Decoration Day.

ration Day is peculiar amon ional holidays in the steady growth of pular observance. The great men times are stepping from among he living with almost startling rapidity, and the violent and bitter feelings ed by that terrible struggle and sorly burned into the very nature of the tants have been softened by time death. The humane impulse to conder the virtues rather than the failings of the dead has led men North and th to think more of the bravery and evident sincerity of their old foes and to and incidents of the conflict. The holilays in commemoration of the great rents of revolutionary days are steadily aing of less importance, and though the Fourth of July will doubtless remain for centuries our great holiday, it is in that Washington's birthday is soon lestined to follow other dead holidays morative of the surrender of Cornwallis, the victory of Lake Erie and the battle of New Orleans. But Decoration Day grows steadily and there seems to be fair warrant for prophecy that long after the last of the war veterans has been buried, the whole nation will have agreed on a day of national glorification over the brave men of the great civil war, a grand unanimous braying of brass bands and agitation of bunting under the new leaved trees, and over the freshly ed and "silent tents of green are the old soldiers and sailors sleep.

better time could be chosen for a national and formal visit to the burial inds, a pleasant resort at all times, and more than ever in the early spring when flowers and blossoms are abundant and every one is glad of a chance to pass a day out of doors. The coming generations will see the value of the ends nieved at such fearful cost far more clearly than we can, nearer to the events and confused with the mass of detail. They can not perhaps realize as fully as we do the devastation and ruin that followed the path of war in the South and the desolation and sorrow in Northern homes, but they will see more clearly the far-reaching effects and will realize the power and greatness of a united nation that has already grown beyond the wildest dream of any man in camp in '63. A nation with not only a north and south. but also a great west, and a northwest and southwest; a Pacific slope and far Alaska, all prosperous and advancing in civilization, all proud of their great union and its flag.

For Second Place.

Secretary Whitney says that his sugrestion that Mr. Thurman would accept the vice presidential nomination was and his knowledge that he has customarily been ready to yield to the clear desire of his party. The president, he says, has made no expression on the subject, to his knowledge. Mr. Whitney may not have made a mistake in assuming that Mr. Thurman would accept the nomination for vice president, unanimously tendered him, as it undoubtedly would be with that understanding. We incline to the same view, though we believe that Mr. Thurman's inclination is very much against re-entrance into public life. He has reached a time of life when he desires peace and quiet and leisure. But it is also true that the position of vice president would be the most agreeable to his taste of any public position. He would distinguish it, rather than be distinguished by it. It has no onerous duties connected with it. The vice president simply presides over the Senate, and may absent himself as much as

It is quite probable that Mr. Thurman will accept the Democratic nomination properly tendered. But we do not under-stand Secretary Whitney's haste to say that no intimation has come from the president of a de-ire for Mr. Thurman's candidacy. It seems to us that the expression of such desire would be eminently proper. The case is quite exceptional and the president need have no fear that he will offend the sensibilities of any other candidate by expressing a preference for Mr. Thurman, who is not a candidate, and who can only be made so by the withdrawal of all the candidates and a unanimous call. Such call the president can most gracefully head. It is somewhat the impression that in the outset of his administration he was singularly neglectful of the claims of Mr. Thurman to his most distinguished consideration. If he now entertains the warm feeling toward the Ohio Nestor that pervades his party, it seems to us that he cannot go wrong in showing it by expressing a wish that Mr. Thurman shall be on the ticket which it is already certain that he himself is to head.

Seeking the Site. The great interest that is felt in the lo cation of the postoffice was shown last evening at the meeting which crowded the Board of Trade rooms and which would have filled the court house, probably, if it had been held there, as it certainly should have been. The parties advocating special sites often had a special interest in them, which they cannot be blamed for exhibiting. The advice to the commissioner lost something of its force, however, on this account. The advocates of the Shober property were fortified with a petition hastily prepared in the afternoon, which had the names of seventy-five of the strongest business men of the city; and there is no doubt whatever that this is the site desired by the great majority of those who are en. gaged in business on our principal streets. is the nearest place to the business centre, and will be most convenient to es men. It is close to the present site of the postoffice, and will not disturb present business habits and conditions. This site would be selected, we believe, but for the fact that the price asked for it, $29,000, is more than can be afforded from the small appropriation. Col. Fister said that $75,000 would be needed to put up a suitable building here, and $10,000 more for heating, plumbing, &c. He seemed to think that only $15,000 could be allowed from the $100,000 appropriation for the site. If the parties interested will offer the Shober site for $15,000 it will be very likely to be accepted; otherwise the probability is that the Moravian cemetery lot, which is the cheapest of those offered and as near as any to the centre of business, besides being between the two depots and in the direction in which the town has been growing fastest, will be taken. The commissioner, however, has made no decision. He was impressed with the eligibility of the Griel property on the corner of two wide streets; but it is the general opinion that this site is much too far away from the business centre.

