The Doctors Quarrel.

The perils of greatness are again exemplified in the case of the dead Emperor Frederick, the noble. That he was killed by his doctors may be reasonably assumed and in truth is proved by their own declarations; whether Mackenzie did it, as the Germans say, or they did it, as he says, it remains upon their own evidence that he was his victim. And probably they all had a hand in it. The chief responsibility rests upon Mackenzie, as the emperor died in his hands and after he had given the world reason to believe that he could save him. Mackenzie's needed defense, but the volume which he has printed is as ineffective as his conduct of his patient's case. He made a bad job of both. His volume is made up on the principle that the best defense is attack; and he wades into the German doctors furiously, taking special delight in showing that they know nothing of laryngology. That is where he is strong. It is his specialty, and he seems to think that it is about the whole of medicine and surgery. It is the art of examining and treating the throat, down which the operator looks by the aid of a mirror and on which he operates with a forceps. The trouble being with Frederick's throat, Mackenzie, who enjoyed the first reputation as a throat treater, was sent for; and then he and the Germans discussed whether it was cancer, and he took a piece out, and it was found not to be. And the Germans say he took a healthy piece from a wrong spot. It was a year or more before it was agreed to be cancer, and during this time many doctors had looked down the poor patient's throat innumerable times, and it had been so abused among hands that it would be almost a wonder if cancer had not been brought on; as Mackenzie says it was, by the bungling German's treatment, and as other people may think, perhaps by his own.

And what an exhibition it has all been of the misfortune of greatness! For if Frederick had not been a prince, a country doctor would have told him that he had or had not cancer and would have killed or cured him off hand, without subjecting him to torture from a regiment of doctors. The case reminds one of Garfield's, where a great lot of competent and incompetent doctors got mixed up, with the bad ones generally on deck, and a net result of death and tremendous bills. We have the same in the emperor's case, with the addition of a doctors' quarrel of the first class, accompanied by the freest exposure of confidential consultations and an exhibition of a lack of magnanimity and self-restraint, which is not creditable to the profession.

The New York Situation.

The New York Herald, which strongly advocates the election of Cleveland, comments editorially upon an expression of opinion from a correspondent, traveling through New York to note the political tide, who writes that the Republican party will come down to New York with 70,000 majority. The Herald notes that the battle of the parties is to be fought out in New York city; which is not at all a new discovery, upon the prevalent theory that New York will decide the presidential contest. The city is always potent to decide the state; the one being Democratic and the other Republican. New York is much more strongly Republican than Pennsylvania; and the one is a Democratic and the other a Republican state because the chief cities are so. There is nothing new we say in this situation; but when a newspaper, urging the Democratic cause, finds that a seventy thousand Republican state majority is to be overcome in New York and Brooklyn, there is plenty of interest in its suggestion that the Democratic party cannot afford any monkey work in those cities. The whole country is interested and has a right to speak in protest against the disturbance in the Democratic party in New York over its local nominations. It takes no stock in the assurance given the national Democracy that the local fight will not take anything from the presidential vote. And there is good ground for its fear. If Quay and his select band of accomplished political sneak thieves cannot utilize the situation in New York city to reduce Cleveland's majority, they will prove very unworthy of their reputation; which is not to be expected. It is certain that they will not be deterred by scruples or poverty from improving the opportunity offered them by the Democratic fight. They have nominated a majority candidate for trading purposes only.

There is abundant opportunity in New York for the exhibition of Democratic leadership and unselfish patriotism. If Mayor Hewitt believes that his candidacy endangers the national ticket he should undoubtedly withdraw. His opponent expresses his readiness to do so, but the mayor seems to have no such belief that one who has been so distinguished in Democratic councils, and who is so sincere a Democrat, will deliberately do his party harm. Mayor Hewitt only needs to be convinced that his candidacy endangers the party success, to be persuaded to withdraw; and surely there ought to be no trouble in conveying a true idea of the situation to so intelligent a man. Probably the Herald itself will be a sufficient missionary.

A Lancaster Library.

