The Daily Intelligencer.

LANCASTER, SEPTEMBER 7, 1888.

Construed Again. A firm of paper makers in Maine, which is said to have the largest factory in the world, advises its workmen that Mr. Blaine is in error in telling the people of Maine that the Mills bill would work injury to all the great industries of the state; since no injury will be wrought by it to paper and wood pulp manufacturing, which are important industries of the state owing to its abundant supply of wood and water power.

Mr. Blaine will soon become tired, one would think, of being contradicted in his statements of facts by people who know all about them. He has distinguished himself in the few weeks that he has been on our shores by most notable failures of statement, and if he does not take better care to get his facts straight he will cease to have any influence upon public opinion. It is particularly bad for him that he does not understand the effect of the working of the proposed Democratic tariff measure upon the industries of his state; and that he is discredited from his assumed stand as the advocate of the interests of its manufacturers.

He had better move back to Pennsylvania, where he can talk with more safety about the damage that the Democrats will do the industries of the state; for although the Mills bill will not injure Pennsylvania interests more than those of Maine, and will hurt iron more than paper making, Blaine would find down here a great number of iron manufacturers who have been wont to shudder every year since they were born over the thought of the reduction of the tariff on anything, and who readily persuade themselves that a few cents a ton less duty on pig iron will cause their ruin; and they would applaud, confirm and swear to all the declarations Blaine could make to this effect; and any intelligent manufacturer of iron who would declare the manifest truth, that iron making can stand a reduced duty, would be pounced upon by the pig-headed pig-makers and declared an ignorant ass. There is a bureau established by these people in Philadelphia and conducted by one Swank, which industriously circulates tariff tracts and prepares tariff ammunition. It has been at work for many years, and the longer it works the weaker grows its cause. It reminds one of a rower who is laboriously urging his skill across a rapid river and who invariably lands below the place he started from. That much resembles Mr. Blaine's progress of late years, and doubtless he would find himself in congenial company among the Pennsylvania iron-masters.

Prices and Wages. The New Era is responsible for the following brilliant philosophy: "Cheap goods always mean cheap wages. Is it better to have cheap than dear merchandise? Is it better to be able to buy a pair of pants fifty cents cheaper than to earn fifty cents a day more in wages? Cheap goods have no interest or meaning for the man who has no money with which to buy them."

A great many curious specimens of logic have appeared in the columns of our contemporary, but the remarks here quoted are so innocent and open in their revelation of intellectual disease that they deserve to be stuffed and preserved. Cheap goods do not always mean cheap wages. It is better to have cheap than dear merchandise. It is better to buy a pair of pants fifty cents cheaper, than to wait for high tariff to increase wages fifty cents a day. Nothing has interest or meaning to a man who has nothing and no hope of getting anything.

The New Era evidently means to assert that if under a reformed tariff manufacturers are enabled to get cheaper raw material, and to make things cheaper, wages will go down. Perhaps it really believes that when the ships that have brought this raw material sail back again with cargoes of American goods, that demand will not stimulate American labor to supply it. We all know that whether wages are high or low depends very much upon the purchasing power of money. On our Western frontier men make high wages, but often their living expenses are much higher in proportion. The Democratic party proposes to decrease taxation and to release to the people the hoarded millions in the treasury. It will open to our manufacturers and farmers the markets of the world now closed by a war tariff. It will guarantee all necessary and just protection, and stop the outrage of a tariff tax for the protection of ingenuous trusts, and we hope that there is a good time coming when we will have cheaper goods, cheaper clothes, cheaper merchandise of all kinds and better wages. Of course, the New Era will not understand this, but that paper is accustomed to its own child-like and bland simplicity.

The Campaign. The canvass is warming up, and the interest in it is unusually great for this early period of the fight. It bids fair to be a hot campaign, the chief animating force to it coming from the Democratic party, which, for the first time in many years, is presenting a presidential candidate for re-election. The fact that his chance of election is so good, adds to rather than detracts from the interest of his party in the canvass. It gives it the animation of assured success, and inspires its men to work with a zeal begot of a sure hope of reward. The disaster of defeat would be so great as not to be contemplated with any patience, and the consequence is that, so far as the Democratic party is concerned, this contest promises to be fought with unusual vigor. The party candidates are of the inspiring kind. The president never speaks but to raise a hurrah, and Judge Thurman comes spontaneous applause whenever his name is mentioned. Fortune smiles upon the party. It has had no backsets. Nothing has gone amiss. The campaign progresses so favorably for it everywhere, and there is a small chance of disaster in the next sixty days.

Thurman in New York. Judge Thurman was received by an immense audience in New York, and it was very regrettable that a sudden seizure of illness prevented his addressing them at length. Still they saw him, and that was compensation for their assembling. Doubtless the judge will take another opportunity to speak to them, for his illness was of a momentary character, and there was nothing in it to prompt the belief that he will be physically unable to do the work which he has laid out for himself in the campaign. He has proposed to make a few speeches at important points where he will command the largest audiences, and he is in physical condition to do the work. No one can be surprised that after being carried, in twenty-four hours, from his home in Columbus to New York, he should have been so shaken up as to be in poor condition to make an hour's speech the succeeding evening. It was more than should have been asked from much younger flesh and bones. A day of swinging about in a rapidly moving train has a very disturbing effect upon the animal economy. The national committee is advised now that its speakers should be hustled around more gently if they are expected to be always ready for service.

On Thursday Mr. Scott concluded his speech in the House upon the fisheries question, after speaking five hours. In this time he made an exhaustive examination into the question of the profit and loss to the United States of the treaty with Canada, showing that the profit had been nearly all on Canada's side and the loss on ours. In eighteen years Canadian railroads had received seventy-two millions of dollars for freight charges that would have gone to American railroads but for the privilege Canada enjoyed of carrying out goods in bond across her border, from one place to another in the United States. He further declared that it was proved by the investigation of Mr. Montgomery, a special agent of the treasury, that three-fourths of the fishermen engaged in the New England fisheries were from the British provinces, and were hired because they were cheaper than Yankee fishermen.

China's emperor is to marry soon. It is reported that his wedding will cost $6,000,000. President Cleveland's marriage did not cost many millions of dollars, but it made him many millions of more friends. He believes that none but a true and worthy man could win so fair a flower of womanhood.

There does not appear to be much chance of an early adjournment of Congress. Chairman Mills says that the committee on ways and means does not contemplate action upon the resolution of Mr. Oates providing for the adjournment of Congress on the 20th inst.; that the committee is not disposed to take any step towards the adjournment of Congress until the Senate has demonstrated its position on the tariff. A great many congressmen have strayed away to look after their fences and no doubt a large number of those remaining would like to have an adjournment before the end of the month, but Mr. Mills is undoubtedly right in insisting that the Senate should declare whether it is disposed to support or abandon the badly shattered high tariff plank of the Republican platform. If the Democrats should seek an adjournment the Republican cry would be that they were trying to prevent the senators from reporting their hearty and wonderful tariff bill. No doubt they will raise that cry at any rate, but they should be given as little excuse as possible. Though the motion to adjourn must come from the House it need not be brought up until the differences over the army bill and the fortifications bill have been adjusted as well as the retaliatory measure now under discussion.

When Levi P. Morton did not answer to his name called by the clerk in the New York court of general sessions recently he was guilty of a wanton disregard of a summons to serve as a juror. The summons had been sent to Mr. Morton's office and his name entered in the list. It was published by a fine of $100 just as though he were an ordinary mortal without a great fortune to draw the money from. The contempt for jury duty so openly displayed by a man who aspires to the high honors of the vice presidency of the United States is not likely to impress thoughtful citizens with his worthiness as a citizen. It shows a lax regard of the interests of justice that are not at all in sympathy with the spirit of our institutions. No doubt Mr. Morton resented that his time was worth a good deal more to him than the $100 fine, and it is hardly probable that he was troubled with the slightest thought of his duty to the state.

DE LESSEY declares that he is confident of completing the Panama canal by 1890. The canal may be fairly regarded as the greatest confidence man in Europe, and it is not unreasonable to expect that he will use all the hope that animates the soul of the New Era to the declaration that up to the present moment all the advantages of the campaign are decidedly on the side of the Republicans.

MINISTER DENBY says that he has no advice that China has refused to agree to the treaty; and the suggestion is that it would be well for Congress to halt to await developments. Doubtless the president will keep control of the situation and see that nothing is done upon the treaty until it is clearly ascertained to be so. We have no desire to provoke the enmity of China or to cause her to be unfriendly to us; all we desire to secure is relief from her immigration; and if this can be secured by treaty everyone will be content.

The New York Herald says that advice was received yesterday by the president of the rejection of the treaty; and that the Chinese minister has been ordered from Peru, where he now is, to Washington to communicate the matter officially.

MR. BLAINE'S argument from the savings bank deposits of Massachusetts to prove the value of high tariff is about as thin a slice of nonsense as has been offered to voters for many a day. He talks wildly about the $275,000,000 on deposit in Massachusetts banks, but has not a word to say of the farmers of the West and South, and the people all over the country who have not a dollar on deposit, but are struggling with mortgages while millions are piled in the collar of the treasury.

It is notorious that this competition is too often strangled by combinations quite prevalent at this time, and frequently called trusts, which have for their object the regulation of the supply and price of commodities made and sold by members of the combination. The people can hardly hope for any consideration in the operation of these selfish schemes. The necessity of combination to maintain the price of any commodity to the tariff point, furnishes proof that some one is willing to accept lower prices for such commodity, and that such prices are remunerative; and lower prices produced by competition prove the same thing. Thus where either of these conditions exists, a case would seem to be presented for an easy reduction of taxation.—Grover Cleveland.

PERSONAL. COLONEL EDWARD G. W. BITLER, the oldest graduate of West Point military academy, is dead at St. Louis, aged 89 years. PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has bought eight head of thoroughbred Ayrshire cattle for the round sum of $1,500, and has presented them to the Government Asylum for the Insane at Washington. REV. GEORGE M. HICKMAN, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Marietta, has received an unanimous call from the First Presbyterian church, Wilmington, Del. Mr. Hickman will go to his new charge about October 1. He has been located in Marietta for over four years and been very successful in his work.

REPRESENTATIVE SCOTT says: "It is my positive determination not to accept the nomination so generously accorded me by my friends of Erie county. I would like to serve them, and to appreciate the honor, but health and private interests demand my undivided attention. I shall see this campaign through and then I must retire from politics and give my attention to my daily increasing business."

JOSEF HOFMANN, who is to return to this country soon, has grown stout and strong since he left but he has had a great deal of outdoor life and his face is a dark brown. He is anxious to return to New York. He is in "the most exciting city in the world." His musical studies have been carried on unremittingly during the last few months, and his technique is said to be even more remarkable than ever.

ALEXANDER DEXAN is one of the few modern authors possessing enough of this world's goods to live handsomely. He has a charming chiel near Dippie, which is called by the name of his own name. He has a splendid home in Paris, which contains marvellous treasures of art. DEXAN is now a vigorous man who bears his sixty-four years well, and with his keen eyes twinkling with wit and malice, his sharp nose and more than robust appearance and erect stature, he gives one an impression that he is either a general on half pay or a retired planter.

COR. GEORGE M. PARKINS, the contractor and treasurer of the Norwich & Worcester railroad, who died near Norwich, Conn., on Wednesday, was vigorous and healthy in mind and body at the age of ninety-nine a year ago, as most men a quarter of a century younger. He went to business daily, walked the streets of his native town, and was as energetic as a young man ambitious to rise in business, instead of an old one whose past opportunities had secured a comparative rest, and, as he had no other work at that time, he felt that while he had health, mentally and physically, he had no right to cut out of his business career which had been to him such a joy and pride. Since 1837 Colonel Parkins was a proprietor of the Norwich & Worcester road, and for almost fifty years he was its treasurer. He owned a street in Providence and more than ninety directors. He added with a chuckle: "I have outlived six family physicians."

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. Almost a Wreck. It is often the case that a person gets into a run down condition, the cause of which it is almost impossible to determine. From a constipated system and impure blood, more and more serious disorders appear, until the constitution breaks down and some definite powerful disease gains a firm hold. When that time comes, it is often too late to do anything but to revive the declining powers, restore the appetite and vitalize the blood.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. I was in a very poor state of health for several months; for four weeks I was unable to work, and nothing seemed to do what I needed. My appetite was poor, I could not sleep, and headache a great deal, pains in the small of the back, my bowels did not move regularly. Why I assumed almost a complete wreck. In this condition I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in a short time it did me so much good that I feel to take a New Man. I can't begin to tell all the good it did me. My pains almost as relieved, my appetite improved. Had I realized how much good a single bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla would do me, I would gladly have paid ten dollars for it. I say to others who need a good medicine, try Hood's Sarsaparilla and see. GROSS F. JACOBI, Roxbury Station, Conn. Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. L.
