Tae Mills bill has passed the Demo eratic House with practically a solid Democratic vote against a solid Republican vote ; the issue having already been made a party one by the action of the political conventions, such crystallization of the vote in Congress was to be looked for. The few Republicans who voted for the bill and the few Democrats who voted against it undoubtedly did so from honest conviction, since their political interests and prejudices would have led them a different way; but that their judgment is superior to that of the great majority of their party associates is not at all to be presumed. Mr. Randall and Mr. Sowden are men of great force and determination of mind, and found themselves unable to yield their convictions to those of their party associates upon a question of political economy. If they did not think with them, they could not be expected to vote with them. Upon this issue they have placed themselves apart from their party; but they have not necessarily ceased to be Democrats. They are not Republicans certainly; and doubtless would be more unable to agree with a tariff bill of the Republican majority than with that of the Democratic majority. Though the tariff issue has been made the most prominent one in this campaign, it is not the chief issue involved in the question as to whether the Democratic administration shall be retained in power. The record it has made in practical government is wholly outside that which it makes upon tariff reform; there is abundant opportunity for the highest of tariff men to continue in Democratic fellowship in this contest, and none supposes that such old and reliable Democratic leaders as Kandall and Sowden will need to search for any other political fold. The tariff issue is a peculiar one, and there has never been unanimity of sentiment upon it in either political party. We approach it closer now than we ever have before; and it is because the Mills bill drops all pretension of free trade, and is made up to give due protection to all the manufacturing interests of the country. The additions of raw materials. which it makes to the free list, are directly for the benefit of the manufacturgenerally offset any reduction of duty made upon manufactures. No such reductions are made, or at least none are intended to be made, that will cripple any industry. The idea has been to give adequate protection to all existing industries, and we believe that it has been done. The Democrats who voted against the bill must believe that in important particulars it has not been done; for surely they should not ask more than adequate protection for manufacturers.

This is the Republican demand and with it we believe no Democrat can have sympathy. Super-abundant protection simply affords opportunity for combination of capital to control the home production; and such monopolies have always had the opposition of Mr. Randall and of Mr. Sowden. They have always been tribunes of the people; and the error they now fall into is one of the head and not of the heart. We believe that they do err in believing that the Mills bill will do damage to any manufacturing

It is generally a good and logical bill, topping off only excessive duties and not increasing the free list as much as it should, for coal and the ores of all metals might well be added to it, as raw materials of manufacture. The admission of cotton ties without duty seems to be the only illogical provision of importance in the bill. It was done in the interest of the cotton producer; and though there does not seem to be any reason why cotton ties more than nails should be free, the concession made was not a very serious one to gratify the demand of so important a production of the country.

The measure on the whole is one that may be very strongly defended, and can be but weakly assaulted; especially by a party that has been able to agree upon no other measure that will set off against it. The Republicans occupy a very weak position before the country in practically confessing that they cannot agree upon a tariff bill. Against the Democratic party, presenting a great front for a measure passed by the almost unanimous Democratic House, is opposed a party that disagree with the Democratic position without being able to agree upon its own. It is not a position of dignity and strength. There is a situation confronting the country that must be met; it is the necessity of reducing revenue and taxation. This is conceded; and if the Democratic plan of reduction is bad, it can only be shown by the presentation of a better plan. Free whisky will not do for the Republican party campaign horse; and yet that is the animal they are astride, if they cannot agree upon a plan of tariff reduction.

Stecks and Values. If stocks and values generally do not go down upon the passage of the Mills bill in the House, Republican editors and politicians will be greatly disappointed. The cessation of business activity during this year has been confidently charged to the tariff agitation; and if the medicine does not continue to work the same way right up to the election, there will be a nut for our Republican editors to crack and tell us why this is thus. We are of opinion that there will be a steady improvement in trade and values from now on. We might claim that it has been caused by the Mills bill, since the movement will date from the passage of that measure in the House. We are not inclined, however, to think that this has had such prompt effect. The measure is so innocent of offense to the manufacturing industry thas the final settlement of its provisions has probably had a reassuring effect upon manufacturers who have been alarmed by the cry that the Democratic party proposed free trade. To this extent the measure may be responsible for the better feeling now manifest in trade circles. But this is the season of the year when the appearance of the customary autumn activity in business begins to be felt, and the signs of improvement now are doubtless due chiefly to the preparation being made to the fall business

