Bad Luck Attends Him.

The Republican intent to have Mr. Blaine's arrival upon his native shore give a boom to their canvass was good enough, but the amount of execution done by the event has not come up to expectation. The gun was fired too soon; it would have been better if Mr. Blaine had appeared after the canvass had got under headway and the excitement had got to a pitch where his magnetic presence could have added to it; and of course it would have been much more satisfactory if the preparations made to meet him had been rewarded with his presence at the hour set for his coming. It is a bad thing for a wedding march when the bridegroom tarries, even though it be not his fault, but that of some bursted engine that was relied on to bring him up to time. There is always a flavor of blasted hopes about such a disappointment, and people incline to suspect that bad luck in the future is bound to attend so poor a beginning. The like impression fastens upon the unfortunate inauguration of a political campaign.

Mr. Blaine has not yet done anything to set his party on its legs in this canvass; he did not give happiness and unity to the nominating convention, and did not turn up at the big parade prepared for the welcome home again. It may not have been his fault, but only his and party's misfortune; and both care more for misfortune than for fault.

Cleveland's luck is the great shadow upon Republican expectation; and on top of it they have the bad luck that Blaine manages to bring them. They were defeated under these influences once and do not seem to have reason now for a lively hope that they have been dispelled.

All that Mr. Blaine offers them as the buoy of their salvation is the demand for the imposition of such tariff duties as will prevent the importation of a pound of anything that can be produced in this country. This is the Republican plan for reducing the tariff revenue; and is simple enough to be comprehended and silly enough to be rejected by every intelligent voter. The only other thing that was said by Mr. Blaine to his countrymen in the first speech he has made upon his return from Europe, was that the greatest interest was felt in that region in the political battle here, and that the Democratic party had all the foreign sympathy. This statement having been cabled across the ocean has met with a prompt and clear denial by the English newspapers, which declare that little interest is taken in our political struggle, and that no benefit or injury to European trade is expected from it. Mr. Blaine is not at all above making a misrepresentation to effect a political object. His statesmanship is not on a high plane, and his character not on a higher one.

The National Ass.

Americans feel most keenly the sting of truth in the common criticism of our social economy, that snobbery and flunkeyism are as rank and offensive in certain parts of this republic as they are in England, and although we have the consolation that it is only in the cities that an aristocracy seeks to establish itself on the false basis of wealth and birth, we cannot be blind to the fact that this idea of caste, so foreign to democratic theory and practice, is gathering strength. There is, particularly in New England, a disposition to ask the name of a man's great grandfather rather than to inquire as to his intellectual standard, refinement and character, and the nation is greatly in need of a Dean Swift to hold this idea up to ridicule. The fact that the son of a man of note sometimes inherits his mental and moral strength, as well as education and wealth, is not broad enough for the foundation of an aristocracy within a republic. The only one that can exist, and escape the hate and scorn of the people, must be founded solely on the worth of the man. Though hereditary and inherited advantages may secure the guinea stamp of social rank more easily for some, this advantage should only stimulate worthy men to rise without it and wherever American society is in a healthy condition those who so rise are received with a cordial recognition, and nobility of character is the only patent of nobility that is really respected.

Where any other standard exists the sting of this comment from Life will be keenly felt: "It is due to the strange paradox that, while we admit the superiority of the American idea, we refuse to follow it to a conclusion, that we have made a national ass of ourself."

Prevent an Epidemic.

Yellow fever so close to us as Jacksonville is not pleasant. In three days of great and quick inter-communication it must always be alarming to find an epidemic on our shores. It was long since yellow fever has caused many apprehension. In the ante-bellum days it was a yearly visitor to the Gulf cities, whose people became used to it, and those of Northern birth went there with the understanding that they had to become acclimated to it. It may be because of better sanitary arrangements, or of changes in commercial movements, that yellow fever has become a less frequent visitor to Southern cities. It evidently has not left them permanently, and it may be here again. There is no foretelling where its seeds may not be carried. The quarantine regulations seem to be promptly taken, but they cannot be certainly preventive while railroad trains run and carry mails and passengers. It behooves the authorities of every city to put their town in order, and its cleanliness may defeat the spread of an epidemic that may possibly find lodgment in it.

French Spoliation Claims.

The final vote on the measure for the payment of French spoliation claims will come up before the House an early date, and will probably meet with much opposition on the old ground that the claims are for damages consequent upon a state of war, and are, therefore, invalid.

