THE CHURCH BELLIGERENT. Dirgraceful Quarrel in & Reading Church

After the Communion Service.

After the communion service in the First Presbyterian church, Reading, on Sunday, great excitement was caused by an alteres great excitement was caused by an alterea-tion between the organist, Professor Bow-ers, who is one of the adhereuts of the pas-tor, Rev. James L. Leeper, and John Jones, a prominent member of the anti-Leeper faction. Organist Bowers was charged with having been bought by the Leeperlies, and in the war of words which followed he threatened to knock Mr. Jones down. Per-sons who were pear say that the latter, was sons who were near say that the latter was called "a hump-backed old hypocrite," but Professor Bowers' statement is that he said if Mr. Jones was not a decrepit old man rolescot Powers was not a decrepited man he would knock him down.

Members of the congregation interposed and prevented a breach of the peace, but the fight was taken up by a number of ladies, who would not be silenced. The scene is described as having been disgraceful in the extreme. A number of the anti-Leeperites were in church on Sunday for the first time in many months to participate in the annual communion, so as not to lose their membership, and this gave rise to the disturbance in the congregation. Notwithstanding the split in the church, twenty-seven persons were received into membership on Sunday. Several new lawnuits will probably be added to those already pending, all arising out of the feud.

Death of Harry B. Shank. Harry B. Shank, the well-known shirtmaker, died Sunday at his residence, No. 236 West Orange street, in the 43d year of his age, of consumption, from which had been a sufferer for several years. He was an energetic business man until failing health compelled him to retire. He carried on in this city and also in Pittsburg and other places, and bere the reputation of being an upright and honorable business man. He had large acquaintance in Lancaster, and leaves a wife and family to mourn his death. His funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the house, and at 2 o'clock at the Old Mennonite church, near Millersville, where the interment will be made. A special car will be run on the Millersville road for the accommodation of friends.
