LACTATED FOOD.

Mr. Florence Reichwender, in Philadelphia on Saturday, shot William B. Greismer, wounding him in the left breast, and then committed suicide by cutting his throat. It was ascertained by police that Greismer and the woman had been living together as man and wife for nearly a year. At 11 a. m. he went out and did not return until just before dinner time. As soon as he passed over the threshold and closed the door behind him Florence burst forth in a violent tirade against him. He fled but she would not let him go. In a moment she returned with the look of a demon in her face. From beneath her apron she drew a rusty seven-shooting revolver, and putting it directly at Greismer's head, pulled the trigger. The weapon was discharged and the ball passed into Greismer's side. She fell at the foot of the stairs. Then Florence placed the revolver to her right temple and fired. The bullet, but in vain. Finding that the weapon would not explode another cartridge. Florence returned to her bedroom, and taking Greismer's razor from the drawer, went to the stairs over the prostrate form on the floor. At the bottom of the stairs she drew the edge of the razor across her throat, cutting a gash extending from ear to ear. She fell on her side and died before the neighbors had been able to effect an entrance in response to the report of the revolver.

Greismer was a conductor on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and was in the employ of the same at the time of the tragedy. He was a native of Pennsylvania, and was married to a woman who had come to Philadelphia to take up her residence with him. The woman wrote a letter on the previous day, indicating her intention, and giving directions for the disposition of her property. Greismer was not expected to recover, and his decomposition was taken Sunday night by Magistrate Thompson.

In the Amusing Comedietta of "Fed Up." Sir Charles Colclough, a blame man of fashion, is made to deprecate everything in which he is engaged. He is made to say that he is "fed up" with the world, and that he is "fed up" with everything that he does. He is made to say that he is "fed up" with his wife, his children, his friends, and his country. He is made to say that he is "fed up" with everything that he does, and that he is "fed up" with everything that he is.

Y., says: "Recommended as a cure for chronic Colic, Ayer's Pills have relieved me from that trouble and also from GOUT. It is every victim of this disease would find these pills of mine, for they are the best in the world. These words would be 'Try Ayer's Pills'."
