LANCASTER, AUGUST 4, 1887.

An official advertisement, by the proper ale authorities, will recall attention to fact that two amendments to the tion of Pennsylvania are pending sofore the people and, if the state convenof the respective political parties take mizance of their consideration, may inme zest into what would otherwise store a dull campaign. It is notable that these the people of the commonwealth rat-fied their new constitution in 1873, by a repular majority reaching nearly one hunred and fifty thousand, no amendment nitted to popular vote, albough several have been formally propound in the legislature and many offered in public discussion. The new constitution was a bold departure in many features. It was the work of a body largely drawn m the ablest and most eminent men of the state; among them were persons of ality and force of character, whose teting opinions were hard to reis, and some of the results of oir deliberations were of very quesmable propriety. There are a maker of provisions in the instrument which certainly would have been repudi ad had they been submitted separately eral was the disgust of the people th the old order, and so rank and noxhad the evil of special legislation news to be, that any change was weld and the new law was adopted, with hatever crudities and defects it con-

The provision for amendment to th tal law requires that such altera tion must first receive the agreement of majority of the members elected to each se. It does not call for the signature of the governor; although we believe Governor Beaver has assumed the privilege of setting his retary of the commonwealth is directed these amendments for three nths before " the next general election" in the newspapers of the state ; although, as events show, it is not the most timely on for such publication. For it is stended to inform the people and to direct their choice of representatives and senators with some reference to their views upon these questions; whereas members of the egislature are not chosen at this " next general election," but in the canvass of eeding year. It is to be borne in nd also that while these publications nade now, no vote of the people is to taken on the amendments this year. nor even next year. The amendments are only submitted to popular decision after they have received the approval of both hes of the next legislature, to be chosen in 1888.

In the canvass of next year every candidate for the legislature will have to have. or at least to avow, an opinion upon the subject of these amendments. He will be perrogated and will have to answer. Meantime it will be interesting to watch what the state conventions will have to my and do about the amendments which the legislature has passed and which are mow advertised to the attention of the

The first of these proposes to entirely probit the manufacture and sale of liquor. ine and beer, or even the keeping of hard der in Pennsylvania. We think that the cratic convention at Allentown can ford to say that it is against this sweeping ndamental law; and in saying this it will not mean that the party is opposed to orous restriction of the liquor traffic, nor that thousands of its individual members would not favor its extermination. We think the Prohibition state convention will favor the amendment. We think the lieblican state convention will dodge the estion and declare it is not an issue; not this year; some other year. The second proposed amendment is to the effect that the present two-months raidence in an election district as a ulaite to voting be reduced to thirty oubted; and a somewhat misty exception is made relating to municipal elections. idiers in the field and inmates of solliers' homes are secured in their rights to to wherever they may be; and students. ers and paupers are neither to gain nor ce for voting by their tempolocation. The tax qualification upon achies is entirely wiped out; this is ment of the amendment and must com-I itself to thoughtful and intellihas this attempted restriction is a farce, consided by political parties, the fruitful purce of expense and corruption. The ratio state convention can well afford to

Here is an instance in which it is said no ossible malice could have existed. Had Drake forescen the consequences of his act, he would, no doubt, have shrunk in horror from its contemplation. It was esentially accidental, but a man's life went out thereby and Drake must pay the

The narrow span between life within and life without the jail bars becomes manifest in viewing the circumstances of this tragic incident.

More of the County Hospital.

We published Wednesday the attidavit of Nathaniel Pickell brought forth by the ininuations of Dr. MacCreary's letter. The octor, in his remarks on this case, furnished a fair sample of the methods he followed all through his defense; trying to weaken the evidence against himself by maligning the witnesses and offering sugrestions of sinister motive. In this case he merely gave his opinion that the sick man was treated more carefully than his relatives would have treated him, which in view of the sworn facts, is a reckless remark, and then went on to state his unfounded suspicions of an avaricious

How false and unjust these were the estimony shows with circumstantial detail. To MacCreary, avarice may have seemed a more natural motive, but he had no right to publish his base suspicions, and the New Era makes a poor figure in choosing this as a text from which to preach to the INTELLIGENCER on the dangers of a love of sensationalism.

The editor of that blindly partisan journal would do well to search out the watermelon seed in his own eye and explain how it was that in his official capacity, as a local representative of the board of charities, he was entirely unable to visit the hospital in the year 1887 until the INTELLIGENCER made it necessary for him to attend a special meeting. He could not be expected to unearth abuses by one official visit in a

The manly letter in which Mr. Leonard replied to Moral Director Swank, is amply sufficient to meet that argument. Quietly and earnestly Mr. Leonard has been doing the work of the good Samaritan, and when against his wish publicity was given to that fact, it is a pity that in place of honor he should receive abuse because he gave invaluable aid to the INTELLIGENCER exposure of abuses which our contemporary has been pleased to call tictions and gross exaggerations.

BLAINE denounces the reports of his ill health. We are glad to hear they are untrue.

GUITEAU's lawyer understands the irreglarities and tortuous complications of vari ous shades of meaning of which the English language is capable. He got drunk and de serted from a New York ferry boat in mid stream, was rescued and sent to the Bellevue hospital as insane, but he has already per sunded the doctors that it was " emotions insanity" and will soon be at liberty.

