Den't Want Gresham.

It is not less curious than remarkable erve the cooldess with which the leaders regard the Gresham boom for the Reput lican nomination for the presidency. The New York Tribune mtioning the prominent candidates, ne of whose boomlets had escaped the public attention. In all these not one word was found concerning Gresham. Tet two strong Republican states have instructed for the Illinois judge, and he sequenceded to be stronger in Indiana than

The truth seems to be that the Blaine irs do not want Gresham. They either think him too difficult to control or object to the judicial reputation he has established for honesty. Those who have been following the Blaine band wagon for years may expect to find their political morality of doubtful quality. It is pretty mie to say that the Blaine people will not take a great deal of stock in the Greeham movement. In Pennsylvania Senator Cameron is keeping up an ominous silence, while Quay and Magee are whooping it up for Sherman. Cameron is as likely as any man to receive the nomination when the tug of war comes.

Napoleon Died at 51.

General Boulanger is again the hero of the hour in France. He has submitted a posal for the revision of the constitution and demanded urgency therefor. Of course his motion was overwhelmingly defeated, just as he expected that it would be, but he had a fine opportunity for a ringing address to the people in the disruise of parliamentary argument. His ch in support of his motion for conspeech in support of his addution of Parliament abounded in the glittering generalities so dear to the French, but it also had a few strong points that will tell in his favor among the dissatisfied. He said that only by revision could the government be taken from the hands of the privileged class, and asked how ministries or any national policy could be permanent when resting upon parliamentarianism divided into groups, pursuing nothing but clique interests. He did not boiltate to assert that ministers had made use of the public treasury in order to secure votes, and wanted to know why France could not get along without a general dyspeptic tendency. His ailments will engross so much of his time that he will have little left for the practical affairs of life.

His opponents saw in this parliamentary speech nothing but the harangue of ngerous and skillful demagogue, with no care for the fate of the nation if only his own fortunes prosper. Certainly this speech lacks the ring of patriotism. truly solicitous for his country's welfare he would not have announced to all Europe, as he did in the preamble of his oration, that " France no longer feels the confidence in the future necessary to overy well governed country." Press and people have just been repeating the praises of M. Goblet for the declaration that France was tranquilly minding ber own business as remote from aggression as from weakness. He had aid, "Never was public order better secured within France than at the presont time. The republic is solidly estabished." Perhaps Frenchmen know which of these two told the truth, but we foreigners can on'y guess that Goblet indulged in a little justifiable spreadby 877 to 186. It is evident that if 186 votes could be martialed in support of this measure, the republic is not so very colid as Goblet would have it. The deputies showed their sense of danger by reolving that M. Floquet's cutting reply to the general should be publicly placarded throughout France. This reply menewed the old charge of Caur'sm, referred to his speech as giving utterance to projects favorable only to the glory of anger, and, most severe of all, noted that at his age, 51, the great Napoleon had died. This last point will probably be the most weighty with the minds that Boulanger is scheming to control.

It is a great question to answer what shall be done with the boys, and we know of no better treatment of the situation than that indicated above. Give them every chance to acquire a sound body. Then if there is any capacity, the sound mind will soon be developed, and the two will produce a citizen, who will be an honor to his family and au ornament of the state.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN's benefit in New York was a dismal failure. The public has no use for him now that he has come to be exclusively a mouth-fighter.

A PITTSBURG led, who could not wait for the Fourth of July to sgitate his patriotism with powder, has been kicked over by a much abused toy cannon. It would not make noise enough to please him, so he packed it up to the muzzle and blew himself up. He came down with both eyes badly burned and his right hand terribly lacer-ated, but will probably be patched up in time for another ascension on the giorious A good way to raise contributions for a Fourth of July celebration in Lancaster would be to place small boxes in different parts of the city for voluntary aid to the cause. We think that they would be rapidly filled.

THE West Chester Board of Trade has published "for the benefit of the uninformed and the misinformed" an attrac tive and creditable volume treating of the industrial and commercial resources and the numerous advantages of the borough of West Chester. The book gives evidence of great care and labor in its preparation and has many excellent illustrations from which that of the engine house of the first West Chester fire company is selected for sp cial praise, because it presents with clearness of detail a most elegant specimen of architec-ture. We note that West Chester is stillioted with 35 attorneys, 16 physicians and 3 undertakers, while the clergy are not enumerated. But "the most important suburb of Philadelphia" appears determined to flourish, and there is no reason why it should not with a debt of only $115, 000, a total tax rate of 11% mills and a very substantial, if not enterprising, population.

IT now turns out that Richard Kearney was the man who committed the crime a Estontown, N. J., for which Mingo Jack was lynched. Only on judgment day will it be found how repeatedly the innocen suffer for the guilty when Judge Lynch tries the case.

ALLENTOWN may get a public building after all. The House committee on public buildings and grounds have decide 1 to unar imously recommend that the House pass the Allentown bill over the president's veto. Altoons's $75,000 bill has passed the Senate. If these two Pennsylvania cities should each get a public building, it is hoped that the Republicans of these places will not have so loud and deep a voice in the question of its location as has been manifest in Lancaster.

The Man Who Talks Much.

The Public Building.

There is a very strong reason for not g the public building in one of the at-of the way side streets of Lancaster that has not been given much prominence a the discussion had on this subject. there is a very large number of people living in the townships that lie close to the city who get their mail at the postnos here. The convenience of these They should not be required to go far om the business centre for their letters. The postoffice ought to be so located for as to be easily and quickly found. Take the other side of the question, the sternal revenue feature of the case. ment of the government are chiefly addent beyond the city limits. The city gar factories are far outnumbered by o in the county. So, too, with the intillers. The people who conduct these terprises ought to be kept in view when the selection of a site is made. And to roperly keep them in mind would be to the new building as nearly as posble to the business centre of the city.

Give Them Health.

The time is rapidly drawing near for closing of the schools, and parents re asking themselves what shall be done th the boys. John MacMullen has a by interesting reply to this query in the ane number of the Pennsylvania School al. He wisely says, " First of all, them bealth, for without health, they so nothing." This is the sum and number of admonition. There are a number of trials in store for the a of to-day, and he needs a good body to face and crush them. It flittle avail to the man of the future ble to recall that when he was a t he stood at the head of his s, if the cost of this remains in a chest, frequent headache and a the Cieveland campaign four years ago delivered a great speech in Albany, New York, which more than any utterance of the time stayed the Irish defection from the Democratic ranks. The president felt very grateful to Mr. Collins for his efforts, and is said to have had him in view for a cabinet place ; but the superserviceable zeal of that gentleman's friends by putting the Collins suggestion in the shape of a threat lost the day for the man from Massachusetts. Mr. Collins is an able lawyer, represents one of the Boston districts in the House and is a fit leader of the forces of the young Democracy in New England. His speech will te an able one, and his selection will be pleasing to the large Irish element in the Democratic party of the country. The Tale of a Dog.

FDS. INTELLIGENCEB:-Two Lancaster dailies on Friday evening last contained an exaggerated account, with leaded headingr, of a young man at the lower end of town having been "attacked by mastiffs and badiy bitten" that they were "two large vicious mastifis, the terror of the com-munity"; also "that the brute caught the man by the wrist," making the story almost equal to the untrue one lately furnished by New Jersey. The facts are: One of these dogs is greatly teased by boys outside the fence throwing sticks and stones at him so that he has taken a dislike to boys in general, but has never attacked any one before, although many people, in-cluding tramps, come in the yard daily. For some unknown cause he unfortunately did bite this boy in the yard. The boy was more frightened than hurt, but st-tended to his work the next day. Why no: have : tated the truth ?
