The Daily Intelligencer.

LANCASTER, OCTOBER 15, 1888,

Blaine's Hoons Pocus. Mr. Blaine has had the temerity to venme a reply to a speech of Mr. Mills, and the latter had dealt in his usual manmer with substantial facts and convincing figures, the plumed knight did not prodace a very brilliant specimen of oratory. Hetried to argue that the reduction of turiff by the Mills bill was in fact over 9 renty-four per cent., reaching this con-D'usion by the very simple process of ruling several of the largest items out of the lem. Silks and liquors, which are at touched by the Mills bill, made a arge sum of customs revenues in the pust year, and adding to this for some anknown reason, the duty collected on sigar, he takes the total from the sum of the revenues collected, and shows that She reduction of the remainder by the Mills bill would have been twenty-four per cent. This he calls the average re-duction by the bill, and calmly asks what Mr. Mills meant by saying that it was only five per cent. He wants to know whether that gentleman will tell the wool growers and salt and lumber men that their reduction is only five per cent. The real wonder is whether Mr. Blaine will not carry out his peculiar system of maching averages by ruling some other things out of the problem until he is abla to declare the average reduction 100 per cent. This talk about wool and salt, and lumber, displays his rhetorical jugglery and the wonder is that so experienced a speaker as Mr. Blaine should display so low an estimate of the intelligence of his hearers. They knew, and he knew that they knew, what was meant by "a five per cent. average reduction, yet he tried to make them believe that important articles not reduced, silks and liquors, should, with the average of the whole. There is nothing secret about this measure, and the lumbermen and wool and salt men have as good an opportunity as any one of seeing just what the reduction is on each article of the list, and figuring out the campaign document. It is the boast of the party that while reducing taxation upon raw materials of manufacture and necessaries of life, it has left liquors and silks unreduced, and in spite of the taunt of sectionalism, proposes to reduce the tax on sugar. It is our boast that on woolen goods the reduction of the Mills bill is nearly 30 per cent., while wood, salt, lumber and other things are free; and the best indication of the desperate state of the Republicans is that they are obliged to make their greatest efforts among the wool, salt and lumber men of Michigan, whose prosperity they hold is menaced.

are not afraid of the verdict and have distributed the bill far and wide as a Business and Religion.

In the annual report of the Moravian board of missions there occurs the following comment on the difficulty of combining religion and business. "In Greenland all trade lies in the hands of the Danish government; in Labrador we carry it on ourselves, and trade and misslon work go hand in hand. In theory, this appears to be the true ideal; and yet in actual experience the difficulties in this field are far greater than in Greenland. Last year again our mission has suffered from its connection with trade. The trading necessitates strict rules, particularly in respect to careless making of debts. But for the missionary as such to enforce these rules, in the eyes of the Esquimaux, seems to be incompatible with Christian love and mercy." This appears to afford a curious example of the difficulties that are found by laymen in the ways of the ideal theories of life and conduct so easily taught from the pulpit. These good men frankly admit the difficulty of practically applying the principles they teach, but they doubt owe their success in mission field to the very net that they have been obliged to mingle business and preaching. They were forced to demonstrate the possi bility of practical application of the religion that they taught. If many of the enthusiastic young men who yearly enter theological seminaries with grand and noble ideas about the regeneration of humanity would keep away from those halls of learning for a while and pitch into the active tug and struggle of life with their fellow men, they would gain experience in a few months that would be worth more than volumes of Hebrew and theology. They would learn, with Moravian missionaries, the diffioulty that appears to interfere with the ication of beautiful theories and they would be able to talk more to the point when they reached the pulpit. The education and training of the clergy of all creeds appears to be strangely at variance with that of the great twelve who followed the archetype of Christian priesthood. They were men familiar from personal experience with the very difficulty found by the Moravian missionarles. The selfish inflexible man of business found among them men as keen and ctical, though just and merciful. They had all measured their strength in the work of life and the struggle for a living or same and fortune. They knew just where to draw the line between kindness and weakness, justice and mercy, gentleness and feebleness, and the drawing of that line is the best test of wisdom and charsoter. Religion to-day needs practical linetration more than preaching, for many an honest citizen is like the poor isquimaux, unable to make a sensible application of the lofty principles so sily laid down by a preacher with his head in the clouds.

What the Secretary Says.

When Secretary Fairchild talks about ncial affairs be goes right to the busicentre of New York and meets the ss men face to face with honest ests and straightforward argument. In als speech on Saturday he completely ansered all his critics, and, by the way, ook occasion to answer the charge that word. He in common with the rest the country had not heard of Democratic chairman in connection th any bank until Mr. Blaine so regred to him. He then asked Colonel cless bout it and learned that he owned a ity of the stock of a bank in Ohio, that the bank never had a government "He also had some stock in Chase National bank of New York, of which, if politics are to be considered, it is proper to say that Mr. Cannon, the last Republican controller of the currency, is president, and that a majority of the directors are Republicans. I did find that his bank did have a deposit of $1,100,-000, which it has repaid to the government recently, not finding's profit of $50,-000 a year, as Mr. Blaine states, nor probably any profit in the business, else it would not have chosen to discontinue it. Mr. Fairchild very easily showed the evident fallacy of Mr. Blaine's statement of the profits on government deposits. Instead of making $50,000 on a deposit of a million, as Mr. Blaine said, he showed that the banks made but $5,650 ty putting that much of the idle surplus where it could be used in busi-

There has been nothing more sublime in the whole campaign than this complete annihilation of Mr. Blaine's pompous argument by the cold and indisputable facts and the irresitible logic of the secretary of the treasury. His dealing with General Harrison's sounding alliteration and false argument is of the same thorough character and his speech makes one of the most valuable of Democratic essays on the issues of the cam-

BLAINE is predicting a revolution in Indians. He tells are porter that Harrison's majority will not fall below 15,000. It will be remembered that he called the result of the recent Maine election a revolution. In his Western speeches this Maine revolution, was not a favored topic and he failed to tell his audiences that the Democrate had made large gains in the Pine Tree state.

REV. HUMH O. PENTECOST is drifting far away from the Christian religion, which he formerly preached. At the Athenaum, in Brooklyn, on Sunday, he said : "I do not say there is no God, but I do say that I am entirely ignorant on the subject of God. 1 am an agnostic in the spiritual world and do not still rm or deny the existence of a God. I will willingly give this platform to anyone who will come here and prove that there is a personal God, that prayers are efficacious or that miracles are real. And 1 they can prove it, beyond the question of a doubt, I will take back all I have said and become as much of an enthusiast as anyone." Perhaps Mr. Pentecost would like to prove something else beyond the shadow of a doubt. For example, when was he born and where? No doubt he wes there, but having no personal recollections of the event he must rely upon the testimony of others, and it cannot be proved beyond the question of a doubt that he is the Rev. Hugh O. Pentecest. There are numerous cases on record of mistaken identity. The law of gravitation is open to grave doubts and is doubted by able theorists, but for all practical purposes it is quite satisfactory, and those who accept it on faith are most firmly convinced of its truth. It fits in well with all the phenomena of nature and the conclusions of science.
