Railroads and Congress. to investigate the Reading railroad strike, has prepared a bill designed as bring the railroads of a state under the of Congress, as well as those thich extend from one state into another, and which fall under its centrol as national highways. It seems that an act of Congress passed in 1866 gives to all steam railroads in the country the privilege of currying goods and passengers between the states, and for that purpose to cormeet with all other roads. Mr. Anderson's proposition is to amend this law so as to confine its privileges to such railroads as will agree to accept the restrictive legislation of the United States in the proposed bill, as binding on them, ugh they are railroads within a state, and so not primarily subject to the United States authority. He thinks that the privilege of inter-communication between the states will be so valuable to a railroad that it will not hesitate to accept the United States legis-lation; and he is doubtless right as to the great railroads that are the chief offenders. They cannot afford to be stopped on the borders of a state with their traffic. Railroads, however, have a habit of going under divers names and organizations in different sections and of continuing their business over leased lines, which might embarrass the United States in undertaking to constrain them, and there might perhaps be a question raised as to whether the powers given by the act of 1866 could be summarily taken from those who have assumed them.

If the state railroads can be brought under the grasp of Congress, Mr. Anderson's bill proposes to forbid their engaging in mining or manufacturing products which are to be carried over its lines as freight; it forbids the pooling with other railroads, and puts a road that ceases operation for a period of seven days, into the hands of a receiver. These regulations, we understand, are intended to apply to all steam railroads doing business in any way between the states, whether by connection with other railroads, or by their own lines.

The provision forbidding railroad companies to be also mining and manufacsuring companies is a sound one, and is recognized in the Pennsylvania constitution. It is ineffective here because there is not vigor or virtue enough in the state administration to enforce it. The legislature will not provide the needed penalties; and if they did, the officers of the state would hardly enforce them. The power of Congress and the independence of the national executive officers is ns into a law, its influence may secure the confinement of railroads to their legitimate business, which is a consummation to be greatly desired.

Remamber the Soldier. To-morrow will be Memorial Day when the people of the country turn for a brief p wied from the cares of every day life to plant a flower on the grave of the dead soldier and recall his immeasurable services in reuniting divided sections in their progress towards a glorious destiny. It is well for the nation that this celebration is not permitted to become a mere idle form lacking substance and heart. It is well that each year the observance becomes of a more popular character; and as time deadens the wounds of the war, the day is looked forward to as one that is sweetly sad, a pain that is almost a

The city and county sent many brave boys to the front in the troublous war days, and hosts of them sleep unknown in soil to which they were strangers. For those who were interred in this vicinity, or who have laid down life's burdens since the termination of hostilities, the flowers should bloom in all their plory tomorrow. It will be a speaking illustration that their bravery is not for otten and their patriotism unhonored by those who live to enjoy the fruits of their self-

Thurman for Vice President. A boom that has caught the favor of the country most undeniably and emphatically, is that which places Allen G. Thurman, the "Old Roman," on the vice presidential ticket with Cleve-Wherever he is known, Mr. Thurman is honored, and in the ranks of his party he is idolized for his unswerving honesty and integrity and for the large measure of capacity for public affairs that he has displayed in a long and active

Cleveland and Thurman! It would be a ticket that would strike terror into the hearts of the opposition. It would anchor Indiana in the Democratic column beyond peradventure, and would cause Ohio to be doubtful in her political moorings. It is said that the president is anxions to have Mr. Thurman as his running mate, which is another evidence of the great political sagacity with which Mr. Cleveland is endowed.

The Chinese. Australia is showing considerable independence in dealing with the Chinese. though her course is placing mother England in a most embarassing position. China respectfully calls attention to the undoubted fact that all the Chinese emigrants sail from the English port of Hong Kong, and that the prevention of emigration seems to be entirely in the hands of England. China is not anxious for her people to go abroad, and in fact would rather keep them at home to pay taxes and fight in her armies if need be. But the Chinese seem determined to go out of this country, they have alarmed the Australians with a rush of immigration, and are even crowding into Mexico where their industry gives them a marked advantage over the native cheap labor. Probably we will next hear of them in England. What will be the end of this swarming of the Chinese to every land where industry and sobricty are well rewarded? Undoubtedly it should have the effect of forcing habits of industry and sobriety upon the men of other races they compete with, but will they not, shut out from every civilized land in turn, be forced at last to expend their energy at home. They are at present affording a most impressive illustration of a nation waking from their sleep of centuries, but when richer and more powerful nations have closed their doors to them and they are thrown back upon their own resources there is no good reason why they should not turn over and go to sleep again. Their contact with foreign nations can hardly affect them as through the crusades it affected the people of Europe, for they lack yet the impulse of a great religious and social revolution.