THERE are none so plind as those who wi

THE savings banks of New York state are enormous in their scope. For the past six months the increase in deposits has be $20,000,000 and in the savings banks of New of depositors in the city has also increased 17,000 since January. The amount now due positors in the twenty-four savings banks of New York city approximates $279,000,000, as 687,000. This means that the people who either own or desire to own their homes in the Empire state are on the increase.

SCOTLAND is standing nobly by the "grand old man."

This ought to be a warning to Kentucky Democrats never to let their majority fall to When that figure is reached the Republicans begin to claim the state.

MOBAL INSTRUCTOR SWANK is not put in every enviable position by his status in the investigation into the county hospital mismanagement. He has great fears that un' der it lies a scheme for his removal from his $100 post as moral instructor at the county institutions. It is proper that a man should look after himself, but in so doing he ought not, if he be a Christian, detract others. There was no allusion to a deficiency in the moral instruction in all the hospital testimony. but Mr. Swank rushes in to thing mud at one of the INTELLIGENCER'S sources of informs ion, basely feering that his sinecure is in danger. The letter of Mr. Leonard fully disposes of Swank, and shows him in his true position before this community.

WHAT a thick allence is observed by our contemporaries on the charges against the present administration of the county hospital!

An Act of Oriminal Vengeance.
One of the most abominable acts of criminal vengeance conceivable by a human being has recently been perpetrated in Chili. This has recently been perpetrated in Chili. This mometer lived in Los Andes, Chili, and in the neighborhood of him there resided a family, the members of which he hated. When amalipox appeared in the province he secretly obtained a number of dried pustules, and these he placed inside a plug of tobacco, which he threw away in a place where the people he hated were sure to see it. One of the children picked the tobacco up and save it to her parents, who made eighreties from it and smoked them. A very few days afterward smallpox broke out in the house, and with such virulence that no one of the family escaped. The oriminal, however, was attacked with the disease a few days afterward, and died after confessing his crime.

BIR : My attention has just been called to nature some time ago, in which you spoke in a light and dippent manner of my bair. The remark was carefully worded, but cal-culated to cast obloquy and represen upon me in the eyes of the public. I have spoken to several friends in relation to it and they are of one opinion in the matter. They unite in saying that the term " Mexican hairless humorist" demands a challenge, to my nothing of the statement that " while on board a train which was robbed in Ne-brasks," I succeeded in "concealing my jewelry in my hair untill the danger had

I will settle with you.

I hope, sir, that you will excuse anything that may seem coarse or brutal in this challenge, for I desire only to take your life without giving you any offense, and I want to be polite like other duelists. May I sak, therefore, that at your earliest convenience you will name a quiet place as free from majaria. will name a quiet place, as free from malaria as possible, where we may kill each other undisturbed.

May I trouble you also, sir, to select two as daugerous weapons as possible, and also to bring with you the surgeon who generally sews you up at such times.

The De Nyes have always been a bot-blooded race ever since they left France, and they can none of them brook an insuit or bear to be tramped on.

When I first read your stinging insuit in the paper I became delirious with passion, and although I am not related to the Knickerbockers my breath came in short pants.

The Pe Nyes are piessant people to meet, but the man who infuriates one of them is liable to meander up the flume in an oblique manner. Pardon anything, sir, in this com-munication which may cound harsh or clash with the smooth and echolarly style of assassination peculiar to the code. I desire to meet you in mortal combat, but I want to do it in a polished way, and I desire to word this note so that it will read well in print this note so that it will read well in print, like other challenges.

I have consulted several friends about the prospect of our meeting in a duel at no distant day, and all of them seem to be highly gratified. It affords me great pleasure to note that I go into this thing with the hearty indorsement and godspeed of all, without distinction. If you would prefer to wait a few weeks, till the weather is cooler, so that you can lie in state longer. I will try to you can lie in stats longer, I will try to muzzle my wrath, but would advise you not tocrose my trail in the meantime.

not to name the sword. Do not be too proud to heed his advice. It may save your life—and mine also.

I hope you will not treat this challenge lightly, sir, and try still further to heap ridicule upon an old and mildewed name by suggesting soft gloves or watermelons as weaponr. Let us meet as gentlemen, sir—fire and fall down, stagger to our feet, lean heavily against a tree, mutter a few words in a boarse voice, gasp two times in rapid succession, put on our coats and go home.

I feel almost certain, sir, that you will treat this note in a slighting and jaunty manner, but I beg that you will not do so. For the sake of the Tidds, who were always a plain but rather pleasant set of people, and for the sake of the De Nyes, whose only fault has been their foudness for fresh, hot blood, furnished by other parties; for the sake of all our ancestors, sir, let me beg of you to assist in making this duel a success.

If I have been brutal in the wording of this challenge, sir, or violated the code, or misspelled any words will you please have it corrected before you send it to the printer? I ask this favor of you in all sincerity and in as courteous a manner as possible, hoping that you will grant it promptly and that you will lose no opportunity to do all the good you can during the next few days.

In closing, sir, allow me to express the hope that you will surely be at the duel and that you will bring your cinner.

My second will offer you the choice of weapons, with an opportunity for retraction. If you enter into life and its empoyments with real zest, I would advise you to avail yourself of the opportunity to retract, for, although sir, I would be a great deal happier with your heart's blocd, the retraction will do me just as well and you need not humilate yourself in writing it. I do not ask you, sir, to grovel. You can write a retraction which will not compromise you at all and yet one that will give me much pleasure.

In the meantime, sir, I shall remain at the above address, awaiting your decision, and whatever it may be, sir, I beg to remain your most obedient antagonist and well wisher,
