MAT I fetched three or four lanterns, and light-ing the candles distributed them among the men, and then in a procession, headed by the captain and me, we made the rounds. I had half cleared the arms room, but there were weapons enough left, and they stared at them like yokels in a booth. I showed them the cook house and the forecastle, where the deck was still littered with clothes and chests and hammocks, and after carrying them aft to the cabins gave them a sight of the hold. I never as men more amazed. They filled the vessel with their exclamations. They never offered to touch anything, being too much awed, but stopped about with their heads un-covered, as quietly as they could, as though they had been in a vault, and the influence of strange and terrifying memorials was upon MATTINGS, 15c. One of the men went out. "Captain," said I, "you are a full ship." "That's so."

"Bound home?"

"You have men enough and to spare. Lend me three of your hands to help me to the Thames, and I'll repay you thus: There should be near 100 tons of wine and brandy, of exquisite vintage and choice with age be-yound language, in the hold. Take what you will of that freight; there'll be ten times the value of your lay in your pickings, modest as you may prove. Help yourself to the clothes in the cabin and forecastle; they will turn to consult for the near work will turn to account. For the men you will spare, and who will volunteer to help me, this will be my undertaking: the ship and all that is in her to be sold on her arrival, and the pro-ceeds equally divided. Shall we call it £1,000 apiecel Captain, she's well found-her inventory would make a list as long as you; I'd name a bigger sum, but here she is—you shall overhaul her hold and judge for yourself. I watched him anxiously. No man spoks, but every eye was upon him. He sat pulling down the hair on his chin, then jumping up on a sudden and extending his hand, he cried: Shake!--it's a bargain, if the men'll jina." "I'll jine!" exclaimed a man.

There was a pause. "And me," said the negro. I was glad of this, and looked carnestly at the others. "Is she tight?" said a man.

"As a bottle," said I. "As a bottle," said I. "Joe Wilkinson and Washington Crom-well-them two jines," said the captain. "Bullies, he wants a third. Don't speak all "Bullice, he wants a third. Don't speak all together." The man named "Bill" at this moment re-turned to the cook room and reported all well above. My offer was repeated to him, but he shock his head. "This is the Horn, mates," said he. "There's a deal o' water 'tween this and the Thames.

How do she sail? No man knows." "I want none but willing men," said L "Americans make as good sailors as the English. What an English seaman can face any of you can. There is another negro in the boat. Will you let him step aboard,
