An Announcement.

The one-fourth interest in the INTEL LIGENCER establishment owned by Richard M. Reilly, for the past two years an editor of the paper, has been sold and transferred by him to A. J. Steinman and C. S. Foltz, who with Robert Clark were his partners. Mr. Reilly will on September 1 enter the hardware firm of Reilly Bros. & Raub, successors to A. C. Kepler, at Nos. 40 and 42 North Queen street, this city.

Quite Intolerable.

It is quite intolerable that there should be two gauges of street railroads in the city ; one is bad enough ; two are unendurable, and we do not believe they will be found in any city. It is the duty of councils to see that the gauge of the railways is uniform. If there are any complications because of concessions al-ready made, the cost of untangling them may fall on the city. The Millersville road claims, we believe, the right to put down Trails, and to run freight cars over its tracks; it may claim the right to draw them with steam engines. We do not know what lack of wisdom on the part of the city authorities in the past may have warranted such extravagant claims. We have not examined the question, but it is never safe to say what has been the depth of councilmanic folly. It is possible that the city cannot direct the Miliersville company to change its rails or gauge without paying the cost of the work. But if the city railway that desires to make the connection is willing to pay this cost, as it should be, there should be smple power in the city to direct the work to be done within the city limits. If the Millersville railway wants to keep its present gauge outside the city it can do so, or it can change it at its own cost. The city surely is not bound to permit a gauge to be maintained on its streets that has become a nulsance. If the Millersville company had possessed enough public spirit in the outset to make their gauge to the tread of wagons and to put down flat rails that wagons could use, it would be entitled to more consideration. But it intentionally laid a track that wagons could not use, with the avowal that it would thus save the wear of its iron rail, and any loss it can be put to now for its mean ness will be a just retribution.

Rennblican Testitutions

to know the damaging effect upon the Republican canvass of a declaration that the president and the people have no business to interfere with the trusts, which are so obnoxious to the public sense of right. Mr. Blaine does not know whether they are altogether right or wrong, but considers them entitled to be let alone. So do not the people think; and it is hardly conceivable that Mr. Blaine's long absence from currents of sentiment has left him completely at sea as to public sentiment upon so interesting and live a topic. If absence has such effect upon the judgment of so astute a politician as Blaine, it will be advisable for the politicians hereafter to stay at home; or to keep their mouths shut after they get bome until they can catch on to the popular impulses.

We incline to account for Mr. Blaine's rashness of declaration about trusts by the supposition that he is not particularly solicitous for Harrison's election, and would prefer to keep the Republican party in his own hands, where it seems to be fairly lodged at present. He, instead of Harrison, is looked upon as its leader. He gives the party its cues, and its other leaders seem grateful to him for taking it upon his shoulders. It may be otherwise, however, if he continues to show such evidence as he has shown lately that its success in this election is not his prime consideration. Matthew Stanley Quay, who has not been fond of Blaine, can hardly be more fond of him now that he finds him so poor an aid to the success of the canvass. Maliciously or stupidly, he has been a very bull in the Republican china shop. When he loads on to Mr. Quay the need of defending the virtue of trusts he lays upon him more than he knows that he can bear. And the Republican newspaper organs know it. None of them have found courage to applaud Mr. Blaine's views. They doubtless think a great deal better of them than they care to publicly declare. There is no doubt that Mr. Blaine expressed the real feeling of the mass of Republican leaders when he deprecated interference with trusts. They are Republican institutions; and are naturally upheld by men who want excessive tariff taxation to protect their interests. But the polilicians know too well the popular an-Sipathy to trusts to say a word in their favor in a political canvass. Mr. Blaine is reputed to be the smartest of politicians; and unless we attribute to him a stupidity and ignorance which is not characteristic of him, we have ground for suspicion that he is thinking a good d al less of Harrison's election than of Baine's political future, to which it would bode no good.

Chance Acquaintances.

We read in a Philadelphia morning ne vspaper a harrowing tale of how one C. F. Anderson has been playing the villain at seaside resorts by deceiving susceptible young women, and causing them to believe that he was ready to die for love of them. Anderson is married, which made his infamy all the worse. One of the your g women who was badly colved by his misrepresentations, naively said that she thought Anderson was a proper enough acquaintance, be-cause she had been presented to him by the clerk at the eminently respectable hotel at which she was being entertained. Therein the young woman made a most egregious blunder. And when she gets to be a few years older she will learn the reason why. It is pretty safe to say that the man who is anxious to meet a woman in a hotel, and who uses a hotel clerk as the medium of acquaintanceship, is either an incipient or full-fledged scoundrel. And if young women could only be made to realize this fact to the fullest extent, there would be less villains of the Anderson type. It by no means follows that a well dressed man at a fashionable hotel is a desirable acquaintance. Unless his pedigree can be ascertained be should be made to keep at a distance.

But our young lady friends will say possibly that this rule of action would put an end to that most titillating and delightful pastime of flirting, and so it should. Flirting is as old as Noah's ark and human nature, and where those engaged therein have mutual knowledge of each other and only lack a formal presentation, there may be little to criticize in it. But indulgence in this kind of flirting leads on to the other dangerous species of

THE election of General Boulanger to the Chamber of Deputier, by overwhelming majorities in three departments, is a sur prise. It can not be accepted merely as a token of the personal strength of the man with the people, but indicates a strong feeling against the government in that part of the country. If Boutanger should ever gain control in France the forces that now urge bim forward would at once divide, and radicals imperialists and royalists would leave him so weak in fact that he could only hold his power by the bayonet. It will be a sad day for the republic of these factions, made strong by union, are eve able to outvote the supporters of the exist ing form of government.

He landed close against the side of the tunnel, just clear of the wheels of the passing train. He was picked up and taken to firidgeport, Conn., where he has a house. Most of his time he lives on Lexington avenue, in New York, in a lourstory house but eight feet wide. In this house he keeps his coffin, made from the wood of a favorite apple tree.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Almost a Wreck

It is often the case that a person gets into a run down condition, the cause of which it is almost impossible to determine. From a weak-ened system and impure blood, more and more serious disorders appear, until the constitution breaks down and some definite powerful disease gains a firm hold. When that tired feeling comes on it should be overcome at any cost: Hood's Sarsaparilia should be taken to revive the deciming powers, restore the appetite and vitalize the blood.
