We have good music and games of all sorts; all the luxuries of home exist on the train; drave ing rooms, first class hotel, barber shop, bath room, reading room, library, &c. We prossed the great San Luis Valley. One can apparently look over the entire valley, and yet it is large enough to hold the whole state of Connecticut. It is surrounded by the Sierra Blancas, and the Spanish mountains are pishing visible around the valley. The railroad crosses it for seventy miles in one unbroken line without a curve. In my judgment this will in a half century contain the nucleus of the modern Ninevah. Its whole surface is arable and fertile, and with irrigation, which can readily be made, will be the most productive portion of our vast country. We remained over Sunday at Santa Fe, the oldest fown in the United States without
