

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

NOW METROPOLITAN LADIES DRESS AT THE SHORE

Name of Their Costumes Are Somewhat Startling, but Society Doesn't Care.

Summer Dresses for Dry Land Wear. Points About Summer Bonnets.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, July 5.

THE summer the old ladies in the park. Take to drinking tea.

And the younger women's fashions. Lightly sun to thoughts of sun.

They don't know who would blame them if the weather is as warm as it is in New York.

The latest agonies in bathing toilets, they are wearing at Newport, Long Branch, Narragansett and Cape Cod.

There are new hats and bonnets, however, and for those who have still a lingering sense of the eternal fitness of things.

There are new hats and bonnets, however, and for those who have still a lingering sense of the eternal fitness of things.

Very few are wearing the old-fashioned hats of white flannel or serge very elaborately trimmed and embroidered.

One had worked in oak thread with silver accents upon it. It had a gold chain belt, and with it were worn gold bracelets, and the sandals were laced with gold cord.

The Newport and Narragansett Pier bathers consider themselves better than any others who resort to the sea.

ACTORS AND WRITERS.

GOSSIP ABOUT TWO CLASSES OF SO CALLED BOHEMIANS.

The Wages of Actors—Is Acting a Healthy Occupation?—Prices of High Kitchens.

Historical Collections—Money in Drama.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, July 5.—I chatted last night with one of the leading theatrical managers of the United States.

The subject of actors' salaries came up, and the manager told me they are on the increase. "All classes of persons connected with the stage," said he, "are getting higher salaries now than they have ever had before."

"Some are, but not many. I don't think more than one-third of the management have come out ahead during the past year, and that is not a very encouraging prospect."

"How about the ballet?" "The high kickers are, of course, paid well, but the ordinary ballet waltz flower gets hardly enough to support herself."

"I met Professor N. E. Dawson yesterday. He is the man who acted as Grant's private secretary during the writing of his book, and it was to him that I got the following account of the life of the man who acted as Grant's private secretary during the writing of his book."

"Some days ago the manager of a panorama in this city sent some 'scholar' tickets to the principals of the grammar school, on presentation of which the pupils would be admitted for twenty-five cents each."

"Well," said an undertaker, "I'm not much of a fighter, but when it comes to boxing I can easily lay out any man."

"I don't think it is," said the undertaker. "I don't think it is," said the undertaker. "I don't think it is," said the undertaker.

"The queen of England's grandson, George Collins and Cuffs, is in Liverpool. He was dancing at a ball recently with a pretty but plebeian partner."

MARY JANE'S LETTER.

SHE DESCRIBES A HERDIC PARTY AT THE CAPITAL.

The Corcoran and His Fondness for the Washington Girls.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, July 5.—I have before now referred, in my blithesome and winning manner, to the inebriated popularity of the Herdics.

"I have seen several Herdics, Corcoran, Corcoran, and other blood diseases heretofore considered incurable. It cures any disease caused from impure blood."

THE CLIMAX OF GOOD FORM.

If your real swells want to be really English they must carry their respective left hands buried to the wrist in their respective left trousers pockets.

When Building a Theatre. The latest English writer on theatres holds that a theatre should be ten feet high at the rear of the stage.

Mechanical Curiosities. Among the recent mechanical curiosities are a scarf pin with a bird's head.

Laws Against Luxury. The laws of Lycourges, promulgated about 350 B. C., were severe against luxury.

Where Are Theobald's Fortunes? The name of Theobald, formerly king of Burmah, has almost passed into oblivion so far as the general public is concerned.
