The College Man in Journalism. This is the season of the year when many young men are pondering the question what they will follow on leaving school or college.

It is not an easy problem to solve whether either of these two phases of the youthful mind on the threshold of the world is superior to the other.

We have never been in sympathy with the disposition to meet at the college man's first movements in life beyond his alma mater.

Because this experience cannot be acquired except by actual newspaper work, we have never believed in the idea of a chair of journalism in colleges.

The Tammany society of New York will have one of their grand old-fashioned celebrations of the Fourth of July next month.

The Case of Rev. Widdemer. Bishop Whitaker, of the Philadelphia diocese of the Episcopal church, we note, has confirmed the action of the committee who tried Rev. Widdemer, and recommended that he be suspended from his priestly function during the continuance of his "relations" with his present wife.

Gas Boring. We note that some enterprising gentlemen of Mountville, in this county, propose boring for gas in that vicinity; and that other hopeful persons are about to essay the same search in the vicinity of Valley Forge.

Tariff Reform. The Philadelphia Telegraph is one of the ablest of Republican journals and is one of the most fearless in its criticism of the party's methods.

of the tariff, no reduction of the surplus by correcting the tariff, but the surplus is to be reduced—first, by taking the tax from tobacco and partly from whisky, while it is continued on food, clothing and medicine; and, second, by appropriations of the most enormous amounts.

The great majority of the people of this country want a reform in the tariff, and they will not be frightened out of their just demand by a declaration that the Mills bill is a free trade measure.

In the Blaine bag, is once opened, nothing will keep the cat from jumping out.

In 1880, Garfield got no vote on the first ballot and for six times subsequently, he drew nullities. But he got 399 votes on the thirty-sixth ballot.

The annual report of the Pennsylvania hospital for the insane at Philadelphia shows that the number of patients April 23, 1887, was 410, of which 181 were males and 229 females.

The Republicans praise the work of President Arthur in their platform, but have no words of kindness for the Democrats who are carrying it into effect.

We have received the handsome illustrated report of the supervising architect to the secretary of the treasury for the year ending September 30, 1887.

In fact there are a great many instances of the same kind of appropriations for churches, schools, and other public buildings.

FOR INGRESSORS is liable to say most anything these torrid days. Talking to a crowd in Chicago on Friday he used this language: "I would like to see you put upon the next ticket two soldiers who helped to save our country."

EX-MAYOR WILLIAM B. SMITH, of Philadelphia, was robbed in Chicago on Friday of his watch and diamond pin, valued altogether at $1,000.

REV. DR. W. A. LEONARD, rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, of Washington, has declined the bishopric to which he was recently elected in order, as he says, "to avoid any possible complications that might arise as to the jurisdiction of the position."

DRIFT.

I have been gathering a few thoughts on serious topics which it occurs to me might not be uninteresting or unprofitable for Sunday reading and meditation.

The end of all true prayer must be the conformity of man with the divine, and not the opposite.

Every thinking man owes it as a solemn duty to follow up to contribute his share, however small, to the progress of the world and the working out of its problems.

Truth revealed at second hand is indeed better than none at all, as reflected light is better than darkness.

Only this is true love and service of God: to recognize the brotherhood of the divine order everywhere, to become more and more fully acquainted with it, and to care more for its fulfillment and unshaken action than for its own little selfish wishes, intentions and projects.

It is not till we have ourselves labored, struggled and perhaps suffered for our faith in the process of making it a part of our being, that it becomes a personal, living, working conviction in us.

The comparative emptiness of our churches is not a sign of indifference to religion; but a protest of the reverent intelligence of men against its abuse and misappropriation.

We protest against exalting one man of religion into the chief if not the sole end; against ecclesiasticism taking the place of religion itself.

Just as the eternal immutability of God's self is that which on the one hand is manifested as gravitation, whose very intensity constitutes the law which governs all nature, so that same divine immutability manifesting itself on the other hand in the spiritual realm, may itself constitute by its very presence, the laws of intelligence, morality, of Truth, Beauty and Goodness, according to which all spirit is governed.

Immortality: Though we might wish Evolution to be more explicit and clear in the matter, so as not to be so easily misunderstood, and misrepresented, yet will we not blame it therefor so much as the faithless hearts of those who use its silence with their groundless supposition and words of unbelief.

Evolutionary forces are succeeded by chemical, chemical by vital, vital by developed into animal, not by losing any of its higher functions, but by having still higher ones added to it; animal life was graduated into man, not by taking from him what he had, but by adding to him what he had not.

"And then again," broke out Casimir, "what children you are—vicious children, my faith! How could you tell the value of this trash? It might have been worth nothing, or next door."

