A Great Drawback. The great mass meetings which attend national convention sittings lend them their enthusiasm, but they are a great drawback to the deliberateness of their counsel. A convention of a few hundred members that sits surrounded by ten times as many people, cannot be unaf-fected by their presence, and the feeling of the galleries is relied upon often to influence the action of the delegates. For instance, on the last day of the St. Louis convention there were people in the au-dience who interrupted the proceedings very indecorously with their exclamaons in favor of Gray; and it looked as though there was design in the performance; for Gray was certainly not the choice of the people either in St. Louis or the country. The demonstration was feeble and ineffective; but national conventions should be protected from all such influences. They assemble to record the sentiment of the delegates which may be supposed to be that of the country; and they should be free from the dictation of local and special interests.

There is no way of securing this result but by making the audience small enough to put it under the control of the convention officers. Now there is hardly a pretense of such control ; and there is much space to be filled and so much noise to be overcome, that only the biggestlunged speakers can make themselves heard. The convention hall has necessarily ceased to be a consultation chamber. The principles of the party are not discussed there, but the work of the resolutions committee is taken as it comes from it. The convention hall is only for voting purposes and nominating speeches and brass bands and huzzas. It may be as well that the deliteration shall be done by committees, and no great harm may be done by cutting down convention oratory; but the day may come when a very obnoxious influence may be exercised by the masses that sit around and upon the convention's delegates.

A Base Attack.

Rev. C. H. Pendleton, a Worcester, Mass., clergyman, has started the slander mill in operation against President Cle eland by declaring that the president's life in the White House has been frequently marked by debauchery, and that his fair young wife has been compelled to escape from her husband's brutality by fleeing to New York, and that it was for this reason that Mrs. Folsom went to Europe in post haste. It is difficult to understand the depths of depravity that would inspire such a malicious and base attack upon the domestic life of the foremost husband and wife in the country. If the tongue of slander should ever hold its peace, surely it is fitting that it be silent when the evil mind suggests such base and baseless utterances. We published the omanly and indignant reply of Mrs. Cleveland to these charges on Thursday. It burned with virtuous indignation and should make the guilty author of them squirm like the vile worm that he doubtless is. Mrs. Cleveland writes: " I pity the man of his calling who has been made the tool to give circulation to such wicked and beartless lies. I can wish the women of our country no greater blessing than that their homes and lives may be as happy and their husbands may be as kind, attentive, considerate and affectionate as mine."

If, instead of pity, this clerical scamp was imprisoned, it would be more to the purpose. There is a pathos in President Cleveland's allusion to the vile attack that must go straight to the hearts of all who read it :

I don't believe it is worth that notice. Of course these stories have come to us here, and they have been the subject of constant joking in the house between Miss. Cleveland and myself and with our friends. They are too absurdly false for notice, I think, and I do hate to have my wife's name brought into any discussion. Here yes flash once in a while when these takes are brought to us, and she has several times been on the point of saying something indignant to the public, but I don't believe it is a matter which she or I or our friends ought to notice. I don't believe any one will credit these stories who does not want to do so. Our house has been filled with visitors; many of Mrs. Cleveland's friends have been in it for days and some for weeks at a time; she herself is constantly seen by the public. The little woman does not look like an abused wife, and her young friends know very well that she is a happy wife, for she often wishes themas happy a married life as we have together. No, I will not consent to your writing anything on the matter. I don't believe it is worth that notice. O to your writing anything on the matter.

My wife and I can, I believe, trust to the manly and Christian spirit of our countrymen and women, to whom this malignant persecution and secret poisoning of reputations must surely be odious. Some things we may hold to be too contemptible for notice.

The clergyman who thus wounded bitterly the president and his wife is now most abjectly apologizing, but no amends can take from the poignancy of the stab that was inflicted. He should be despised among men, and among his brethren he should be made to feel the force of the Scriptural injunction: "Woe to him by whom scandal cometh."

An Old Trick. The Philadelphia newspapers are in spired to say that the Reading loan has been a wonderful financial success. The plain fact seems to be that a loan of a hundred million dollars, which is a first lien upon all the Reading property and bearing 4 per cent. interest, has been sold to a syndicate of the leading bankers of the world at a price less than 87} cents on the hundred; that a subscription for a quarter of this amount has been made at 871; being taken as soon as the books were opened. Where the success to the Reading company in this is we do not well see. We ee that it has sold 100 cents for 87 or ; and we see that the people who took the $100,000,000 could very well, in person or by proxy, take $25,000,000 of it over again at any price they chose to name and as quickly as they wanted to. It is an old trick of syndicates with ds to sell, to open subscription books and clap them shut, and shout that the whole load has been taken.

Fighting With Douth.