Why Not in Laucaster ?

The INTELLIGENCER published a few days ago that Dr. Thomas Evans, the great American dentist of Paris, bas had under consideration a project to establish a great industrial school for boys in some part of the United States, and plans for the same have been laid before him.

Forty years ago this millionaire dentist. whose name and fame is chronicled with contemporary European royalty, was a struggling young dentist in Lancaster, occupying rooms on the second floor of the Moore building at the southeast corner of Orange and North Queen streets. Many of our older citizens yet remember the gay and brilliant young practitioner of those days, and they little dreamed that when he left for foreign pastures he would climb to the topmost rung in the ladder of his profession the world

It is a most worthy and honorable design that is said to be in contemplation by the great dentist, and we know of no place better fitted to put the plan into effect than right here in Lancaster, the scene of his early struggles. It would be an everlasting memorial of the success that has crowned a most distinguished career, and would be keenly appreciated by the citizens of Lancaster who feel a kinship for him in his home beyond the seas, and regard themselves as partial sharers in the fame which he has attained.

Another From Blaine. Mr. Blaine has written another letter on the subject of his relation to the Republican nomination for president. He writes from Paris and to his intimate friend Whitelaw Reid, of the New York Tribune. This second missive is not more conclusive than the first in excluding his name from consideration at the hands of the Republican convention. He refers to the indecisive construction put upon his Florence letter by the public, and then starts as though he were going to settle the question by unequivocal language. But he does not. The nearest approach to it is contained in these words: "Assuming that the presidential noming. tion could by any possible chance be offered to me I could not accept it without leaving on the minds of thousands of these men the impression that I had not been free from indiscretion, and, therefore, I could not accept it at all."

He does not say, "I will not"; and even if he did, it is doubtful whether the public would believe him, so general is the impression that he is slippery and insincere

THE first number of the Manbelm Sun is as bright as the luminary for which it is named, and bears upon its every line the imprint of Editor Hipple's able pea.

IT has been often charged against Lancaster that it lacks in public spirit, but the ant mated meeting over the public building site last night was a conclusive negative answer to this allegation. True, there were a number of people present who had their little exes to grind, but the vast majority were there because of their interest in seeing that the new federal building goes where it will do the greatest good to the greatest

They have conquered our anger forever When they laured the graves of our dead.

AT the annual meeting of the Nationa Civil Service Reform League in New York on Tuesday night, President George William Curtis said: "Undoubtedly more had been expected of this administration than of any of its predecessors because of the frequent and friendly declarations of the president, and because his election by the votes of those who were not of his party authorized an independence of action which a president elected solely by the vote of his party might feel to be denied to him. This anticipation has been largely disappointed, but the disappointment must not make us unjust nor unmindful of the fact that although the president has done much and has permitted much that every friend of reform must deplore, yet he has maintained all that has been gained in the examinations, he has extended the range of the classified service, and he has revised and strengthened the rules." DR. CHICHESTER BELL has had a talk with a jet of water. It is known that a jet of water is very sensitive to sound and will not only vibrate in unison with the sound waves, but can be made to reproduce them just as the string of a musical instrument tuned in unison with that of another will reproduce the sound given by it.

Dr. Bell fixed a small piece of a non-conducting substance between the ends of two platinum wires and placed this in the centre of a falling jet of water. These wires were connected with a battery and a telephone placed in the circuit. Some one then talked to the jet of water and the speech was not only reproduced but with increased volume's the jet of water not only spoke, but magnified the sounds made.

THE sophomore class of Franklin and Marshall college must be a very jolly class, judging from the literary work they present in "Our Fiame," an ambitious attempt to rob the juniors of the glory of their "Oriflamme." It is filled with wit and humor, some of which is of an exceedingly racy description. It will be an interesting memorial for them in the serious life duties that are yet to come.