Passage of the Mills Bill. We present to-day a review of the Mills bill in its amended state as it passed the House finally on Saturday. It is essentially the same measure that was introduced in the House months ago, the changes in it not affecting its primary principle of promoting the prosperity of the masses without impairing the earning power of the workman or manufacturer. The difference between the wages in this country and wages abroad is kept always in view, and the changes in duties are made with strict reference thereto. It is not a free trade measure, and the effort by the Republicans to show it such is bound to prove ineffective. Any one who reads it will see that the average reduction in the entire bill is only about seven per cent. from present duties. Articles such as wool, copper ore and lumber are placed upon the free list, but this is done to enable American manufacturers to get materials that are essential to their manufactured products at lowest cost : which will have the effect of stimulating manufactures by taking off the tariff incubus and at the same time reducing to the workingman the prices that he pays for necessaries.

It is a bill for the relief of the country from unnecessary taxation, and it is certain to receive the indorsement of the people at the polls in November.

THE Democratic leaders are confident of carrying New Jersey, which is good midsummer news.

WE have seen considerable base ball slang, but this from the Binghamton Leader, in description of a game, leads the list : " The fee then took a hack at the lumber, but they went out in a cluster."

GEORGE ALFRED TOWNSEND IS to write the authorized campaign biography of Levi P. Morton to accompany General Lew Wal-lace's life of Harrison. "Gath's" fame as a fact stretcher will be very available for this

THE New York Press makes an attack upon Colonel Lamont for alleged professional knavery as a lawyer. The Press has started in to do the dirty work in this ampaign.

THE irrepressible cadet of our government schools still manages to keep himself before the public by his scandalous conduct. Several young men at Annapolis are now undergoing a court-martial for hazing a cadet named Payne. This young man was made to stand on his head, chew candle grease, eat paper and go through s number of equally disagreeable perform acces. This kind of action in children might be excusable, but when it is practiced by young men who are expected some day to be a defense to their country, the great are of justice should be called into requisition, and it should fall where the offense lies.

Down with the notion that the Mills bill means free trade. It leaves the average duty at 40 per cent higher than it was under the Morrill tariff of 1862, higher than the Republicans proposed to leave it in

THE Atlantic Monthly takes a reseate view of American politics when it says that " there is evidence of an increasing number of men who take the liveliest possible interest in politics, not as a game, not for the sake of increasing their own power, nor for securing places either for themselves or for their friends, but because, as they have clearer conscicusness of their political nature -and the whole movement of American history has been toward the development of this consciousness—they take a keener interest in politics as an expression of human thought, as an element in large prof lame."

NERVOUS HEADACHES.

The Nerves

Eomberg says "that neurals is the prayer of the nerves for healthy blood." This is equally true of every form of nervous disease. If the blood is in a normal condition the nervous system receives from it the attength its functions require. Hence the all-important functions require. Hence the all-important question of the purification of the blood again impresses itself upon us. A moment of careful thought enables us to realize why Hood's Sarasparilla by its power to purify the blood produces cures in a great variety of diseases to an extent hitherto unknown.

"When I began taking Hood's Faraparilla I was confined to the bed nearly all the time. Now I am up the best part of the day, have a better appetite than for five years, and am not nearly so nervous as I have been." Mrs. Ann A. Haller, Nicetown, Philadelphia.

Nervous Headaches

"I have been for years a great sufferer from nervous headache of an unumally severe type I have tried a great many remedies, but never found any relief till I began to use Hood's Sar saparilla. Before the second bottle was gone my headaches were not so severe nor so fre-quent. I am just beginning the fourth bottle and have not felt so well for years. The con-fused dizzy feeling in the head is absolutely gone, and my general health is wonderfully improved. I write tels, hoping it may induce some other sufferer like myself to try this in-valuable medicine." Mrs. W. S. Cartwright, Shelter Island, Suffolk Co., N. Y.