The cornerstone of another great library was laid in Philadelphia on Monday. Philadelphia has one great library bearing the city's name, founded by Franklin and occupying buildings on Locust near Broad street, and far out South Broad. The latter branch, though having one of the finest buildings in the city, is but little known because of its location. The Mercantile library, nearer to the business centre, is more of a mercantile enterprise for the circulation of all sorts of fiction, and hardly reaches the dignity of an institution of learning. The University library just founded starts with a good supply of valuable and solid literature, both classical and scientific, and it has long been practically useless because of the need of a librarian and building. Meanwhile Lancaster gets along after a fashion, with a few small libraries known to a comparatively small number of the people, and the college has a fair nucleus for a good collection which has only just been rescued from oblivion and cleared of the dust of ages by the volunteer labor of Professor John B. Kieffer. If some benevolent millionaire happens to be charmed with the idea of giving a library to Lancaster, the city will be duly gratified and proud, but there seems to be small hope that our people will make any effort to help themselves in the matter. The cheapness of books and the immense amount of reading that may be bought in the shape of a Sunday paper help to explain the prevailing apathy on the library question. Many reading people have organized book clubs, which give them the best of new books and the pick of the magazines at low cost. Under these circumstances it is hardly surprising that no effort has been made to found a public library, but the shifts so made are poor substitutes for such an institution. The work would not be half so expensive or difficult as it appears on its face, for with proper inducements the small libraries existing might be secured for the new one. A building might easily be planned to offer good society rooms to organizations having books, and so they could be drawn together under one roof, while the city and the college, in return for the free use of books by students, might be counted on for some help. Of course, nothing very luxurious or perfect could be expected, and in a central part of town, to accommodate the societies and get plenty of light, it might be necessary to put the books up near the roof and depend on an elevator.

The German forces on the coast of Lancaster will hardly suffer from desertion. A dispatch says: Three sailors who deserted from a German gunboat, taking with them a quantity of ammunition, and who remained about the country killing natives, have themselves been killed and eaten.

DISPATCHES from abroad will now be delivered with the proceedings of the French Chambers just convened, and already handling that ticklish subject, the revision of the constitution. It would appear that Frenchmen of all parties are determined upon revision, but a large number of factions favor revision of as many different sorts. They all about "Forward!" but nobody knows where to. In spite of his duel, Boulanger is as prominent as ever, but it is prominence due largely to the peculiar circumstances that give him the temporary support of the enemies of the republic.

A STATE OF SHAKESPEARE was unveiled in Paris on Sunday. It is a bronze figure of the poet with his mantle thrown across his arm and is supported on a square pedestal of granite. And this in spite of Ignatius Donnelly and his cypher.

The Philadelphia Record noted in the New York Tribune a most imposing special telegram from Pittsburgh which recounted how William Gardner, of that city, had returned from England with appalling accounts of the anxiety prevailing there for the progress of the trial in a murder case. This Mr. Gardner further observed that Mr. Dutton, the English pottery manufacturer, had contributed £500 sterling through the Commercial Exchange and the Golden Club for aid in the election of Grover Cleveland. The Record selected this long and full from the liberal press that may be found in the partisan press and published a letter from Dutton & Co., the only English potterers of that name, who deny all knowledge of Gardner and add "we beg to state most emphatically that there is not a single particle of truth in the statement, nor in the others about the Mills bill and free trade."

PERSONAL.

PROFESSOR FREDERICK A. POCHNER, for 30 years a professor of English and modern languages in Charleston college, Charleston, S. C., died on Monday. He was a contributor to the literary journals of the country.

PROFESSOR KENNEDY, a dispatch from Paris states, is to succeed the late Father Schuyler as the chief propagandist of the papal cause in the United States. The professor has not marked success in conducting his school of commercial instruction with Voltaire as his text book.

JOHN M. CORNELL, of the iron manufacturing firm of J. B. and J. M. Cornell, New York city, has declared in favor of Cleveland, and has been elected a Republican, but says that the interests of his employees and of his firm compel him to support the reform administration of Cleveland.

BISHOP KEANE, who returns from the Roman Catholic See of Richmond, Va. to devote his time and efforts to the new Catholic University of America, at Washington, preached his first sermon at the Richmond cathedral on Sunday. Dr. Keane does not retire absolutely from the episcopacy, as he has been appointed to the titular See of Agassus, near Ephesus, in Asia Minor.