It is a question whether any mercy is shown to a man stricken as General Sheridan is with a mortal disease, by prolong-ing his life. If the general recovers from the severity of the present attacks of heart failure, he will be always liable to their recurrence, we are told, at any moment, and the strictest regulation of his diet and habits will be necessary to pro-tect his life. It is very doubtful indeed, whether there is any pleasure in living under such constant threatening and such steady restriction. But it is a question about which there is little use in disputing, since it is the nature of man to de sire to live under all circumstances, and if his family desire it for him; and his doctors are appointed to save him whether he will or no. General Sheridan expresse not only a desire but a determination to live. It is the impulse of a nature that is not willing to be beaten even by almighty power. Conkling expressed a like resolution and was wholly unwilling to yield to death. The doctors seem to think that it is a great aid to them to have their patients determined to live; but we note that a great many people who are daily threatening to die, survive those who never contemplate such catastrophe HERE's to the bandanna, the Star Span-gled banner and success in Indiana!

ALICE FISHER Was buried on Tuesday from the almshouse hospital of Philadel-phis, but her funeral was attended by the most eminent and respected citizens and they were honored by that attendance, for Alice Fisher was one of the noblest and greatest of women ; of the kind that the world most honors after they have left it. Through her labors Philadelphia has been given a corps of trained nurses who are justly respected as members of a skilled and highly honorable profession, for by their care many lives are saved that would otherwise be lost through ignorant nursing or no nursing. Medical men have often been warm in their praises of careful nursing, but a good nurse has been regarded as a rare product of nature, and it has been left for a band of earnest and unselfish women like Miss Fisher to prove the possibility of educating nurses just as educate physicians. Of all the new fields opening for woman's work outside of the home circle, not one is better suited to her than this new profession, which for a generation at least will only be chosen by the most unselfish and the best of PRESIDENT CLEVELAND WIll be the eighth American re chosen by his fellow citizens to the chief honor in their gift.

DR. NORMAN KERR, of London, prestdent of the Society for the Study of Inebriety and chairman of the British Medical association of the Habitual Drunkards' legislative committee, read a very interesting paper before the International Congress of Anthropology in New York. He said "Heredity is the most potent cause of those leading to inebriety. Fully one-half of inebriates have had this fatal inheritance handed to them. Inebriate heredity may be direct or indirect. In the direct form there may be an inate tendency to excess in narcotics if these be tampered with, so that there can be no moderation. This direct inebriate predisposition may consist of an overpowering impulse to get drunk, as soon as a sip of an intoxicant arouses the inborn flame. There may be no craving for liquor, but there is an unmistakable unnealthy impulse, difficult to withstand Whether resisted or not, this class of cases is endowed from birth with so strong a proclivity to intoxicants that the slightest application of an exciting cause almost pre cipitates the subject into a paroxysm of ine briate excess. In other cases there seems to be an actual pre-natal craving for intoxi-Dr. Kerr urges that the health history of

WILLIAM BAUMIESTER, a pedestrian has just died in Baltimore of pneumonis contracted during a walk, and his death should be a warning to the men who violate nature's laws for the sake of a little gate money. This man entered for a match at a Baltimore theatre in which it was necessary to walk 450 miles in order to get a share of the gate receipts. He was not a strong man, and was rather stout, but he tried to make up for these defects by his wonderful strength of will, and managed to keep walking until he had made 423 miles, when he broke down completely. He was advised to give up, but insisted upon going on the track again though presenting a most pitiful appearance of exhaustion. When he had completed the $50 miles, he went home, but could neither sleep nor eat, and, sinking rapidly, he died a few days later. He was only thirty years old and left a wife and child and a credible record as a pedestrian. Sensible men will take warning from this that pluck without discretion is more dengerous than valuable. He is a force in public affairs. He has the build of a buildog, the will and force of a leader of men, the resultant and force of a leader of a buildog, the will and force of a leader of men, the readiness and wit of one who was born on his feet and bred in public life. Somebody in Missouri had given vent to the impatience of the multitude over the reading of the interminable list of names, and in the unanimous shout that went up for their omission this Hensel of Fennsylvania saw the opportunity to carry the swarm of men with him farther yet. So he called for the actual work of the convention. He was beset by the conflicting demands of half a dozen would-be leaders. He leaped into the asisle and appeared to walk over opposition as he strode forward pressing his motion. All except the half dozen were with him. He carried his point as in the Western whirls of wind that we read of houses are swept up and borne away.

PHILADELPHIA, Friday, June 8, 1888, Concerning trash. We often tell you that our stocks are never allowed to descend to

What is trash? In general stuff too poor to be of use or service, hence not worth dealing in. For example, imitations of celluloid, frequently advertised as genuine. Plenty of them, fragile and worthless for practical use.

Again, Women's Cotton Hosiery. We offer nothing at less than 25 cents the pair. We could sell a variety of sorts at half that or little more, but they are coarse, loosely woven and lacking in quality, shape, finish, and durability. Is it wise to buy trashy hose at two-thirds the price of creditable goods with double the wear? You know.

And these are hints of our notions on trash.

We have taken over all the Ladies' Jerseys a prominent maker had. You shall have them at sensation prices for such goods. Style, quality, finish the best. We have put them in eight lots:
