CHAPTER XIL

A LONELT SIGHT. I had a pipe of my own in my pocket tched a small block of the black toba a small block of the ones was in the pantry, and with com-ic, for it was as hard and dry as gian ic, for it was as hard and fell a-puffing with oco who has long been denied his favorite tobacco who has long been defied his favorite relish.

My pipe being emptied, I threw some more coals into the furnace, and putting a candle in the lantern went aft to take another view of the little cabins, in one of which I resolved to sleep; for though the cook room would have served me best while the fire burned, I reckoned upon it making a coder habitation when the furnace was black than those small compartments in the stera. The cold on deck gushed down so bitingly through the open companion latch that I was fain to close it. I mounted the steps, and with much ado shipped the cover and shut the door, by which of course the great cabin, as I call the room in which the two men were, was plunged in darkness; but the cold was not tolerable, and the parcels of candles in the larder rendered me indifferent to the gloom.

On entering the passage in which were the doors of the borths, I noticed an object that had before secaped my observation—I mean a small trap hatch, no bigger than a manhole, with a ring for lifting it, midway down the lane. I suspected this to be the entrance to the lazarette, and putting both hands to the ring pulled the hatch up. I miffed cautiously, fearing foul air, and then sinking the lantern by the length of my arm I peaced down, and observed the outlines of casin, bales, cases of white wood, chests, and so forth. I dropped through the hole on to a cask, which left my head and shoulders above the deck, and then with the utmost caution stooped and throw the lantern light around me. But the cashs were not powder barrels, which perhaps a little reflection might have led me to suspect, since it was not to be supposed that any man would stow his powder in the lazarette.

As I was in the way of settling my misgivings touching the stock of food in the schooner, I resolved to push through with this business at once, and fetching the chopper went to work upon these barrels and chests; and very briefly I will tell you what I found. First, I dealt with a tieros that proved full of salt beef. There press the nature of the rest; there were up-ward of thirty barrels of pork; one canvas-bale I ripped open was full of hams, and of these bales I counted half a score. The white cases held biscuit. There were several sacks of peas, a number of barrels of flour, cases of candles, cheeses, a quantity of tobacco, not to mention a variety of jars of several shapes, some of which I afterward found to contain maximalde and secretors of differcontain marmalade and succedoes of differ-ent kinds. On knocking the head off one cask I found it held a frozen body that by the light of the lantern looked as black as ink; I chipped off a bit, sucked it, and found

I was so transported by the sight of this wonderful plenty that I fell upon my knees in an outburst of gratitude, and gave hearty thanks to God for his mercy. There was no further need for me to dismally wonder whether I was to starve or no; supposing the provisions sweet, here was food enough to provisions sweet, here was food enough to last me three or four years. I was so overjoyed and withal curious that I forget all about the time, and flourishing the chopper made the round of the lazarette, sampling its freight by individual instances, so that by the time I was tired I had enlarged the list I have given by discoveries of brandy, beer, catmeal, oil, lemons, tongues, vinegar, rum and eight or ten other matters, all stowed very bunglingly, and in so many different very bunglingly, and in so many differen kinds of casks, cases, jars and other vessels, as disposed me to believe that several piratical rummagings must have gone to the crea-tion of this handsome and pleutiful stock of

Well, thought I, even if there be no more coal in the ship than what lies in the cook house, enough fuel is here in the shape of casks, boxes and the like to thaw me pro-visions for six months, besides what I may come across in the hold, along with the hamcome across in the noid, along with the half-mocks, bedding, boxes, and so forth, in the forecastle, all which would be good to feed my fire with. This was a most comforting reflection, and I recollect of springing out through the lazarette hatch with as spirited a caper as ever I had cut at any time of my life.

I replaced the hatch cover, and having resolved upon the aftmost of the four cabins as my bedroom, entered it to see what kind of accommodation it would yield me. I hung up the lautern, and looked into the cot that was slung athwartships, and spied a couple of rugs or blankets, which I pulled out, having no fancy to lie under them. The deek was title and discharacter or the transition of the service o ing no fancy to lie under them. The deck was like an old clothes shop or the wardrobe of a traveling troop of actors. From the confusion in this and the adjoining cabins I concluded that there had been a rush at the last—a wild overhauling and flinging about of clothes for articles of more value hidden among them. But just as likely as not the disorder merely indicated the slovenly indifference of plunderers to the fruits of a pillage that had overstocked them.

The first garment I picked up was a cloak of a sort of silk material, richly furred and lined; all the buttons but one had been cut off, and that which remained was silver. I spread it in the cot, as it was a soft thing to spread it in the cot, as it was a soft thing to lie upon. Then I picked up a coat of the fashion you will see in Hogarth's engravings—the coat collar a broad fold, and the cuffs to the elbow. This was as good as a rug, and I but it into the cwith the other.

to the elbow. This was as good as a rug, and I put it into the cot with the other.

