not been