A Poor Kind of Rice.

Allen Thorndike Rice is the wealthy and fussy editor of the North American Review, who has built quite a trade out of other men's ideas. He seems to have good deal more venom in him than should properly belong to a discriminating and conscientious editor, and he is exercising some of it in a very cowardly fashion upon the memory of the late Judge Jeremiah S. Black.

He takes occasion in correcting a report about the Ingersoll-Black controversy over Christianity some years ago in the pages of the North American Review to say of Judge Black that although his ability as a lawyer and writer is disputed by none, it was the general verdict of disinterested readers that he was unequal to maintain a controversy with his more gifted opponent, and that he sought to sover his retreat by resorting to personal abuse of myself."

Ingersoll " more gifted " than Black It is the comparison of a pigmy with a giant; and Rice would know it if he was not wrapped about with an impenetrable cloud of egotism.

WE have been shown a confidential circular from James P. Foster, the president of the National League of Republican clubs, in which he earnestly asks for money to help the Republican cause. He says that Pennsylvania high tariff beneficiaries are not pay it g what they should to the sup-port of the "grand old party." They had better keep their money this year, for this time the Cleveland wave is going to roll resistibly over the country.

THE doctors agree that Gen. Sheridan will die, which excites the fair interence that he will get well.

Ex-GOVERNOR HOYT Is credited with be re elected. "It is believed that Benator Cameron is of the same opinion and thereore does not want the Republican presidential nomination this year.

THE longest speech made by Gen. Sheridan, who is more of a fighter than a talker, was that at the Creston reunion of the veterans of Southwest Iows and Northwest Missouri. There were at least ten thousand veterans present, in addition to thousands of other persons. The enthuand, contrary to custom, he at last yielded to the importunities of the veterans and made a speech that went direct to every old soldier's heart. It was not brilliant, but it contained this sentiment : " Now, I want to say to you, comrades, I am indebted to the private in the ranks for all this credit that has come to me. He was the man who did the fighting, and the man who carried greater; and if Mr. Anderson's bill blos- the musket is the greatest hero of the war, in my opinion. I was nothing but an agent. I knew how to take care of mer. I knew what a soldier was worth, and knew how to study the country to as to put him in right. I knew how to put him in battle when one occurred, but I was simply the agent to take care of him and he did the work. Now comrades, these are common-sense things, and I can't say them la very flowery language, but they are true, nevertheless; and they are true not of me alone, but of everybody else. It is to the common soldier that we are indebted to any credit to us." THE New York Tribune indulges in a curious speculation as to the marriage effquette of the future provoked by the reported eccentricity of two recent marriages. In one case the groom's best man and all the ushers were Benedicts; in another the bride and groom stayed at home and the parents of the bride went off on the wedding ourney under a shower of rice and a flying Says the Tribune's scribe : "If the groom's best man is to be a Benedict, why shall not the mandate go forth that the bride's best girl shall be a matron? And if it shall come to be regarded as the thing to the bride's parents to take a wedding journey, will not the bride's younger brothers organize a public sentiment in favor of the groom presenting them with nickel-plated bleycles at the same time that he gives his best man scarf pins ?"

Educational Interests. The report of the committee on education made to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in New York, Monday, showed that from April 9, 1884, to November 16, 1887, the receipts had been $228.816 and the extendence $100.500. The committee also has a permanent fund of $200,000. MYERS & RATHFON.

To every member of the Grand Army we offer a suggestion quietly-don't buy a Cheap Blue Suit that will turn its color because you can buy it for a few dollars less than some one else has pald for a good one. This is truly poor economy. No one buys Clothing at such extremely low prices as the members of the Grand Army. We've favored them because we think we're indebted to them for past service. We have just offered them Suits at prices without profit. Our Suits at $9, $12 and $14 are the genuine "True Blue," and if you've heard of any from our stock that were not "True Blue" we should like to hear of it. Two sets of buttons with each Suit.