"At least," resumed the doctor, "I gave my mind to the subject—and you may be willing to believe—and I estimated that our capital would be the find."

"The quality, my dear Casimir, was—And the doctor in default of language, kissed his finger tips."

"Jean-Marie has lived a remarkable existence; his experience has been eminently fortunate," replied Desprez.

"Thieves!" repeated the brother-in-law, with a meditative air.

"Casimir turned to the others with pursed lips, and nodded to them meaningly. 'Hey!' said he, 'how is that?'"

"Jean-Marie is a teller of the truth," returned the doctor, throwing out his bust.

"'You know where it was put?' resumed the inquisitor."

"'You say you have been a thief before,' continued Casimir. 'Now I am to know that you are not one still! I suppose you could climb the green gate?'"

"'Well, then, it was you who stole those things. You know it, and you dare not deny it. Look me in the face! Raise your sneaky eyes!'"

"'But in paying anything for that sort Jean-Marie broke into a dismal howl and fled from the arbor. Anastasia, as she pursued to capture and reassure the victim, found time to send one Partisan arrow—'Casimir, you are a liar!'"

"'My brother,' said Desprez, with the greatest dignity, 'you take upon yourself a license—'"

"'Well,' returned the doctor, 'I grant that; I will even thank you for your mistaken zeal. But your hypothesis was so extravagantly monstrous—'"

"'Look here,' interrupted Casimir, 'was it you or Stasie?'"

"'Certainly not,' answered the doctor. 'Very well; then it was the boy. Say no more about it, said the brother-in-law, and he produced his cigar case."

"'I will say this much more,' returned Desprez: 'if that boy came and told me so himself I should not believe him; and if I did believe him, so implicit is my trust I should conclude that he had acted for the best.'" forgiven him—it is not his nature, it is the nature of his life. A man who deals with money, my dear, is a man lost."

"'But this inhibition,' said the doctor, 'this embargo—it cannot possibly apply to me!'"

"'To all of us,' Anastasia assured him. 'My cherished one,' Desprez protested, 'you must not say that! It cannot apply to me. He would naturally come to me.'"

"'Henri,' she said, 'it does; I swear to you it does.'"

"'This is a painful, a very painful circumstance,' the doctor said, looking a little black. 'I cannot affect, Anastasia, to be anything but justly wounded. I feel this, I feel it, my wife, acutely.'"

"'I know you would,' she said. 'But if you had seen his distress! We must make allowances, we must sacrifice our feelings.'"

"'And you will let me go and tell him that you have agreed? It will be like your noble nature,' she cried."

"'So it would, he would feel—it would be like his noble nature,' she said. 'Go, darling, he said nobly, 'reassure him. The subject is buried; more—I make an effort, I have accustomed myself to the appearance of our visionary fortune; let us have a second to console us for its occupation. The third I hereby dedicate to Jean-Marie's wedding.'"

"'I bought medicine in thirteen states, but nothing helped me till I used Ely's Cream Balm. In four days I could bear as well as ever. I am cured of the rheumatism. It is the best medicine ever used—Garrett Widtack, Hastings, N. Y.'"

"'I could scarcely speak; it was almost impossible to breathe through my nostrils. Using Ely's Cream Balm a short time, the trouble entirely disappeared. O. T. Tichenor, Shoe Merchant, Elizabeth, N. J.'"

"'I have never told a lie,' added madame. 'He is the best of boys.' 'If I had to choose an education for my son, I should have chosen such another. Beginning life with mountebanks and thieves, passing onward to the society and friendship of philosophers—may be said to have summed the volume of human life.'"

"'Thieves!' repeated the brother-in-law, with a meditative air. 'The doctor could have bitten his tongue out. He felt that what was coming, and prepared his mind for a vigorous defense.'"

"'Did you ever steal yourself?' asked Casimir, turning suddenly on Jean-Marie, and for the first time employing a single eyelash to emphasize his words."

"'Yes, sir,' replied the boy, with a deep blush. 'Casimir turned to the others with pursed lips, and nodded to them meaningly. 'Hey!' said he, 'how is that?'"

"'Jean-Marie is a teller of the truth,' returned the doctor, throwing out his bust. 'He has never told a lie,' added madame. 'Never told a lie, has he not?' reflected Casimir."

"'Strange, very strange. Give me your attention, my young friend,' he continued. 'You know about this treasure?'"

"'Desprez, I ask you nothing but to hold your tongue,' returned Casimir. 'I mean to question this stable boy of yours; and if you are so certain of his innocence, you can afford to let him answer for himself. Now, sir,' he resumed, pointing his eyelashes straight at Jean-Marie, 'you know it could be stolen with impunity? You know you would not be prosecuted? Come! Did you, or did you not?'"