It suited the United States to consider these claims valid in its settlement with France, when both nations closed accounts on the ground that there had been no war. This question has been threshed over so often in the generations since the settlement, and the justice of the claim on the government has been so firmly established that it seems strange men can be found in Congress to oppose payment.

That the original claimants are represented by great-grandchildren should have nothing to do with the case, for we should eagerly embrace every opportunity to erase the stains upon national honor left by the generation that has also left us so splendid a heritage of history and law.

The nation is in the position of a trustee who, after making a settlement for heirs, postponed payment to them on the ground of his own poverty. Now we are rich, and varied fortunes have followed the victims of our neglect, but we are equally bound to settlement with all who can prove their claim. If the claims are not good, our settlement with France on the basis of their equity was fraudulent, and we are bound in honor to correct it. This is the absurd extreme confronting the opponents of the proposed settlement.

THE monitor Terror appears to be a terror to those who have charge of her. She sailed from League Island to the Brooklyn navy yard last week to get a new pair of turrets, and soon after starting Engineer Bowers slipped from the platform of the engine room and fell into the machinery, narrowly escaping death. The engines were stopped and he was taken out severely wounded about the legs. In Delaware bay the tug Nina, which was towing the Monitor, ran aground and would have been torn to pieces by the rush of the war ship if the man at the wheel had not acted promptly. As it was the tug was damaged slightly. The heat in the fire room of the Terror all the time she was under way was 180 degrees.

A FLAW in the representative apportionment bill passed by the last legislature has been discovered. New Ringgold, a borough in Schuylkill county, is not included in a representative district, and the voters there cannot vote for a member of the legislature. New Ringgold borough was originally a portion of East Brunswick township, but it was set off from the latter in 1880 and created into a borough. Under the law it continued as a part of the Third legislative district of Schuylkill county, because East Brunswick township was made a part of the district under the apportionment act of 1874. When the new bill was passed at the last session New Ringgold borough should have been placed in some one of the four districts of that county. It was evidently the intention of the framers of the bill to place it in the old Third district, where contiguous townships and boroughs are located, but it was omitted entirely, and now the voters of the borough want to know what is to be done about it.

Some lawyers contend that the omission of this borough impairs the validity of the bill as it now stands. It is suggested that the supreme court can convene, consider the intent of the legislature and assign the borough to its old district. The matter will be placed before the governor, and it may be possible that an extra session of the legislature will have to be called to remedy what is now considered a serious defect in the law. The last legislature has a history for errors which probably was never as marked in previous sessions. The blunder in the revenue bill was the one of most magnitude.

THE arrival last week of some two hundred small children of New York at the Chambersburg station strongly impressed the people of that good city with the merit of the fresh air idea which is being applied on a small but steadily increasing scale in several of the large cities. Any one who has noted the misery of the little wretches who are obliged to pass the warmest days of summer in the stifling, dusty and unhealthy atmosphere of the poorer quarters of New York or Philadelphia, will appreciate the charity of the plan that gives some of them a two weeks' stay in the country.

The country people are usually eager to receive these little people, and the cost of sending away a large number is relatively small. Most of them know nothing of the open country, having lived in city streets from infancy, and the Chambersburg Valley Spirit tells of one boy of six, who exclaimed when he saw a flock of very young chickens, "Why, they have no clothes on."

This charity has the double advantage of appealing to kind hearted people of both city and country, and there are enough to give all the city children a taste of nature in the summer. It is an idea worthy of development on a more liberal scale, and the Tribune and other metropolitan journals are pushing it forward nobly in New York, having planned this and another invasion of Franklin county.

PERSONAL.

CHARLES CROCKER, the railroad million aire, is dying of diabetes at his home in Monterey, California.

SENATOR MCDONALD, of Toronto, is at the head of the largest dry goods house in Canada and is also a Methodist preacher.

CARL SCHURZ is said to be writing a book of reminiscences covering his marvelous career while yet a youth, in Europe, and afterwards the experiences and achievements of his maturer years in public life in the United States.

NICHOLAS MURPHY, a watchman at a Boston wharf for five years past, has during that time saved the lives of 100 persons who have fallen overboard. On Saturday his employers presented him with a gold-headed cane. He had previously received a silver medal from the Massachusetts Humane society.