KYLE BELLEVUE, the actor who appeared in Lancaster with Mrs. James Brown Pottery, secured a writ of habeas corpus and treatment from the Tax Court of the United States. The governing committee notified a member who introduced a bill for the relief of Kyle Bellevue, that they did not consider it a fit case for their members of the club. They would see to it that such a character as Mr. Kyle Bellevue, or Mr. Lawrence Barrett, or Mr. Booth, or Mr. C. U. Quinn, or any other of like reputation, but they would refuse to aid Mr. Bellevue in any way, and to any other man of any profession of similar character.

The Justice Extension Act Constitution. Judge Sawyer has announced his decision in the United States circuit court of California in two cases under the Chinese exclusion act. The court holds that the act is constitutional, and that it provisions apply to Chinese Governing, and also to those still in China. It is estimated that this decision will affect about 33,000 Chinese who are over 30,000 return certificates still outstanding, and it is believed there are now about 30,000 Chinese men in the country who have lived here before the restriction act was passed, and who, before the passage of the exclusion act, would have been entitled to re-enter this country under the claim of being "prior residents."

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

Wanamaker's Philadelphia, Tuesday, Oct. 16, 1888.

The cheapest Side Band Dress Stuff in the market is here—75 cents.

There's no danger that the Side Bands will become common. In some of the colors but one piece. No one else has them. No more for us. Think of it; handsome, exclusive, fashionable, seasonable stuffs at 75c!

Fresh styles among the Ulsterings almost every day. One of the latest is in dark shades with indistinct small plaids. An overall effect comes from the speckly glint of white and colored silk threads. Proper Fall weight, strong, handsome, 54 in., and $2.50.

Beavers, Astrakhans, Seal Cloths, and the seasonable stuffs in bewildering array. You can tell by the crowd where the $2 Broadcloth at $1.50 is.

We have had a lot of Men's English House Coats wet through on the voyage over. They've been dried out, and will be put on sale this morning. The price was to have been $6, $6.75, $7.50, and $8. They shall go at $2.50. No trouble with them, except some are a little stiff, and some a trifle discolored. But think of the price, $2.50!

We put with them some Men's Stockinette jackets in mixtures, brown, black, wine, gray, at $2 each.

The two items are the most attractive offer of the kind we ever made. On sale this morning: 2,592 pairs of Women's Real Kid Pique Gloves, 4 buttons, handsomely embroidered, 75 cents. You would pay us double without a murmur, but we sell as we buy, and this was a happy purchase.

With all the new space for Upholstery no let up in the crowd of stuffs. We never had anything like such a gathering of yard goods, high grade and low grade.

Take Tapestries. Here's a line beginning at $1, next grade $1.35. The simplest of the lot has a silky look. Not a scrap of silk about it. Cotton. Cotton from the hands of cunning weavers and dyemen of France.

The rule in goods of this sort has been rough, harsh colors, happy-go-lucky work. We've brought a change. Finest colorings, designs in the best of taste, and stuffs at low prices.

These low priced Tapestries are 50 inches wide. The $1.50 sort has brocade figures. The $1.85 really has some silk in it. Look close and you can tell which is which—cotton and silk.

Other Tapestries up to finest silk at $15 and $20 a yard. All these things are where you can look them over. That's the only way to fully sense their beauties.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

It is true economy to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla, for "100 Doses One Dollar," is original, with and true only of this popular medicine. It now is a household name. Hood's Sarsaparilla and remains its constant. You will find it to hold 100 teaspoonfuls. Now read the directions, and you will find that the average dose for persons of different ages is less than a teaspoonful. "I began using Hood's Sarsaparilla in our institution some months ago, and having watched its effects, wish to say that we find it a good, reliable, and beneficial medicine for family use, and for hospitals and institutions such as ours." SYRUS OF MARY, West Fourth St., Cincinnati, O.

"I look Hood's Sarsaparilla for loss of appetite, dyspepsia and general languor. It did me a vast amount of good, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it." J. W. WILSON, Quincy, Ill.

HEALTH BETTER THAN EVER "I have been troubled by a sad and distressing ailment all my life. It is one of the insidious recollections of my boyhood days, and for several years has rendered me unable to labor much. I thank Hood's Sarsaparilla for what I have been using at intervals for ten years. It is the best thing I have ever taken. I am now 65, and my general health seems better than ever." H. A. BROWN, Waton, N. H.
