

A NOBLE STRUCTURE.

The magnificent stone arch bridge over the Conestoga river is the most important work of the Pennsylvania railroad company.

The large stone bridge which has been in course of erection over the Conestoga river is the most important work of the Pennsylvania railroad company.

The iron bridge, the piece of which the present one takes, was erected in the years 1864 and 1865. Previous to that time there had been a wooden bridge at this point.

The first bridge across the Conestoga at this point was erected by the state, which then owned the railroad, about 1831. It was a trestle of frame and covered, like the present day bridge, with a flat top.

What the Defense Allege They Will Prove. The List of Votes for Menzies to 100 and 157 Ballots Are Claimed to Have Been Cast for Smith.

Wednesday Afternoon.—The trial of the Sixth ward election officers was resumed at 2:30 o'clock. Letter-Carrier William A. Kennedy was put on the stand.

Assessor Leonard was called and examined as to the manner in which the registry book was made each year. He said the names of the taxpayers are written in the book when it comes into his hands.

James Harrison, a Democrat, indignantly denied voting at the primary. F. P. Kaufman did not vote for Menzies, but could not remember who the others were.