GENERAL SAUSSIER, governor of Paris, has won the praise of all law-abiding Frenchmen. This general has the quiet, dogged determination and strength of character of General Grant. He has twice saved Paris from a revolution—once during the presidential election last autumn and again during the past week of strikes and communist threats and swagger—and to-day General Saussier is the most popular man in France.

MRS. SARAH ROBINSON, the oldest female resident in the state of Maryland, is dead. Had she lived until the 15th of next February, she would have reached the age of 100 years. Mrs. Robinson retained all her faculties up to the time of her death, and could remember distinctly many events that happened in the last century. She passed the most of her time in the last fifteen years knitting stockings for her numerous progeny. Not since the day she settled in Hartford county has Mrs. Robinson left her adopted home. She never saw a railroad nor a steamboat, and died in the house she entered as a bride.

MRS. LANGTRY is a millionairess, George Keogh, her late manager, says that if she were to cash in to morrow on her real estate alone she would realize something in the neighborhood of $800 000, and this she owes altogether to her own shrewdness in speculating. When she plays in a town that she sees is a thriving town she invests in real estate. It doubles its value in a few years, and she holds on to it. That is the secret of her accumulation of wealth. During her visit to Salt Lake City in 1887 she purchased ten acres of land, paying $5,000 for them. When she returned in 1888 she refused $8,000, a pretty good rise. In the latter year she bought something like 45,000 acres of land in California, paying $80,000 for the lot. She has since declined an offer of $200,000 for the property. Since her purchase a railroad has been run through the heart of the property.

KING MILAN, of Servia, is a most despicable creature. Some years ago he went to Vienna for a brief stay, and on the first night of his visit he lost £24,000 at the Nobles' club. The money had to be paid within 24 hours, and as the amount was not within his reach, he went to the palace and requested a loan from the emperor, who gave him the money on condition that he would not play again, and yet, the very next night he was found at the table, and did not rise until £8,000 more had gone. No application could be made this time to the emperor, so Milan raised the amount on the security of a splendid jeweled cimeter, his most valuable hereditary possession, which had been presented to the late Prince Milosch by the Emperor Nicholas. This cimeter has never been redeemed, and it is now in the possession of Herr Bleichroder, the Berlin banker.

Tarred, Feathered and Whipped.

Frank Phillips was arrested at Shenandoah, Iowa, last Friday, for committing a criminal assault on a little daughter of F. J. Price. The affair created great excitement, and later in the evening the prisoner was taken from the jail by a large mob, who covered him with a coat of tar and feathers and horsewhipped him. He was rescued by officers and taken back to jail, but displayed a defiant spirit. He was again taken by the mob, who strung him up to a telephone pole and made him confess the crime, when he was released and invited to leave, which invitation he accepted with as much alacrity as his condition would permit.

A Pleased Old Lady.

From the Epoch.

Old Lady (to elderly bride on wedding trip)—That young man who just went into the smokin' car seems wery fond o' you, ma'am.

Elderly Bride—Ah, yes, John loves me most dearly!

Old Lady—It does my old heart good to see such affection these days; is he the only son ye got, ma'am?

A Spartan Heroism

Is often exhibited by a delicate woman during the extraction of teeth. But why not save them in time, with SOZODONT, and thus obviate the necessity of taxing one's fortitude? The tenants of the mouth, are far more likely to remain and do go service, if this sovereign protective is used as a safeguard against this untimely destruction. The experience and evidence of hosts of people, proves this sanatory fact. F,M,W&w

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Almost a Wreck

It is often the case that a person gets into a run down condition, the cause of which it is almost impossible to determine. From a weakened system and impure blood, more and more serious disorders appear, until the constitution breaks down and some definite powerful disease gains a firm hold. When that tired feeling comes on it should be overcome at any cost; Hood's Sarsaparilla should be taken to revive the declining powers, restore the appetite and vitalize the blood.

"I feel it my duty to tell what I think of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I was in a very poor state of health for several months; for four weeks I was unable to work, and nothing seemed to be what I needed. My appetite was poor, I could not sleep, had headache a great deal, pains in the small of the back, my bowels did not move regularly. Why! I seemed almost a complete wreck. In this condition I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in a short time it did me so much good that I feel

Like a New Man

I can't begin to tell all the good it did me. My pains and aches are relieved, my appetite improved. Had I realized how much good a single bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla would do me, I would gladly have paid ten dollars for it. I say to others who need a good medicine, try Hood's Sarsaparilla and see." GEORGE F. JACKSON, Roxbury Station, Conn.