I swept the huddle of things with my foot into a corner, and lifting the lids of the boxes saw more clothes, some books, a collection of small arms, a couple of quadrants, and sundry rolls of paper, which proved to be charts of the islands of the Antilles and the western South American coast, very ill di-gested. There were no papers of any kind to determine the vessel's character, nor journa to acquaint me with her story.

I was tired in my limbs rather than sleepy and went to the cook room to warm mysel at the fire and get me some supper, meaning to sit there till the fire died out and then go to set there this the fire died out and then go to rest; but when I put my knife to the ham I found it as hard frozen as when I had first met with it—so with the cheese, and this though there had been a fire burning for hours! I put the things into the oven to thaw, as before, and sitting down fell very pensive over this severity of cold, which had rower to freeze within a vary or two of the power to freeze within a yard or two of the furnace. To be sure, the fire by my absence had shrunk, and the sliding door being open admitted the cold of the cabin; but the consideration was, How was I to resist the killing enfoldment of this atmosphere? I had slept in the boat, it is true, and was none the worse, and now I was under shelter, with the heat of a plentiful bellyful of meat and liquor to warm me; but if wine and ham and cheese frose in an air in which a fire back liquor to warm me; but if wine and ham and cheese froze in an air in which a fire had been burning, why not I in my sleep, when there was no fire, and life beat weakly, as it does in slumber? Those figures in the cabin were dismal warnings and assurances; they had been men perhaps stouter and heartier than ever I was in their day, but they had been forces into stony images! neverther been frozen into stony images, neverthe-less, under cover, too, with the ma-terials to make a fire, and as much strong waters in their lazarette as would serve their

It strangely and importunately entered my head to conceive that though those men were frozen and stirless they were not dead as corpses are, but as a stream whose current, checked by ice, will flow when the ice is melted. Might not life in them be suspended by the cold, not ended! There is vitality in the seed, though it lies a dead thing in the hand. These men are corpses to my eye, but, said I to myself, they may have the principles of life in them, which heat might call into being. Putrefaction is a natural law, but it is balked by frost; and just as decay is hindered by cold, might not the property of life be left unaffected in a body, though it should be numbed in a marble form for fifty years! form for fifty years?

This was a terrible fancy to possess a man situated as I was, and it so worked in me that again and again I caught myself look-that my heart beat at its usual measure as I passed through the hatch and went again to the cook room.

I was, however, sure that if I sat here long, listening and thinking, fear would return. So, raking out the fire, I picked up the lantern and was about to go, then halted, considering whether I should not stow the frozen provisions away. It was a natural thought, seeing how precious food was to me. But, alas! it mattered not where they lay; they were as secure here as if they were as mugly hidden in the bottom of the hold. It was the white realm of death; if ever a rat had crawled in this ship it was, in its hiding place, as silf and idle as the frozen vessel. Bo I let the lump of wine, the lee, ham, and so forth, rest where they were, and went to the cabin I had chosen, involuntarily peeping at the figures as I passed, and hurrying the faster because of the grim and terrifying liveliness put into the man who sat starting from the table by the swing of the lantern in my hand.

I shut the door and hung the lantern near the cot, having the fiint and box in my pocket. There was, indeed, an abundance of candles in the vessel; nevertheless, it was my business to husband them with the utmost niggardliness. How long I was to be imprisoned here, if indeed I was ever to be delivered, Providence alone knew; and to run short of candles would add to the terrors of my existence by forcing me either to open the hatches and ports for light, and so filling the ship with the deadly air outside, or living in darkness. There were a cloak and a coat in the cot, but they would not suffice; there was, however, plenty of apparel in the corner to serve as wraps, and having chesse enough to smother me I vaulted into the cot, and so covered myself that the clothes were above the level of the sides of the cot.

I left the lantern burning while I made sure my bed was all right, and lay musing, feeling extremely melancholy; the hardest part was the thought of those two men watching in the cabin. The most fantastic alarms possessed me. Su watching in the cabin. The most fantastic alarms possessed me. Suppose their ghosts came to the ship at midnight, and entering their bodies quickened them into walking! I caught myself listening; and there was enough to hear, too, what with the subdued roaring of the wind, the splintering of ice, the occasional creaking—not unlike a heavy booted tread—of the fabric of the schooner to the blasts of the gale against her masts, or to a movement in the bed on which she reposed.

But plain sense came to my rescue at last. I resolved to have no more of these night fears; so, blowing out the candle, I put my head on the coat that formed my pillow, resolutely kept my eyes shut, and after a while fell asleen. (TO BE CONTINUED !
